Thoughts by the Moonlit Sea.

Softly to the sandy shore,
With solemn roll and slow,
In tiny swells of silver foam,
The waves of ocean flow;
No hoarse and savage roar is heard—
To-night its voice becomes
A giant calming o'er his colossus
In a sleep of tearful dreams.

There is no life nor motion
In yonder vessel's shrouds,
And not a breath of wind to ech
The restless [illegible]
[illegible]
With passions struggling in their bosoms
That seldom ever sleep?

How many pure, heroic hearts,
How many loves fair,
How many fondly cherished hopes
Are lost forever there?
Unnumbered millions o'er that bay
Have gone, and yet will go—
Each bosom with its heaving tide
Of bliss, despair, or woe!

The stained, the friendless, and forlorn
Have madly rushed to thee,
Confiding all their bitter griefs
To thy rough breast, O Sea!
The precious gems of distant lands,
The spices of the East,
The stately ships have made for thee
A rich and goodly feast.

Thou hast embraced the winsome bride
And gloried to behold
The shivering cheek grow deadly pale
Which felt thy kisses cold;
Dark burial place of treasures,
The loved, alas! and gone—
'Tis meet these should be sad airs
In the music of thy tone.

The woodlands gently whisper
A hushed and holy psalm,
That falls upon the wearied one
Like sweet and soothing balm;
The morn will gild the mountain top,
The sun will light the bay—
Would that our troubled souls might shine
In a mystery solving ray.

ONLY A PRINTER.

AN INCIDENT RELATED BY GOV. FLOYD AT THE "WHITE HOUSE."

Had I a tale to recount of the olden times laying the scene thereof in England, France, Spain, or any of the old countries to us associated with so much romance and gorgeous grandeur, in which there would be a plentiful sprinkling of lords and ladies, and priests and nuns, magnificent palaces haunted castles, and gloomy monasteries, it would be far more acceptable to the great masses, than if the scene was laid here in this land of plodding Yankees, railroads, manufactories, and cotton speculations.—Nevertheless, I will endeavour to spin a yarn, but facts are vanquished truths.

I had the pleasure of spending a few days recently, continued Gov. F. with a distinguished friend of mine in Richmond, and while there I heard the following conversation between the wife and the daughter of my host:

La me what impertinence! exclaimed Lizzy K., as she scanned a beautiful colored note handed her by her servant.

What occasions your surprise, my dear? enquired the mother.

Rather say indignation, mother, at being asked and even urged to take tea this evening at Mrs. Downer's the tanner's wife.

And why should you not my dear Lizzie?

Think you it would be proper, mother the daughter of Judge K., one of the wealthiest and most distinguished men of the city to associate with such low bred mechanics?

Indeed my daughter, if they are mechanics, they are people well to do in the world respectable, pious, agreeable, and every way worthy your acquaintance.

Really, mother, continued the young lady, as she tossed her pretty head, I'm disposed to think differently; so far from encouraging I prefer being always removed as far as possible from the laboring classes. Besides how is it to be expected that I should enjoy myself in conversation with such people, whose only talk would be about the stocks, the market, and their own private concerns. Quite an intellectual treat.

Oh fie, Lizzie! but I'm to blame for this. I've shown you too much indulgence you are spoilt, so I must even now set about repairing my garden, and pluck out the weeds and tares ere it be too late.

Come, sit down beside me Lizzie, and I will give you your first lesson of worldly wisdom, from my great store of worldly experience, by relating to you a story, which I trust will lower your pride, and make you a better woman. A woman with no pride my daughter, is but an easy dreaming creature, but one with too much, is haughty, niggardly and selfish; both the extremes are contemptible and mean. But, then, neither too fashionably dressed, nor too worldly, a mere butterfly in the world of fashion and pleasure, making but small pretensions to religion, is a character bad enough, but worse to my thinking is the fiery zealot, on the other hand, who has too many rigid virtues, who is constantly reviling against the world, displeased at anything like social and rational enjoyment, and pinioned at the least merriment, dancing, playing or any amusement that the heart in its fulness and gladness prompts the young and sprightly to indulge. So then avoid extremes of every description.

But to my story.

Sixteen years ago, Salem in Virginia, was one of the most lively villages imaginable; situated in the heart of the great valley of Virginia, yet commanding a magnificent view of the bold outlines of the Alleganies and Blue Ridge. The village contained no buildings of note, save two, one of them, a magnificent tenement, the princely residence of one of the old Virginia aristocracy; the other, the only inn, a small quaint, yet pleasant house, nestled in the centre of the town. The proprietor of the one was a wealthy planter and a distinguished officer of state; the other a poor widow whose only living depended on the profits of her table, which were but steady as there were but little travelling done at that retired village. And the advent of a stranger was always a subject of curiosity and interest to the good townsfolk, as it was always so, in in the secluded villages and inns, in the out-of-the-way places in America.

To this inn, a gaily dressed, yet weary worn traveller picked his way one evening in the autumn of 18—. The buxom hostess and her tidy daughter were all life, and fricked about bestirring the savory viands, and delicious cakes and eggs, much to the satisfaction of the young man of 20 summers, but commanding, of fine appearance and pleasing manners. He soon, by dint of frankness and suavity of manner insinuated himself into the good graces of the hostess and daughter, with the latter of whom he appeared to be struck, for she was as lovely as she was neat and graceful.

Possessing charms not unlike and almost equal to one whom I adore, exclaimed the young traveller admiringly as he placed himself before the sparkling fire after finishing his repast, and expect ere long to lead to the altar, and with whom you are doubtless acquainted, as she lives only in the mansion above the village, I understand.

What! Emma White? said the hostess.

Even so my good dame, I met her at the Springs some months ago, became enamored of her, wooed, won, and I am now come to claim my bride.

She is a beautiful creature, indeed! interposed Augusta, the hostess' daughter, but somewhat proud as is her father.

Not so, indeed, gentle Agusta, if she has pride, it is nothing but nature, maidenly pride, which every lass should have. And you my Miss Agusta, she is quite well—well I will let this pleasing intelligence restrain me to-night, and to-morrow I will give the fair enchantress, I trust, an agreeable surprise.

As early next morning as etiquette would permit, the young man set out with buoyant heart and high hopes to the mansion.

But we will precede him and look in on his fair betrothed.

In a magnificent parlor of the mansion sat Emma and her mother, the one thumping on a piano and the other interrogating a servant.

And you say, Sambo, he lodged last night at the inn?

Yes, Miss, de cook say he dar now.

Well, you can retire—and so, ma, it is even as I expected. I thought it was him as he rode past last evening.

Well, Emma, how do you intend to bluff him off? I'm thinking it will be a shameful and delicate business.

Shameful indeed! When Attorney Logan introduced him to me at the Springs, he brought him forward as one of the law students, and not as a poor printer as he is. I'll never forgive Mr. Logan.

He is not to blame my dear, he is his pupil. Didn't the latter say he was a journeyman printer at A———, but in consideration of his promising abilities, Mr. Logan undertook gratuitously to bring him to the bar.

Well, for that I'll never marry a printer. I did have a tender regard for him once, and when I gave him my hand I deemed him somebody, so I acted from the promptings of the heart, but now I'll be ruled by my better judgment.

Well, please yourself in this matter my dear; I am disposed to think honorably of ———— but la me! if he isn't at the door just now.

Scarcely had she done speaking when our hero entered, and with a heart overflowing with love and gratitude sprang forward to greet the object of his idolatry, but imagine his surprise and dismay when he received only in return a cold distant courtesy which froze his blood and rooted him to the spot. Bewildered and astonished at such a greeting from his betrothed, he turned for explanation to the mother who perceiving the general embarrassment stepped forward and offering him a seat, complained to him that since the daughter's return from the Springs she had after mature reflection and examining her heart thought it best to dissolve the engagement between them.

The ruddy cheek of the suitor became of an ashy paleness, and his blood-shot eyes quivered like an aspen leaf as he faltering exclaimed, and wherein is my offence I have I merited this? Good Heaven! and is this the gentle, the confiding Emma White?

Sir, this is not the stage of a theatre to enact scenes, now spoke the daughter, let it suffice to know that we are henceforth to be strangers to each other. You attempted to deceive me, and pass yourself off for a gentleman, when it turns out you are of the working class, only a printer, particularly journeyman, a fortune seeker. If you had an honorable profession, sir, and was of good family, as I once fondly thought, we could be united, but as it is, I cannot and will not descend so low, and as the young lady thus spoke, she tossed her head, and with a look of inexpressible scorn and contempt, she proudly swept out of the room.

Overwhelmed with dismay and stung to the quick, the young man sat paralyzed many moments, but recovering somewhat from the shock, rose and staggered out of the room.

Alas! how crushed were his hopes! Deceived, slighted, wronged, confidence betrayed, laughed at and treated with scorn and contempt by one whom he loved too well; and all for being a low, base mechanic, a Printer! And rushing madly to the inn, he sought his room and threw himself despairing upon his humble cot, from which he did not rise for two long weary months; for unwonted excitement, and disappointment of the morning had brought on a burning fever. From noon till night, and night till morning, the patient raved, calling and conjuring his Emma to come back to him, and with his impatience and querulousness, wearied all about him save one. The physician despaired in restoring him, and re-signed him to the care of the gentle Agusta, who watched at his bedside night and day, with unremitting solicitude, bore with his imbecility, administered to his wants with kindness, and soothed his irritated spirits by the gentlest word and treatment.

Finally, after the lapse of several weeks he slowly began to recover, and reason returned once more. When having entirely recovered, he thanked the kind hostess and daughter with tearful eyes and heart overflowing with gratitude for their kindness in watching over him in his weakness and infirmities. He called Agusta his preserver, his guardian angle and told her he owed to her his life, and that he would ever hold her in grateful remembrance, and though he was then about to depart she would not see her again for years, yet when fortune smiled upon him again, she should hear from him. Then he bid her a sorrowful farewell, and departed.

Years passed, and still the unfortunate stranger was unheard of, and almost forgotten by the gossip of Salem, and even by the one who caused his misfortunes, Emma White herself; yet there was one in the little village who still gave Mr. ——— place in her heart. It was the hostess' daughter.

* * * * *

Five years from the events just related, Richmond was crowded to overflowing, for the legislature was in session, and had brought its usual retinue of strangers, office and pleasure seekers. It was by far the gayest session that had been seen for many years, for balls, parties, soirees and picnics, following each other with unabated zest.

Gorgeous lights streamed from a course of windows of one of Pearl street's stateliest mansions and sounds of music and revelry are heard within. Luscious and sylph like forms skip over the rich carpeted floor, and grave gentlemen sit comfortably in the back-ground talking politics, gossiping and admiring the light hearted, and lovely and happy beings around them. We will draw near one of these companies, that one near the chandelier, consisting of two gentlemen and a young lady, and listen—and as we remain incog., it matters little if we are caught eavesdropping.

It is just as you say, Colonel White, the legislature has done but little as yet, still I think they have redeemed themselves somewhat by one judicious act, in appointing our young friend K——— to the fifth judicial judgeship.

A very proper appointment, sir, very; but ponder he is now—see, the servant is just ushering him into the room.

Let me, pa, exclaimed the young lady admiringly, how interesting he looks, and so young too, to be appointed a judge.

He is a clever young man, Emma, and able too, or he would not have been honored with the responsible office conferred upon him.

Now I should like to become acquainted with him; Pa, pray introduce him.

Most assuredly I will do so, for here he comes now.

A pleasant evening to you gentlemen, Colonel White, pray how do you do?

Quite well I thank you, how do you do Judge, permit me to present you to my daughter, Judge K———, Miss White.

And with low deferential courtesy the lady greeted the gentleman and seated him beside her. With many an art and wile did she attempt to amuse, please and insinuate herself into the good graces of the promising young judge. But her efforts were in vain, her arrows were aimed against a heart of steel, and the countenance of the judge, the while, wore a contemptuous and pouring expression that baffled all her arts and penetration.

Heavens! what a face, how lovely, how angelic! But methinks I should know that countenance! exclaimed the judge as he caught the beautiful black eyes of a lady in a distant corner of the room riveted upon him.

Who? the young lady in the black velvet mantilla? ha! ha, that's my portage, she is an orphan, her parent was a Major de Hotel in Salem, Virginia, so being left alone, I took her under my charge, and right useful I find her; she answers both for a companion and maid, I would not have brought her here, but she seems so sad and melancholy, that my father would make me bring her thinking it might somewhat revive her drooping spirits.

It is, it is the very [illegible] Augusta. How fortunate! Pray Miss White excuse me—but I know you will when I inform you that I am only a printer—the poor mechanic you scorned, jilted and laughed at years ago in the little village of Salem, and rising unceremoniously, the Judge hastily crossed the room, leaving the haughty girl covered with confusion and shame to weep over her folly.

It was the modest Augusta, and with beating heart, eyes sparkling with joy, and countenance suffused with blushes the fair girl welcomed the happy young man.

Much as Miss White suffered by the gnawing of conscience, such as she grieved and sorrowed over her past conduct, her sore disappointment came in a few weeks after, when the admired Judge K——— led the happy and envied Augusta to the altar, she could not but acknowledge that her punishment was just, that it was merited.

Judge K——— and his lady have lived happily, prosperously together ever since, but Emma White, unhappy girl, is still a spinster—an old maid.

See, now, Lizzie, my story is ended, all but the denouement.

Denouement?

Yes you must know. Your dear father is the hero, and I the heroine; he is the low born, base mechanic, the poor printer, and I the hostess' daughter.

Pardon, pardon, mother! and as the fair girl threw herself into her mother's arms, she vowed never to be so proud and selfish again.

And you will go to Mrs. Downer's this evening?

Oh that I will mother, with pleasure.

The company began loudly to applaud Gov. G. as he concluded his reminiscence, when he bid them cease, that he had finished all but the denouement.

What is it? what is it? rang round the circle.

Why nothing more or less than the hero of my story has just entered this room, replied the Governor, as he pointed to his distinguished and astonished friend amid the plaudits of the assembly.

ITALY AND SALZBURG.

Shall the Salzburg conference, with its bills and receipts, appear in history the pivot of a new era of the clock of gold? Hereafter, whatever all interested in the progress of divine work of this conference; and were it not that the year 1867 has been beyond all expectation and precedent fruitful in royal visits, the meeting of the Emperors in the quiet German town would have created still greater surprise, and [illegible] to visit [illegible] a place [illegible] to the history of the imperial confabulations, and it is strange that so little notice should have been taken of it otherwise in connection with the meeting. Yet one should suppose that neither France nor Austria could well afford to leave Italy out of account in discussing the affairs of Europe. It would be well for Italy if she were left out of account—left, that is to say, to enjoy in quiet her recently acquired royalty and almost complete unity, and in the process of a long peace, to develope her resources and establish her government on a firm basis. But if Italy was not in the mouths of the great few who met at Salzburg, it may be safely assumed and asserted that her own good was not the cause. To say the truth, Italy must have been a hard word to pronounce by Napoleon to Francis Joseph, and by Francis Joseph to Napoleon. More, even than the lamentable death—murder, if Lord Derby will have it so—of Maximilian, does Italy make the report of the peaceful salutations, and joyful embracings, and complete understandings of Salzburg, sound strange on the ears of the uninitiated world outside. For more than one or two centuries, the rivalry between the houses of France and Austria has been living and working—now smouldering from want of sufficient material to keep the flame strong and bright, now bursting forth with all the fury of a volcano. And a feeling which in the growth of centuries cannot be moved in a day. For reasons of policy, the Emperors may put a strong right foot on it, and crush it to the dust for a time; but the vast majority of their peoples, having no access to the secret chambers, and little [illegible] of the true [illegible] of policy, will keep their feeling in this old place. The Kaiser is, doubtless, to say the least, in a very uncomfortable position at present; and Napoleon III. has been mainly instrumental in placing him where he is. He cannot forget that, nor train his people to forget it. Austrian soldiers are not cowards.—They have as strong a desire for the "glory" of success as French soldiers. They have a past history fully as glorious as anything in the annals of French triumphs; and their fatherland has been won entirely against the soldiers of France. For centuries, Italy was the field where they tried their skill; and for centuries Austria had the best of it in Italy. With a few brief exceptions, the house of Austria kept Italy from France, and France from Italy, from the time of the foolish invasion by Charles VIII. of France, towards the close of the fifteenth century, till the time of the first Napoleon. It is well known what the third Napoleon has done in Italy, both for France and Austria. So that perhaps if the Emperors really wished to understand each other on German matters, silence regarding Italy was the wisest and most agreeable policy; yet it was by no means likely that the policy of silence was followed. Italy cannot be any longer ignored in the councils of European sovereigns; and if she could but raise to the place which she is entitled to fill, as one of the nations of Europe—if she had proper men to raise her, and to guide her, she might find a part to play alike useful and honourable. It is not unlikely that Napoleon might expect to gain or coerce Italy through Bismarck; but the expectation is that the Italians would not consent to fight against the nation which enabled them to drive the Austrians from Italy, but would, in the event of another German war, be found again on the side of Prussia. In that case Austria and France may consider themselves somewhat more than a match for Prussia and Italy. And, in some respects, they would be as well pleased to have the latter country on the enemy's side as on their own. It would require no very large number of troops, and no great display of vigour or skill, or paralysis every effort that Italy might make in support of her northern ally; and a Prussian victory in Germany might be somewhat compensated by Austro-French success beyond the Alps. The armies of France and Austria could form a conjunction without much trouble or loss of time; those of Prussia and Italy must fight apart. And Italy cannot forget that Savoy and Nice are French possessions, occupied by French troops. France holds the key of Italy on the west, and in a few hours could transport into Italian territory an army large enough to occupy Turin, and to give employment to more than half of the Italian troops. The means of communication between Italy and France are becoming easier and readier. But a few days have passed since the report reached us that the railway across Mont Cenis has been completed, and is to be open to the public in October next. The tunnel through the same mountain will be finished at no very distant date. And, particularly, France could command these routes, and by a comparatively small number of men, paralyse every effort of the Italian generals to help Prussia by crossing the Alps. Then, Austria, besides that —of his throne. Instead of going to Rome, it might be a question whether Pius rese could be held

Italy has much to entitle her to take a first place among the nations of Europe, and will doubtless yet occupy such a place. But she needs time, and she needs peace. The present generation of Italians are not called to enjoy either right, or to enjoy the liberty they have acquired. And those [illegible] the hope that the country will be built in peace till a new generation has grown up to do better things for their well-loved land. Should war break out, the situation of Italy would be indeed perilous. To remain neutral would be scarcely possible. To fight with Austria against Prussia would shock the best feelings of Europe, as well as of Italians. Yet to take the side of Prussia against Austria, while Savoy and Nice are in the hands of the former and the Tyrol in those of the latter—while Rome remains to invite a fresh army of pilgrims from Catholic Austria—while Austrian partisans are at once near, and might easily become powerful in the country—whilst the various political parties are so far from a thorough agreement and co-operation—and to fight without any hope of further realising her dreams of unity, would appear to be nothing short of madness.

ROBBERY IN THE MONTREAL POST OFFICE.

For some time past it has been suspected by the authorities of our post office that something wrong was going on, but until the present time no means of detection offered themselves. Suspicion at last fell on the wife of the caretaker, an elderly woman of 60, who lived with her husband in the basement, and seems to have had access at all times to the office. On Saturday morning, however, she was watched, and was observed to have lifted a small stove with papers, and we believe was in the act of applying a match, when those who observed her prevented her. The paper in the stove was found to be letters which had been torn up, and the remains of a considerable quantity of ashes showed that for some purpose or other papers had been burnt there previously. About 10 o'clock the case was put in the hands of the detectives, and, as far as we can learn, the woman admitted that she had been in the habit of opening letters; and if their contents happened to be bills, she appropriated them, consigning useless matter to the flames. The detectives and Chief Penton also obtained a clue to $400 in greenbacks still remaining in her possession, and to $800 deposited in the City and District Savings Bank, and entered in the joint names of the prisoner and her husband, who however seems not to be implicated. The case will be brought before the police court this morning, and it is possible that other revelations may be made.—Montreal Gazette.

THE POST OFFICE ROBBERY.—The first part brought to light that an old woman who had care of the post-office here has for some time opened letters and appropriated their contents is sufficiently alarming; and the question naturally arises, how many letters have been so rob bed, and to whom did they belong? We are under the impression that registered letters are safe, but would like information on that point. Letters to business establishments are also pretty safe, because any loss there would at once be investigated, but unregistered letters to people who are little known, and which appear to contain money, must be in great danger if there be any dishonest person about the post-office. A short time ago an advertisement from a clerk appeared, calling upon whoever had taken a money-letter to restore it and save him from losing his situation. That letter was probably one of those robbed and then burned by the party in question; and how many other distressing cases may have occurred through these cruel robberies we have no means of knowing.—Witness.

A Mystery Unveiled.

Our readers recollect the disastrous fire in Bowmanville on the 7th of April last, by which the cabinet factory was destroyed. At the time it was supposed to be the work of an incendiary, but no clue could be obtained to the perpetrator of the act. Time wore on, and the fire was almost forgotten as an event of the past, till last Sunday our town-people were startled by the announcement that a person by the name of Martin Dunn—who formerly lived in Bowmanville, worked in the factory and was discharged the forenoon—had been arrested in Hampton, charged with the committal of the felonious act. He was brought to Bowmanville, and on Monday last underwent an examination before Messrs Hames and Cubitt. The evidence showed that on the night in question the prisoner requested a lad named Manchester to accompany him to the factory shortly before midnight giving for a reason that he wished to obtain a chair leg. On reaching the premises Dunn requested Manchester to wait on the street while he went round the building for the article alleged to be required. The prisoner was gone about twenty minutes, when he returned without the chair leg, and urged his companion to hurry away from the place. They returned to the centre of the town by crossing fields and travelling unfrequented streets. While on their way home the alarm was given, fire having been discovered; and Dunn then stated to Manchester that the factory was on fire, and that if he ever said anything about their having been there that night his head would be broken. Two or three parties met the above couple on their returning from the evil work but nothing was known of the facts till lately when Manchester has been induced to divulge the above particulars. Other evidence was produced, sufficient to justify the magistrates in committing the prisoner for trial at the Assizes; and the court being held in Cobourg this week the whole affair will be speedily investigated. We withold further remark at the present time, awaiting further developments.—Statesman.

A NEW DISEASE.—Dr. Hardie, of New York, announces his discovery, on board the hospital ship, of a disease "which he had never seen before." Some of the patients, he adds, were blue-some black. The secretions from the kidneys were normal; the skin was warm, not cold; pulse slow, not feverish. There was general congestion; the blood was stagnated in the extreme vessels, and there was vomiting, with other symptoms of cholera. The disease he regards as in a limited measure contagious. Evidence of cerebral congestion was not found, but he thinks he detected a paleness on the brain. [illegible] his opinion, which [illegible] in feeling it to be true that this is the same disease as that which under the name of the "blue disease," or the "black typhus," has been puzzling the doctors in Ireland during the past five months (the world not like, however, to say this too publicly.

ROME.

Affairs look very threatening in this city. The Revolutionists are at one time said to be in the capital, at other times marching towards it. The Garibaldians are almost certain to take it, and at least destroy the imperial power of the Pope. France threatened to interfere for his Holiness, but latest news says that the Emperor will not send an army to Italy. Garribaldi has escaped from prison and has reached Italy, it is said. The following telegram is significant of the feelings of the Italian people.

FLORENCE, Oct. 22, noon.—The Ministerial crisis is now ended. Gen. Cialdini has been unable to form a new Cabinet, and has given up the task. It is probable that Ratazzi may remain in office, with perhaps a few changes in his ministry. The popular agitation is very great from one end of Italy to the other. An extremely bitter feeling is shown against France, while the Government of the King is loaded with reproaches by the people for yielding to the dictation of Napoleon. There have been several demonstrations of indignation in Florence The populace gather in great crowds beneath the windows of the Government offices, and shout for Rome as the capital of Italy.

The Commercial Bank Closed.

Tuesday morning the news reached Ler that the Commercial Bank had stopped payment. For some time this was expected, and this together with the closing of the agencies here a few months ago, leaves very few to suffer much. We regret to hear of a few who are losers to some extent. The cause of the failure, it is said, is bad management; some of the directors have failed and, thereby the bank lost heavily. They have lost, it is said, $1,100,000 in the last ten years by such managers. The principal director lost the Milwaukee Railway $1,800,000 and this sum is locked up in bonds of the road. The failure of Buchanan & Co. Hamilton, took [illegible] 00. The Globe, however, says that there will be enough to meet liabilities, and we are informed pay the stockholders about 60 per cent.

The deposits, were on 30th September, $3,007,676; the bills in circulation, $1,248,979, and the balances due to other banks, $400,391; in all, $4,657,048 of liabilities, which the bank will now be called upon to meet. They had coin, bullion and Provincial notes, $702,141; Government securities, $400,000; bills of other banks, $106,284; balances due from others, $174,231; other debts due to the bank, $493,782; and finally the huge sum of $6,975,867, in notes discounted, making assets of the value of $9,140,983. If we deduct $1,100,000 for losses, and $1,800,000 locked up in the Detroit and Milwaukee, there still remains $6,240,982 to meet $4,657,084 of debts. It may be said that $1,100,000 will not pay the losses of the bank, but we have faith that the gentlemen who reported upon the condition of the bank's affairs, did not commit the error of underrating the deficiency.—Globe.

Melancholy.

On Friday evening Mrs. Ivison, wife of Mr. R. Ivison, residing on Smithtown Hill, left the residence of Mr. Stalker about 7 o'clock and was not again heard of until her body was found on Sabbath morning in the river not far from Mr. S. Dickson's saw mills. Search was made for her on Friday night, and also during Saturday, fearing that something had happened to her, but she was not found till Sunday morning. An inquest was held over the body and a verdict of "Found drowned" returned. It is believed that she was laboring under a state of mental aberration at the time. She was 74 years of age.

Concert.

A Grand Concert will be given to Mr. A. T. Heathfield, on Tuesday evening next in the Victoria Hall, under the auspices of the "Peterboro' Literary Club," at which the principal musical talent of the place will take part. Mr. Boswell, the comic vocalist, and Mr. Philp, of Port Hope, will also lend their assistance. The following members of the Literary Club have been appointed to assist in carrying out the arrangements, Rev. V. Clementi, Messrs. J. A. Hall, W. N. Kennedy, J. Z. Rogers and John O'Donnell. No effort will be spared to make this the concert of the season. We hope to see a full house, to insure which we are quite certain it will only be necessary to remind the public of the entertainment.

A New Mill.

We are informed that Messrs. Gilmour & Co are about to build an immense saw mill on Nogie's Creek, Harvey, where they have extensive limits. We sincerely hope that by a new railway to Mud Lake they may be induced to build at the terminus of the road, thus making Peterboro the base of operations instead of Lindsay. 'Tis too bad that we should let a rival town deprive us of our own legitimate trade, but so it is.

Our Pine.

Four hundred thousand dollars per annum are spent in this County by the lumbermen, and all classes without distinction are benefitted by the outlay. The sooner the square timber business ceases the better, as the more labor is put on the pine the more money will be spent in our midst. If it could all be made into matches it would be well for us.

Ashburnham.

The Ashburnham Council introduced a By-law at its last sitting and passed it through two readings to submit to the people in reference to giving a bonus to the C., P. & M. Railway and Mining Company, for the purpose of repurchasing the railway to the village. The By-law will be submitted to the people on the 12th of November. The vote will be taken at the Town Hall as usual, but no one can vote but owners of real estate, or parties whose lease extends [illegible] years from date. The [illegible] is $6,000, and it is proposed to divide it over 20 years. In this way it would require a yearly payment of $440 to meet the principal and interest in twenty years, the twentieth payment merely however only require to be $362, all the others would be $440 yearly, over and above every other rate that might be required.

At present the village is in no debt, we may say, as the rate of this present year will pay off all demands against the corporation, which shall be done before the By-law proposed could effect it. If no other debt should be entered into, the taxes would not be any higher than at present. For the information of those interested we may be allowed to state the sum in a tangible shape. For every $100 of assessed value the ratepayer would be called upon to pay 38 cents yearly for railroad purposes, so that every one interested can easily estimate what he would have to pay, and can the better decide on what course to pursue. If the re-opening of the road should give an impetus to business in the village and cause property to [illegible] in value or induce a larger population, then it would be right to vote for the By-law; but if it should not produce this effect then it will be for the people to consider and do what they think best for the interests of the whole village.

Otonabee.

The Municipal Council of the Township of Otonabee at their regular meeting on Monday last, passed a By-law through two readings to give $15,000 to the re-opening of the Cobourg railway to Ashburnham. It will be submitted to the people in November, about the 27th we think. It will be published before that however. The rate required to meet the payments of the $15,000 and interest, in 15 years will be two and eight-tenth mills on the dollar, so that every man assessed would have to pay 28 cents on the $100 yearly, for 15 years, for railroad purposes. We understand that a large number of the ratepayers are in favor of the By-law. The vote, however, will decide the matter.

Literary Club.

There will be a meeting of the "Peterboro' Literary Club" this evening, in the Firemen's Hall, at 8 o'clock, at which, the following subject will be discussed, viz.:—"Would a Legislation Union have been preferable to the existing Federal Union."—Leaders—Messrs. W. H. Scott and D. J. Eastwood. Members only admitted.

PUT TO FLIGHT.—The Review is silent on the subject of that letter from Mr. Carroll. We wonder why it is so. Perhaps the popular opinion is true in this case, viz., that the letter is unanswerable. If he will turn his attention to the matters of fact contained in the letter there will be food for quiet contemplation for a few weeks. In regard to [illegible] and speakers with the Supt. of Education, we can assure the editor of the Review that their [illegible] at present will roll is strong enough without interpention.

Teachers' Association.

At a meeting of Teachers, held in Ashburnham, on the 19th instant, for the purpose of organizing a Teachers' Association, the following resolutions were moved and carried:

On motion of Mr. Hardie, seconded by Mr. White, Mr. Stratton was elected President of the Association.

On motion of Mr. Renwick, seconded by Mr. Armstrong, W. Wood was elected First Vice President.

On motion of Mr Smyth, seconded by Mr. Taylor, Mr. John Wood was elected Secretary.

Moved by Mr. John Wood, seconded by Mr. Campbell, that Mr. Hardie be Corresponding Secretary.

Moved by Mr. Stratton, seconded by Mr. Shearer, that the Committee of Management prepare By-Laws and Rules of Order for this Association, to be submitted at the next meeting.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Hardie, seconded by Mr. [illegible] that this Association meet on this day month, at twelve o'clock.—Carried.

Subjects decided upon for next meeting:—"The best method of teaching the alphabet to a class." Messrs. W. Wood, Hardie and White.

"Arithmetic through the simple rules." Messrs. Williams, Shearer and Armstrong.

"History of Canada to the taking of Quebec by Wolfe." Messrs. Campbell, Renwick and Taylor.

The meeting then adjourned.

The following address was presented to the late Principal Mr. King, on his departure from this place for St. Catherines. Mr. King was unable to send a formal reply at an earlier date. We, however, willingly insert it even a week or two too late.

TO JOHN KING, Esq.,
Principal Peterborough G. & U. School.

DEAR SIR,—On this occasion of your being about to remove from among us to another sphere of labour, we beg to present you this expression of our esteem for you, and our appreciation of your faithful efforts for our advancement in useful learning. We also beg to express our regret for the loss that we feel we are about to sustain in being thus deprived of your valuable services, and of your unwearied efforts for our advancement.

During the three years that we have been under you as Principal you have uniformly exhibited a spirit of kindness and forbearance toward us, and that tempered with an earnest desire for our improvement, produced the happy result of mutual esteem between us which shall not soon be forgotten.

Permit us now to to return our thanks for all your kindness and urbanity towards us, and also for our general improvement, intellectually and morally. We would also express our esteem for you as a teacher of superior attainments, for we know that we will always have reason to remember with pleasure our connection with you as such; and we feel certain that when we have reached the goal of our desires in Hillsdale and entered the [illegible] you will find the same [illegible] success. [illegible]

We further desire to express the wish that in your new position you may be happy and comfortable, and that you will find the change both advantageous and congenial.

In concluding permit us to hope that your labours may prove as successful with those to whom you go, and be as fully appreciated by them as we know they are now by us. And we may add that you as affectionately remember us, and that you continue to favor us with your correspondence in connection with you as pupils and Principal with veneration and esteem.

MY DEAR YOUNG FRIENDS,—I received with emotions of gratitude and pleasure, which I am unable to express, your kind and affectionate address, as a token of your appreciation of my untiring labors on your behalf, until the latest period of my life, and when we shall have ceased to meet on earth may we each receive a crown of rejoicing which shall not fade away.

HALIBURTON.

The 10th day of October instantly was expected to be quite a gala day in the English-Land Company's Village of Haliburton, being the time appointed for the exhibition of all kinds of agricultural products under the immediate auspices of the "Dysart Agricultural Society." The people of the [illegible] Township of Minden were also invited to [illegible] with the prizes that had been [illegible] this liberty not being generally known, there were only a few bonâfide present. Two things militated against the show—the day was bleak and lowering, and more the greater number of the settlers were at work on the Company's new road and so earning good wages, which could not be foregone, not even for an annual pleasure day, money, real cash being in the back-bush quite a rarity. So I cannot report as in former years the full attendance of farmers and wives, and sons and daughters. About 80 hale men and lads with two score buxom lasses and a sprinkling of mothers were there; and just so with the material exhibited—no great variety nor quantity, but in quality all was well up to both the former shows. In cattle, oxen were well represented and milch cows; sheep and pigs were there good, but no variety, only specimens of what really are in the township. Fall wheat that obtained praise at Kingston was here and took the first prize. Oats and barley of a good sample were produced. Corn in the ear of very good quality, but quantity very spare. Potatoes as usual famous in every feature. Carrots, turnips, beets and cabbage, just what may be expected from the Dysart soil, of great dimensions. Maple sugar, tomatoes, citrons (that gained admiration at Kingston) were here to gain a second prize Butter of excellent quality was exhibited; even the ladies contended with well-baked good bread, say excellent. Needlework in mats, in quilting, in knitting, met praise and prizes both for design and ability. Nothing was missed save the merry faces and presence of the whole families as seen on other occasions, with, of course, the accompanying animal or other object of the farmer and the farmer's wife's care and pride.

About 31 prizes were awarded, amounting to, say 40 dollars. Let us look for better things next year.—Com.

CORRECTION.—In the prize list for the County Cattle Show we find that we have credited Mr. John Walton with getting the 1st prize for a yearling Duploma Heifer, when it should have been credited to Mr. H. Collins, of Monaghan. Mr. Collins received the 1st prize, and from the appearance of the animal well deserved it.

The Report of the County Secretary below, shows the order to be in a prosperous and a progressive state.

After a number of important resolutions had been passed, bearing upon the spirit of the order, also, in the extension of the great cause of temperance, and by the suppression of the foul monster—intemperance, a very harmonious and interesting session was formally closed.

The following is the County Secretary's Report, and on motion of Bro. E. H. Dillon, the Report was received and adopted:—

Ommeney, Sept. 25th 1867.

Worthy County Chief, Officers and Members of the County Lodge, British American Order of Good Templars.

Your County Secretary in presenting his second County report, would, in the first place, congratulate you, my sisters and brothers, upon the favorable auspices under which we meet, I might here be permitted to remark, that the past three months has been of great interest to many of us. We have been kindly blessed with a bountiful harvest, for there is abundance in the land for which we have cause to be truly grateful to the giver of all good.

And while the public mind has been agitated throughout the land, in political strife, notwithstanding, many good and noble minds have been concentrated upon those subjects tending to the moral and social elevation of our race; such noble and exalted minds must live in the breast of every true patriot of his country, who contemplate to see his country rise to the Zenith of nations.

Inasmuch as the political contest has swept over our devoted land, and has agitated the mind of every man more or less, have our minds at the same time been fully alive to another course of a greater magnitude, a greater agitator of the peace and happiness of the human mind, an evil that prevails in the whole land, an evil that degrades and beguiles the brightest and noblest minds that ever moved on this planet of earth? I repeat, have our minds been active and alive to the fact that this gigantic evil is in our midst, doing its work, debasing the young, the beautiful and the gay, and also those whose heads are blossomed for the silent tomb? Have we been warring against this mighty evil, as becomes us as watchmen set upon a hill, to guard well and truly the moral and social condition of our fellow-beings? If we have, we have done all that is required of us in the past. Before a great field of renovation is before us, where we must all labor in order to accomplish the great end in view.

My sisters and brothers, how many young men in this land of our Dominion stand at the threshold of manhood, the pride of the home circle, with a noble and flowing heart throbbing with high and noble resolves? Perhaps the mother's eye has kindled as it watched his ripening years; the sister loves him with a sister's changeless love, and yet that mother has wept and pined over the blighting of all her hopes, and sinks he self like a wretched being to her grave; and that sister may tread the pilgrimage of life and the people have no tears for her—Oh, no longer let this be the case, let us march forth with noble resolves, determined to banish this evil monster from our blessed land, blessed with Bibles and the light of a preached Gospel. Note the standing all those advantages this evil still remains to blight our fairest prospects, to degrade our sons and daughters and ultimately to sink them into an unhonored grave. Having those facts before us, and most legibly do they admonish us to be diligent in the great work now before us to be accomplished at our hands, in this day of moral and intellectual improvement, tending to the higher attainments of man's moral and intellectual progression in the human economy; therefore, it becomes us to be "wise as serpents and harmless as doves," in order to accomplish the end in view, and may the great Chief of the Universe assist us so to do.

In taking a retrospective view of the progress of our beloved order during the past quarter I find a very satisfactory state of things existing I am happy also to add, that harmony seems to prevail in all the Lodges reported, which is a principle much to be desired, for without harmony our work in a measure must be fruitless.

During the quarter now expired, one Primary Lodge has been organized. I have received the returns from nine Lodges—initiated are 46, restored, 4; violated the pledge, 8; expelled, 6; withdrawn by card, 5; suspended, 10; members in good standing, 348, from the Lodges which have sent in returns; total number initiated by the Lodges, 520. Grand and County Lodge dues now received, $15.88.

The above statement is our present position as we enter upon another revolving year. Before that year shall have passed away, what changes may take place in the epoch of our history; some that are with us to-day, in bloom and in health may be silent beneath the clods of the valley—kind friends may weep as we lie silent there. Then let us do all we can, in every good and noble work, while we are on the anvil of time, that we may leave a name enshrined upon the tablets of every good and generous hearts, that we have done that which was required at our hands, as good and faithful stewards, called to discharge a faithful duty, which has for its end the moral and social elevation of man.

And now, in conclusion, I would say, it gives me unbounded pleasure to meet so many good and noble hearts in County Lodge session, glowing with the fire of patriotism for the weak and fallen sons and daughters of Adam; determined to press onward in this just and righteous cause for which we have met here to-day to advance in all its bearings. I also hope that our discussions at this time may be of that character that will tend to the advancement of our order in this land and elsewhere; that on leaving this hall we may feel better prepared to go forth and to battle with that arch fiend—intemperance. Then let us march forth into action, giving no quarter, while waving over our heads that flag "which for a thousand years has braved the battle and the breeze."

All of which is most respectfully submitted on the heads of our order.

JAMES A. BARCHARD,
County Secretary.

The efficacy of Dyspeptic Pulmonic Wafers in curing Coughs, colds, all Bronchial affections, and clearing the affected, has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they have driven all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them has steadily increased for the twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these Wafers. When taken in season the effect a permanent cure. HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, fainting, trembling cough, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics. Each box contains the facsimile, U. W., who are the sole proprietors. Sold by J. Higginbotham and D. Stott, Bowmanville, and Medicine Dealers everywhere.

A BEAUTIFUL HORSE.

There is nothing that can contribute so much to render the horse beautiful and elegant to improve his condition and make him all that is desirable as "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" it has been used by many persons who own valuable carriage and other horses with decided success, and so well pleased are they with it that they always keep it on hand in case of emergency; it may be given at all times with safest safety.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurlbut & Co. is on each package.

A NEW AND GRAND EPOCH IN MEDICINE!—Dr Maggiel is the founder of a new Medical System! The constituents, whose vast internal doses revolve the stomach and paralyze the bowels, must give precedure to the man who restores health and appetite with from one to two of his extraordinary Pills, and cures the most virulent sores with a box or so of his wonderful and all-healing Salve.

These two great specifics of the Doctor are fast superseding all the stereotyped nostrums of the day. Extraordinary cures by Maggiel's pills and Salve have opened the eyes of the public to the inefficiency of the (so-called) remedies of others, and upon which people have so long blindly depended. Maggiel's Pills are not of the class that are swallowed by the dozen, and of which every box fail takes creates an absolute necessity for another. One or two of Maggiel's Pills suffices to place the bowels in perfect order, tone the stomach, create an appetite, and render the spirits light and buoyant! There is no griping, and no reaction in the wants of delicate females. Ulcerous and eruptive diseases are literally extinguished by the disinfectant power of Maggiel's Salve. In fact, it is here announced that Maggiel's Pills, Dyspeptic and Diarrhœa Pills cure where all others fail. While for Burns Scalds, Chilblains, Cuts, and all Acrathoes of the skin, Maggiel's Salve is infallible. Sold by J. HAYDOCK, 11 Pine street, New York, and all Druggists, at 25 cents per box.

"COUNTERFEITS!—Buy no Maggiel Pills or Salve with a little pamphlet inside the box—They are bogus. The genuine have the name of J. Haydock on the box with name of J. Maggiel, M. D. The genuine have the Pills surrounded with white powder."

The Ætna's system of insurance is a most excellent one, as indicated by its great success; and there can be no doubt that its large and rapidly increasing business—doing as much in one month as most Companies do in a whole year—with all its investments drawing nearly double the rate of interest obtainable in Europe, will enable it, at all times, to declare large dividends to policy-holders.

Observe the difference:—While most Companies accumulate the interest with half credit for a few years only, after which full payments are required, the Ætna's half-credit runs throughout life, but does not accumulate as a debt upon the policy.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. KELLY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It clears the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to regain its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the dilated vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

BY-LAW No.—

A By-Law to raise the sum of TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS for the purposes hereinafter mentioned.

WHEREAS the Municipality of the County of Peterborough, deem it expedient and necessary to raise by loan the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars, payable within Ten years from the time this By-law shall be finally passed and take effect, with interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, to be applied to aid the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Railway and Mining Company, to construct a railway from the village of Harwood to the village Ashburnham.

And whereas, the sum of fourteen Hundred Dollars will be required to be raised annually, by special rate, for paying the interest and creating and equal yearly sinking fund for paying the said principal sum of Ten Thousand Dollars.

And whereas the amount of the whole ratable property of the said Municipality of the said County of Peterborough, irrespective of any future increase of the same, and, also irrespective of any income to be derived from the temporary investment of the sinking fund hereinafter mentioned, or any part thereof, according to the last revised and equalized Assessment Rolls for the said Municipality, is the sum of Two Millions Seven Hundred and Eighty-five Thousand Three Hundred and sixty-one dollars, ($2,785,361)

And whereas the existing debt of the said Municipality of the County of Peterborough is Twenty-nine Thousand Four Hundred Dollars, ($29,400,) for principal money, and Twelve Thousand and Forty-six dollars, ($12,046) for interest, and there is nothing in arrear on account of said principal or interest.

And whereas for paying the interest and creating and equal yearly sinking fund for paying the said sum of Ten Thousand dollars, and interest as hereinafter mentioned, it will require an equal annual special rate of one-half a mill in the dollar in addition to all rates to be levied in each year

Be it therefore enacted by the Municipal Council of the County of Peterborough:

1. That it shall be lawful for the Warden of the said County to raise by way of loan from any person or persons, body or bodies corporate, who may be willing to advance the same upon the credit of the Debentures hereinafter mentioned, a sum of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of Ten Thousand Dollars, and to cause the same to be paid into the hands of the Treasurer of the said County of Peterborough, for the purposes and with objects above recited.

2. That it shall be lawful for the said Warden to cause any number of Debentures to be made, for such sums of money as may be required, not less than One Hundred Dollars ($100) each, and not to exceed in the whole the said sum of Ten Thousand Dollars, and that the said Debentures shall be sealed, with the seal of the said Municipal Council, and be signed by the said Warden, and countersigned by the Treasurer of said County.

3. That said debentures shall be made payable in ten years at the furthest, from the day hereinafter mentioned for this By-law to take effect, at the office of the Treasurer of the said Municipality, and shall have attached to them Coupons for the payment of interest.

4. That the said debentures shall bear interest at and after the rate of six per centum per annum, from the date thereof which interest shall be payable half yearly, on the First day of February, and the first day of August in each year, at the office of the Treasurer of the said Municipality.

5. That for the purpose of forming a sinking fund for the payment of said Debentures and the interest at the rate aforesaid to become due thereon, an equal special rate of one half a mill in the dollar, shall, in addition to all other rates, be raised, levied and collected in each year, upon the ratable property in said municipality, during the continuance of the said Debentures or any of them.

6. That the sum of Ten Thousand dollars, being the amount to be contributed by the said municipality of the County of Peterboro for the purpose in the recital mentioned, be paid over to the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Railway and Mining Company, on the passing of the first train over the Railway aforesaid from Cobourg to the Village of Ashburnham. And provided that should the Rice Lake Bridge not be made permanent on the day of the passage of the first train, as aforesaid, the Railway Company is to give their guarantee that the same shall be made permanent within three years from the passage of said train.

7. That this By-law shall take effect and come into operation upon the First day of February, A. D., 1868.

The above is a true copy of a proposed By-law to be taken into consideration by the Municipality of the County of Peterborough, at Peterborough, in the said County, on Tuesday, Fourteenth of January,

A. D. 1868,

at the hour of TWO o'clock in the afternoon, at which time and place the members of the Council are hereby required to attend for the purpose aforesaid.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. No moment a cancer is discovered it should be cured, as it will soon lead and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Have you pains of various names, and know not what ails you? Are you burdened with corrupt blood, which, sooner or later, must have a powerful effect upon your health? Are you searching for a remedy which will purify your blood, and through it cleanse, invigorate, and give tone and energy to your whole system? If you are, then take Ayer's Cathartic Pills, and be cured. Nothing else will do you so much good. Nothing else can, for nothing else is known to science, which will so completely and thoroughly expel the humors that lurk in the blood, and cause so many and so various forms of disease. Within this broad statement are included many complaints, which you little suspect arise from impure blood. Internal organs, when deranged, make themselves known by various symptoms, according to the organs affected. Sometimes the stomach is the sufferer, sometimes the liver, sometimes the bowels, and often the lungs. Each of these has a set of symptoms of its own, by which its disorders are made known to the patient. Ayer's Cathartic Pills, by their powerful influence upon the blood, and through it upon the various organs of the body, purify the blood, and thus remove the cause of disease. When this is done, health is restored. While in this way they expel disease, they also impart strength. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous action, thereby giving tone and energy to the whole system. Hence, if you would be cured of Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Scrofula, Fever, or any other of the many diseases which arise from impure blood, you will find the remedy you need in Ayer's Cathartic Pills. Nothing else will do you so much good. ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was afflicted with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is cured. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

OF WHAT THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Louis Jacques, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-pervading Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and is heard and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, commencing with third stages of Consumption. In the Western Continent where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected scores of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in a country of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former recovers and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity.

Poetry.

A LAWYER'S LOVE.

[These lines were written by a young lawyer of Massachusetts, who was jilted, and subsequently died of a broken heart, notwithstanding the benevolent show of levity in his address to his faithless paramour.]

Say, Mary, canst thou sympathize
With one whose heart is bleeding—
Compelled to write from love's young dream,
And take to "special pleading?"

For, since I lost my suit with you,
I care not now a fraction
About those tiresome "suits at law"—
Those meanless "forms of action."

But in my lonely chamber oft,
Where "pleas" leave no leisure,
In misery thy deserted joys
I find a doubtful pleasure.

How well I know the spot, where first
I saw that form ethereal;
But, ah! in transitory things,
The "venue's" not material.

And reading "Archbold's Practice" now,
I pause to listen 'tis true,
That I could get my heart upon
An arch-bold girl like you.

But, then, that bright blue eye sent forth
A most unerring dart,
Which, like a "special capias," made
A "prisoner" of my heart.

And, in the weakness of my heart,
One fatal long "vacation,"
I gave a pledge to "prosecute,"
And filed my "declaration."

At first, your taking time to "plead"
Gave hope of my felicity—
The doubtful negative you spoke,
Seemed bad for its duplicity.

And, then, your blush so clearly seemed
To pardon my trespassings,
I thought I was about to snap
A "judgment by confession."

But soon I learned (most fatal truth)
How rashly I had counted—
For "non-assumpsit" was the "plea"
To which it all amounted.

Deceitful maid, another swain
Was then beloved by thee—
The preference you gave to him.
Was fraudulent to me.

Ah, when we love (so Shakespeare says),
Bad luck is sure to have us—
The course of true love never ran
Without some "special traverse."

Say, what inducement could you have,
To act so base a part?
Without it is—but you scorned me—

My rival I was doomed to view
A husband's rights assert;
And now 'tis wrong in think of you,
For you're a "femme covert."

When late I saw your son and heir,
'Twas warranted for a lover—
For then the "plea of infancy"
My heart could not get over.

I kissed the little brat, and said,
"Much happiness I wish you;"
But, oh! I felt it was to me
An "immaterial issue."

Mary adieu! I'll no more,
Nor pen pathetic ditties;
My pleading was of no avail,
And so I'll take to "Chitty's."

SIX LOVE-LETTERS.

'Are there any more of these letters?' When her father asked this question, in an awful tone, Lucilla Richmond could not say 'No' and dared not say 'Yes,' but as an intermediate course burst into tears, and sobbed behind her handkerchief.

'Bring them to me, Lucilla,' said her father, as if she had not cried him, as indeed, she had; and the girl, trembling and weeping, arose to obey him.

Then Mrs. Richmond, her daughter's very self grown older, came behind her husband's chair and patted him on the shoulder.

'Please don't be so hard with her, my dear, she said, coaxingly. 'He's a nice young man, and it is our fault after all as much as hers, and you won't break her young heart I'm sure.'

'Perhaps you approve of the whole affair, ma'am,' said Mr. Richmond.

'I—no—that is, I only'—gasped the little woman; and hearing Lucilla coming, she sank into a chair, blaming herself dreadfully for not having been present at all her daughter's music lessons during the year.

For all this disturbance arose from a music teacher who had given lessons to Miss Lucilla for twelve months, and who had taken the liberty of falling in love with her. Mr. Richmond declared, and he clutched the little billet which had fallen into his hands as he might a scorpion, and waited for the others with a look upon his face which told of no softening. They came at last, six little white envelopes, tied together with blue ribbon, and were laid at his elbow by his despairing daughter.

'Look them up until I return home this evening,' he said to his wife; 'I will read them then. Meanwhile, Lucilla is not to see the music master under any pretence.'

And then Miss Lucilla went down upon her knees!

'Oh, dear papa!' she cried, 'dearest papa, please don't say I must never see him again. I couldn't bear it. Indeed I could not. He's poor, I know, but he is a gentleman, and I—I like him so much, papa.

'No more of this absurdity, my dear,' said Mr. Richmond. 'He has been artful enough to make you think him perfection, I suppose. Your parents know what is best for your happiness. A music teacher is not a match for Miss Richmond.

With which remark Mr. Richmond put on his hat and overcoat, and departed.

Then Lucila and her mother took the opportunity of falling into each other's arms.

'It's as naughty of you,' said Mrs. Richmond. 'Hus, oh dear, I can't blame you as it was then, we might let dear Lucilla marry the man she likes, who is good, if he is not rich. I did not need it to be brought back my jubilee myself, Frederick, three times to remember, you know. We've been very happy—have we not?'

And certainly Mr. Richmond might not deny that. So Lucilla, feeling that her interests might safely be left in her mother's keeping, slipped out of the room, and heard the result of the little rose-bud meeting.

[illegible] really they were [illegible] had not gone half so far as an engagement; and, in due course of time, they were married with all the pomp and circumstance befitting the wedding of a wealthy shoe-dealer's daughter, with the perfect approbation of Lucilla's father and to the great joy of Lucilla's mamma, who finally believed that her little one had brought about all her daughter's happiness.

And Mr. Richmond dropped the first letter, and took up another.

'The same stuff,' he commenced. 'I hope you don't believe a word he says. A plain, earnest, upright sort of a man would never go into such rhapsodies. I am sure. Ah! now, in number three he calls you 'an angel!' He is romantic, upon my word. And what is all this?'

'Those who would forbid me to see you can find no fault with me but my poverty. I am honest—I am earnest in my efforts. I am by birth a gentleman, and I love you from my soul. Do not let them sell you for gold, Lucilla.'

'Great heavens, what impertinence to your parents!'

'I don't remember Fred's saying anything of that kind,' said poor little Lucilla. 'He never knew you would object.'

Mr. Richmond shook his head, frowned, and read on in silence until the last sheet lay under his hand. Then, with an ejaculation of rage, he started to his feet.

'Infamous!' he cried; 'I'll go to him this instant—I'll horsewhip him!—I'll—I'll—murder him! As for you, by Jove, I'll send you to a convent. Elope, elope with a music teacher! I'm ashamed to call you my daughter. Where's my hat? Give me my boots. Here John call a cab!—I—'

But here Lucilla caught one arm and Mrs. Richmond the other.

'Oh, papa, you are crazy?' said Lucilla. 'Frederick never proposed such a thing. Let me see the letter. Oh, papa, this is not Fred's—upon my word it is not. Do look, papa; it is dated twenty years back, and Frederick's name is not Charles!' Papa, these are your love letters to mamma, written long ago. His name is Lucilla, you know!'

Mr. Richmond sat down to his arm chair in silence, very red in the face.

'How did this occur?' he said, sternly; and little Mrs. Richmond, retreating into a corner with her handkerchief to her eyes, sobbed;

'I did it on purpose!' and passed on the she expected a sudden judgement. But, hearing nothing, she dared at last to rise and creep up to her husband timidly.

'You know, Charles,' she said, 'it's so long ago since, and I thought you might not exactly remember—how you fell in love with me at first sight, how papa and mamma objected, and how at last we ran away together; and it seemed to me that if we could bring it all back plainly to you

The Chances Against Writing Twice Alike.

The celebrated "Howland Will Case," is now on trial in Boston. Miss Hetty Robinson, of New Bedford, now Mrs. Green, is worth five millions of dollars.—Her aunt, Miss Sylvia Ann Howland, left her an annuity which adds $70,000 to her income. The rest of her aunt's property was willed to different persons. To a will formerly made by Miss Howland, leaving all her property to her sister, is attached a codicil declaring that the other will, by which various persons were benefited, was extorted from her by the outside parties, and she prays the judge to decide in favor of Miss Howland. This codicil is in the handwriting of Miss Robinson (Green) with Miss Howland's signature in duplicate. It is claimed by those resisting her that Miss Robinson forged it. This accusation is based not on the ground of the dissimilarity of the handwriting, but of its being an exact copy of the signature in the original will. It is asserted that the signatures in duplicate were obtained by tracing them from the signature to the original will, and that it is next to impossible for any person to write three signatures exactly alike. This idea has drawn upon the resources of science and art. Photographers and experts have been examining and experimenting upon this point. Mr. Crossman, for the defence, testifies that he has spent nearly five months in examining many hundreds of signatures of many well known persons; comparing the [illegible] in front of a window, and also by tracing and superimposing the tracings. He says there was greater similarity in Miss Howland's signatures, forty or fifty of which he compared with each other, than in any other case; and he considers the two signatures to the disputed sheets to be genuine. On the other hand, Mr. Southworth, after similar research, declares that the three signatures coincide with mathematical accuracy, not only letter for letter and space for space, but also that each has the same slant to the base line of each paper, so that the eye sees them parallel. His testimony covers fifty pages, and he pronounces the two contested signatures to be forgeries, executed by tracing.

Professor Pierce, of Harvard College, has tested it by the mathematical doctrine of chances. He concludes, after having ascertained the relative frequency of coincidence by comparing numerous signatures of Miss Howland to bills of sale of vessels, etc., that in her case, "this phenomenon (or coincidence) could occur only once in two thousand, six hundred and sixty-six millions of millions of times, or 2,666,000,000,000,000,000,000." The number, the professor remarks, "far transends human experience. So vast an improbability is practically an impossibility. Such evanescent shadows of improbability cannot belong to actual life. They are imaginably less than the least things which the law cares not for." And his conclusion from these data is thus expressed: "Under a solemn sense of the responsibility involved in the assertion, I declare that the coincidence which has here occurred must have had its origin in an intention to produce it."

The "chances" are against Mrs. Green's attempt to eke out her little pittance with her aunt's property. She must live economically upon five millions.

AN ALARMED JUVENILE.—An amusing incident in connection with the Ragged School here, took place several days since. A lady who takes a deep interest in this institution, had placed in it a boy who had been in the habit of begging at her door. He was a Roman Catholic. One morning lately the master, in giving out a chapter to read, called out 'Let us take the Epistle to the Romans,' upon which the lad in question started from his seat, and fled precipitately from the school, to which he did not return. A day or two afterwards the lady met and asked him the reason of his conduct, when he said that he was afraid he was going to be shot, as the master had cried out 'Pistols to the Romans!'—Exchange.

MRS. PARTINGTON AND THE OVERCOAT.—Have you any thick little boy's outside overcoats?' said Mrs. Partington, as she entered the 'Rotundity' at 'Oak Hill, as she called it. The young man in attendance smilingly asked her how thick the little boy was. She looked at him a moment, and seeing that he didn't know any better, she explained that it was a thick coat she wanted for like. 'Would you like a Raglan?' said he, taking up a coat thus denominated. 'Raglan!' replied she, with a tone of astonishment, 'no; I want a new one; this is rag enough without any more; pointing to the garment worn by the boy, that showed sundry fringes that were no ornaments. He explained that it was the name of a new garment of the description that she wanted; and uttering a very extended 'Oh!' she proceeded to negotiate.

FORCIBLE ARGUMENT.—'Do you understand me now?' thundered a country pedagogue to an urchin at whose head he threw an imkstand. 'I've got an inkling of what you mean,' replied the boy.

Statement of Facts Concerning the Recent Negotiations Between the Commercial and other Banks.

1. In the latter part of September the Commercial Bank withdrew balances from the Banks of Montreal to the extent of $300,000, at the request of the Government and upon the security of Commercial paper, maturing in November and December.

2. Upon the 14th October the Commercial Bank again applied to the Bank of Montreal for assistance [illegible] and, in due course of time, they were furnished with [illegible] the Bank of Montreal, believing that the deposits of the Commercial Bank were not being withdrawn to any extent, declined to assist.

3. The advance was declined, for the reason that the Commercial Bank had considerably increased instead of diminished its discounts during September, when it was in need of assistance [illegible] from the Bank of Montreal having claimed that some of the largest depositors had already been secured by bills receivable.

4. The Commercial Bank then applied to the Government for assistance, and failed to obtain it.

5. The Commercial Bank renewed its application to the Bank of Montreal, which was again declined, with the suggestion, however, that the other banks in Upper Canada should be applied to, and that if they were disposed to assist, and could not conveniently do so from cash resources, the Bank of Montreal would aid them in the latter.

6. The Bank of Montreal proposed to the Bank of British North America, and it was agreed that if such advances were required, they should be made by the two banks to the others in the proportion of two-thirds and one-third.

7. A meeting was held on the 20th October, when the representative of the Ontario Bank being the only one that had arrived, after a full discussion, agreed to do his part, provided the others, who were expected from Upper Canada, would do the same.

8. On Monday morning, 21st October, the following banks were represented at a meeting held at the Bank of British North America, of which Mr. Paton was appointed Chairman.

The Bank of Montreal,
The Bank of British North America,
The Ontario Bank,
[illegible] Bank of Toronto,
The City Bank of Montreal,
The Royal Canadian Bank,
And the Directors of the Commercial Bank.

9. The Commercial Bank explained its position, and asked for a loan of $750,000, one half at four and the other at six months upon the security of one million five hundred thousand dollars, of Detroit and Milwaukee Railway Bonds, stating that to offer any other available assets would in the opinion of the Directors, render it very difficult to carry on their current business. The meeting was informed that the Bank of Montreal and the Bank of British North America were ready to advance to the other Banks if they were inclined to assist the Commercial, and did not find it convenient to render such assistance from their cash resources.

10. The last proposal was at once rejected by the Upper Canadian Banks, who declared themselves quite able to furnish any assistance they thought proper to give from their own resources.

11. A desultory discussion ensued, in which it was contended by the banks from Upper Canada and the city Bank, that the measure of assistance to be rendered should be in proportion to capital and not in proportion to immediate liabilities to the shape of Deposits and Note-circulation, which it was urged by the Bank of Montreal and the Bank of British North America formed the criterion of danger in the case the suspension of the Commercial led to a general withdrawal of confidence in the Banks.

12. It was then suggested by the Bank of Toronto that the Bank of Montreal should surrender the securities obtained for the loan made in September, and accept Detriot and Milwaukee bonds in common with the other banks, and that each contribution should be in proportion to capital.

13. The Bank of Montreal rejected this proposal, and stated that having already assisted the Commercial, and its offer to advance to other banks in support of the Commercial having been declined, it withdrew from the meeting, for the purpose of allowing the other banks to decide amongst themselves how far they would go in advancing to the Commercial before the Bank of Montreal would take any further part in the discussion.

14. The Bank of Montreal was requested and agreed not to discredit the Commercial in the meantime, upon condition that the result of the meeting should be communicated without delay.

15. The Hon. Mr. Galt, who had been requested to attend the meeting of Banks, when no prospect of agreement seemed probable, proceeded to the Bank of Montreal with the president of the Commercial Bank, after the close of the meeting, to announce that the banks had agreed to contribute as follows, to support the Commercial, subject, however, so far as the Upper Canada banks were concerned, to confirmation by telegram from their head offices, viz:—

British	$100,000
Bank of Toronto	50,000
City Bank	72,000
Royal Canadian	50,000
Ontario Bank	120,000
Total	$412,000

And it was expected by the meeting that the following Banks would not refuse to contribute when the circumstances were explained, viz:—

The Suspension of the Commercial Bank of Canada.

(From the Trade Review.)

It has been known for some time that affairs at the Bank have not been in as sound and healthy a condition as could have been wished, but at the examination recently made of these affairs by the Auditors appointed by the Bank, they reported that the stock was worth sixty cents on the dollar, after making full allowance for all bad and doubtful assets, and the public at large were not quite prepared for the shock of the suspension so soon.

We have every reason to believe that the Commercial Bank of Canada was obliged to close its doors because it was unable to obtain sufficient assistance in its hour of need from the other banks of the country, whose coffers could, with safety, and without any very great inconvenience to themselves, have made the necessary advances to ward off the great evil and misfortune to the country of the suspension of so large a bank, and one with such widely extended connection as the Commercial. We have also every reason to believe that but for the refusal of the Bank of Montreal, through its manager Mr. King, to join the other banks in making such advances, this suspension would not have occurred.

On last Monday, a meeting of the representatives of a number of Canadian Banks was held at the Bank of British North America in this city, for the purpose of consulting together concerning the advisability of rendering assistance to the Commercial, and the way in which it could best be done. The necessity of such aid being given was generally understood, and it was equally understood what the alternative must be should such aid be withheld. The entire amount need'd at the time was only $250,000, or six per cent. on the capital stock of the Banks jointly, and it was proposed that they should each make advances in proportion to their respective capitals. All the banks represented were agreed to this except the Bank of Montreal; Mr. King, on his part, proposed in effect to lend money to the other banks, to lend to the Commercial Bank on the securities offered by that Bank, thereby acknowledging the ability of the Bank of Montreal to do its share towards preventing the impending catastrophe. Mr. King's proposal was, of course, refused by the others, who objected to him that they could see no reason why the Bank of Montreal should claim their guarantee for any money he might advance for the Commercial Bank, nor why he should look for exemption from the liabilities the other Banks were willing to undertake. Mr. King reminded them that his bank had already advanced $300,000 to the Commercial Bank, but the reply to this was that for that advance we held special securities; that if he would let these securities go along with those offered by the Commercial Bank, the other Banks would not ask the Bank of Montreal to advance another dollar until they had made advances respectively in a proportion, according to the amounts of their capitals. This Mr. King refused to do, nor would he agree to retain his securities for the special loan of $300,000, and then join the other banks in advancing on the principle laid down. We learn, too that he would not even advance the $80,000, which would have made up his proportion, but positively refused to advance a shilling to the Commercial Bank, and would only lend to the other Banks, who thus became guarantees of the amount. This he stated was his ultimatum, and prepared to withdraw, but on request, remained for further consultation with the Hon. Mr. Galt, who was sent for. That gentleman, we understan , pressed Mr. King very strongly not to refuse to do this part, but without effect; and when Mr. Cartwright, the President of the Commercial Bank, pointed out the calamitous effect which would be produced should the Bank of Montreal withhold its aid, and that it would be his duty to telegraph to all his offices to close their doors, Mr. King's answer was that he, too, could make use of the telegraph. Before leaving, Mr. Cartwright obtained Mr. King's promise that he would do nothing unfriendly to the Commercial Bank, or calculated to embarrass it, until the meeting had finally closed. It seems, however, that he immediately sent and demanded under protest his balance of over $30,000, against the Commercial Bank here, which had to be paid at once.

The deliberation of the bank representatives were continued after the withdrawal of Mr. King, and had the securities (bonds of the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroads at the rate of 80c. on the dollar) which the Commercial Bank offered, been of a more unexceptional character, the required advances would still have been made.—The securities, however, were objected to, and nothing was done.

We can but express our regret for what has happened, and we trust that though individual loss may be great, no serious results may follow to the country at large.

Concerning the Bank of Montreal, we have a few words to say in conclusion.—Its conduct on this occasion appears to have corresponded exactly with its policy for years back. It is pretty well known that had the desire existed, the Bank of Upper Canada could have been carried over its difficulties; and many people, too, are aware of the very discreditable (to use a mild word) attempt on the part of the Bank of Montreal to break down or greatly embarass the Merchant's Bank, some years ago, when that institution had but a small part of its capital called in, and consequently was limited its means for carrying on its current business. There have been other instances where the Government Bank has used the power in possession, and it would positively seem that nothing but the ability is wanting to break down all the banks of the Provnces and for the Bank of Montreal to become the one huge monetary centre—the Bank of England on a Colonial scale. Whether Mr. King acts with or without the advice of his Directors, we do not profess to know, but we imagine

THE COMMERCIAL BANK.

In another column will be found a statement of the meeting of bankers on the day previous to the failure of the Commercial bank. The news from the Maritime provinces and the other from the Trade Review. We forbear to make any comment on either report, only We think [illegible] Our readers for themselves. We must express our regret that whatever did take place caused the directors of the Commercial to stop payment but there can be no doubt of the necessity that was on them to do so when refused assistance. The failure of any bank causes a certain amount of hardship to its till-holders and stock-holders, and especially to its stock-holders; but the failure of an old bank like the Commercial must cause more than usual, although the embarrassed state of the bank for some time prepared the public a little for the shock. Since our last issue we have heard of many amongst ourselves who are likely to suffer more or less by the stoppage of payment and the depreciation of stock. We do not, however, deem it prudent to give names. The Church of Scotland, or the Kirk, as it is called, are losers to a large amount—$125,000 being the sum invested. This was a portion of the commutation fund obtained in settlement of the clergy reserves. The ministers will be the great sufferers, as in too many cases the people are unwilling to make up anything extra, and, as the rest, ministers generally are poorly paid, except a few in favorable situations. The stock, however, is quoted as worth at least 60 per cent on the dollar after paying bill-holders in full. Those who hold bills are very foolish to part with them at a discount unless they must use them, as all agree that they are worth the full value. Bookets, however, think thereby.

The cause of the ware of the Commercial is undoubtedly bad management. The contract [illegible] whole appears to have been in the hands, to a great degree, of unprincipled men, although, no doubt, there were some very upright men among them, but they have been too few to effect any good. They squandered the funds on themselves and on foolish works like the Milwaukee Railroad, and now the country suffers, but the stockholders in particular.

There are rumours that J. A. is concerned deeply in the Commercial failure, and the effort of him and Mr. Galt to obtain relief for it at the late meeting points that way; if so there will be something done perhaps to resuscitate the bank and thus enable it to go on again if possible. It must have been a pitiable sight to see John A. and Galt begging for aid and not able to get it, nor yet able to offer it, their hands are so tied down by their bank of issue scheme. Perhaps this will open their eyes to the folly of such a scheme and prevent any further action towards putting the whole monetary affairs of the country in any one bank. Too much power is a dangerous thing, few know how to use it wisely.

A NEW TOWN HALL.

This is a subject before the people of the town, involving an outlay of $12,000, perhaps more. Now, we have no doubt but that long arrays of figures will be given showing it all right, and perhaps others trying to show it all wrong. The question is would a new Town Hall increase the trade of the town in proportion to its cost? If it would, build it, but if ratepayers think it would not, let us do with what we have. All these things are matters of debtors and costs and we should look at them in that light. We have a communication on the subject, but want of space prevented its appearing this issue.

BRAZILIAN CONSUL APPOINTED.

We learn with satisfaction, that by last mail steamer from the Rio de Janeiro, our esteemed townsman, Captain D. Sutherland, received from the Imperial Government of Brazil his consulation under great seal, as Brazilian Consul in our Township. Our readers will thereby that in this appointment the "right man" is put in the "right place." Captain S. resided for a number of years in Brazil, and is consequently well acquainted with the language, manners, & customs of that country. Mr Sutherland is well known, retired from the late political contest as member for the House of Commons, in anticipation of the appointment he has now received. We heartily wish him all success.

ARBITRATION.—It seems singular to us why we have not heretofore done a large business with the Brazilian empire direct from our own ports. We require, and do consume, many of the products of Brazil, such as their coffee, sugar, rice, rum, tobacco, cotton, hides, &c., in return for which we could supply them cheaper and better than any other market, with our flour, lumber, butter, cheese, lards, &c., all of which the Brazilians import largely from the United States. With the exception of a few cargoes of codfish that are sent annually from Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, our trade has been of the most limited kind. The United States, on the other hand, has encouraged and fostered trade with the rising empire of Brazil, even to the extent of subsidising, literally, a monthly line of first class ocean steamers to run between the principal ports of Brazil and New York; the consequence of this has been that we receive intensely interesting accounts of Brazil in bond through the United States.

Brazil has adopted a constitutional and liberal form of government, copied as we believe after that of our own, or British Government. Religious and political liberty is allowed to its fullest extent. The emperor entertains the most enlightened and progressive views, and his government is at present, and for some time past, holding out great inducements to actual settlers to imigrate from Europe and the United States to locate themselves in the empire on free grants of land, and the last act we hear of is his opening the navigation of the mighty Amazon to the world. We hope, through, Mr. Sutherland's efforts, we may soon boast of an extensive Brazilian trade.

WHICH IS BEST?

There are two schemes before the people of this county at present; one what is called the gravel road scheme, and the other the granting of $20,000 towards the construction of a railroad to Mud Lake as soon to Buckhorn as possible.

The interest of $700,000 or $250,000 necessary for the gravel road scheme would be $12,000 or $15,000 a year. That is, the interest of one year would ensure a railroad to Mud Lake which would do more to open up the back country than three gravel roads and the Mud Lake bridge into the bargain. Yet there are some amongst us who oppose the railroad, but advocate the gravel road scheme. Let us try it by their own test, the debt it would impose. Let us put the cost at $209,000 payable in 20 years. The interest the first year would be $12,000, the last year it would be $600. The sum of the interest alone for 20 years would be $126,000, provided the debentures should be paid regularly as they fell due. We would, therefore, of the gravel road scheme would be $326,000 or a yearly payment of $16,300 for the Gravel road and [illegible] ments for local improvements. That is, place a mortgage on the county of $326,000 (?) or a rent of $16,300 a year. We put an interrogation after the $326,000 because we do not follow our own mode of reckoning it. The $16,300, however, is correct. What do the ratepayers think of the adviser who recommends saddling them and their posterity with a rent of $16,300 over and above all other debts, dues and demands.

Any one man will say that one-fourth of the yearly payment for five years spent by wise commissioners would ensure as good roads as the whole sum after the pickings of jobbers and contractors would be taken out of it. And after all, would it turn the trade of the back country this way instead of to Lindsay as at present? not a bit of it, but one tenth of the sum yearly for the same time would, by giving us a railroad to Mud Lake. We don't care who builds it, only let us have it. Which is best? Three-fourths of the people will say the railroad is.

SILVER AGAIN.

In some places we have heard of farmers being so much frightened by the failure of the Commercial, and a temporary run on some of the other banks, that they would take nothing but silver or gold for their produce. Such men must lack common sense, and the wise farmer whom we heard of yesterday, paying a small debt in silver, and retaining what bills he had, is worthy of imitation. The banks are all as good and safe as they have ever been, except the Commercial and Bank of Upper Canada, and both these banks failed from like causes, mismanagement and favoritism.

Every dollar of silver the farmer takes he loses over four per cent on it. The buyers pretend they give more when they pay silver but if silver were refused they would give just as much in bills as they now do in silver. The merchant knows that he will be likely to get silver for what he sells, and he puts on a fraction to guard against loss of discount and the buyer has that fraction to pay, of course. The speculator will tell the farmer that he gives his goods for silver at the same rate as he does for bills, but such is really not true. There is a general shave for fear of the silver, and every one loses but a few who buy and sell silver. If farmers would demand bills they would soon get them and nothing else, and it would be better for all in the end.

ROME.

This city attracts the anxious thoughts of the civilized world at the present. Garibaldi has escaped from Caprera and is marching on the doomed city at the head of several thousand Italian volunteers. France has ordered a fleet to sail to protect the Pope. Anxiety will remain on tip toe for the result. If Garribaldi enters first the Pontiff will be forced to flee, but if French troops get there first and Garibaldi encounters in attack, this may be the beginning of a revolution in Europe. How much better it would be for the old Pontiff to renounce his temporal power and attend to spiritual things. They that take the sword shall perish by the sword, may be verified in his case. Leave the city he must; it is a matter of time and a short time too. After his departure we may look for a reign of irreligion perhaps, but even this may not be too much for Italian liberty. Let us wait.

Lectures.

A Club of the Mechanics' Institute of Cobourg has been formed in this Town and we learn are doing well. It will soon become popular. A meeting was held at Odgen's Hotel, on Monday evening last, when the following officers were appointed.

President—Henry Colwell, Esq.

Vice Presidents—W. H. Scott, Esq., (Haliday) and Thomas [illegible] Esq.

Committee of Management — Messrs. O'Donnell, Waghorn, Jas. H. Dixon, A. H. McDougall and Dr. Burnham.

The annual fee of members was fixed at one Dollar, which entitles each member to a ticket and copy of the rules of the game. The next meeting of the Club will be held on Wednesday evening next, at 8 o'clock, at Caine's Hotel.

Peterboro' Literary Club.

The Literary Club will meet in their new rooms over the Royal Canadian Bank this evening at 8 o'clock. The following subject will be discussed:—"Has the increase of Novels in Society been beneficial." Leaders—Messrs. John Burnham and J. A. Hall. Members desiring to read will be allowed the privilege at all private meetings. This evening members only admitted.

A RASH AND PROBABLY FATAL ACT.—On Tuesday evening, whilst a teamster of Mr. W. A. Scott's, named George Howden, was coming from Mud Lake, he went into Mr. Robert Nicholson's orchard to take some apples. Mr. Nicholson, an old infirm man of 76 years, ordered Howden away and threw a stick at him when he delayed to go. Howden then, we are informed, turned round and threw a stone 7 pounds weight at the old man; it struck him and broke his leg. There are fears that it may prove fatal. This rash act, not intended to do so much harm, may lead to serious consequences, even the life of a man. The boy immediately left for the back woods.

At the late County Show, Mr. John Walton got the first prize for thorough bred Durham Heifers, but he got the credit he prizes for Grades, while he says he did not exhibit any Grades at all. Just before our last issue we spoke to J. H. Walton in reference to the matter, but by some misunderstanding we were led into the mistake of crediting another with what we should have credited Mr. Walton. Mr. Walton received the 1st for Durham Heifers.

The "Review" and the County Debt.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Surely the school master is abroad! How he figures! This is his mode: A borrows £1000 at ten per cent for twenty years; the interest is £100 a year, and twenty years interest is £2,000; this added to the money borrowed makes £3,000. So A, the moment he has borrowed, owes £3,000!! Go back to your arithmetic, Mr. Review, or else be honest and don't try to frighten the people from voting for the railway by laws by such a dodge. It is as shallow as your pate and wont take. What a guardian of the public interest you are! The By-law for the Town Hall which would do nothing for the town but increase taxes, is all right; everything is right but the railway extension to Mud Lake, and your instructions tell you that is all wrong, and, therefore, you resort to every shallow artifice to make people believe that injurious which their sound reason and judgment prove to be beneficial

I will give your figures for the County debt again, Mr. Review, for they are worth reading:

"Debt as stated in June.....	$79,400
Interest on ditto	12,946
County's half of bridge debentures.	5,000
Interest on ditto.....	1,350
Railway bonds.....	22 000
Interest on ditto.....	6,600
Total.....	$74,636"

Thus the Review says that the County debt is now $26,600, and if the County give $25,000 towards the Chemong Railway and the Mud Lake Bridge, the debt would not be ($25,000+$29,400=) $54,400 but $74,636, or in other words, a man who borrows the thousand pound as above owes three thousand. Mr. Review try your hand on the national debt of the United States and see what you make it; your calculation would certainly astonish the natives and I fear greatly diminish the value of greenbacks. Again, Mr. Review, after you wrote that stunning article "County Liability" did not you write the letter of "A Ratepayer," asking for the information which you so satisfactorily give? Shallow again, Doctor, but as your cunning is as harmless as your little pills, I leave you.

ANOTHER RATEPAYER.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

DEAR SIR,—As I know that you take an interest in what is going on in this Township, I take the liberty of requesting you to publish the following in your paper:

The Plowing match in connection with the Otonabee Agricultural Society came off on Saturday, 26th instant, on the homestead of the late John Blezard, Esq., now owned by his son, Mr. Thomas Blezard, a noble scion of the old stock. The day was all that could be desired, and after a keen contest the following were declared victors by the Judges:

Men—1st, David Henderson; 2nd, John Cameron; 3rd, John Hunter; 4th, Thomas Walker; 5th, James Gillespie.

Boys—1st, Richard Elmhirst; 2nd, Thos. M. Miller; 3rd, John Henderson; 4th, Jas. McFie.

Alex. Campbell, Esq., Merchant, Keene, Messrs. Campbell, McNeil & Co., Otonabee, and George Evans, Esq., Otonabee, gave a very handsome extra prize in addition to the prizes given by the Society. All interested were agreed that the Judges gave an impartial decision. After the plowing was over, the Judges, Committee of Management and Plowmen partook of a good dinner, liberally provided by Mr. Blezard, who also furnished lunch during the day to all on the ground. We had a very pleasant day, and the Plowmen did their work well. I believe they will be able, yes, are now able to compete with the far-famed Scotch and Yorkshire Plowmen. As the sun began to go down in the West each started for home, well pleased with the day and all he saw.

AN EYE WITNESS.

Otonabee, October 28, 1867.

HESSAN AND ENGLAND'S CHAMPION.—We hear that Hessan has again challenged England's Champion for a very heavy sum, but whether the challenge will be accepted or not we cannot say, negotiations are still pending, and should it come to a battle, our advice to all parties concerned is to be well supplied with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer." the finest thing for bruises cut, it soon cures sprains, and flesh wounds, and relieves pain almost immediately. Price 25 cents per Bottle. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers in easing Coughs, colds, and all Bronchial affections, and clearing the affected, has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them has steadily increased for the twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation positessing such beneficial results as these Wafers. When taken in season the effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

The friends of John S. McDonald, in Cornwall, have requested him to allow a full-sized portrait of himself to be taken for the public hall. He has consented. This is a step in the right direction as it is one way of keeping in remembrance our public men; and we certainly believe that for the many battles for reform he has fought, he deserves to be held in remembrance. It is true that we have a little cause to find fault with him joining the coalition, still we believe he is a Reformer in principle; but though he were one of the worst of our public men who had served the country for as many years, a memento would be no evil, as it would serve to warn our young politicians lest they run on the breakers that may have ruined the subject of it.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are suitable and safe aperient to the child: drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics. Each box contains the Genuine U. W., who are the sole proprietors. Sold by Bigelow, Ham and D. Stott, Bowmanville, and Medicine Dealers everywhere.

A NEW AND GRAND EPOCH IN MEDICINE!—Dr Maggiel is the founder of a new Medical System! The quantitative, whose vast internal doses enfeeble the stomach and paralyse the bowels, must give precedence to the man who restores health and appetite with from one to two of his extraordinary Pills, and cures the most virulent sores with a box or so of his wonderful and all-healing Salve.

These two great specifics of the Doctor are fast superceding all the stereotyped nostrums of the day. Extraordinary cures by Maggiel's Pills and Salve have opened the eyes of the public to the inefficiency of the (so-called) remedies of others, and upon which people have so long blindly depended. Maggiel's Pills are not of the class that are swallowed by the dozen, and of which every box full taken creates an absolute necessity for another. One or two of Maggiel's Pills suffices to place the bowels in perfect order, tone the stomach, create an appetite, and render the spirits light and buoyant! There is no griping, and no reaction in the train of delicate females. Ulcerous and eruptive diseases are literally extinguished by the disinfectant power of Maggiel's Salve. In fact, it is here announced that Maggiel's Bilious, Dyspeptic and Diarrhœa Pills cure where all others fail. While for Burns, Scalds, Chilblains, Cuts, and all Acrotisms of the skin, Maggiel's Salve is infallible. Sold by J. HAYDOCK, 11 Pine street, New York, and all Druggists, at 25 cents per box.

"COUNTERFEITS!—Buy no Maggiel Pills or Salve with a little pamphlet inside the box—They are bogus. The genuine have the name of J. Haydock on the box with name of J. Maggiel, M. D. The genuine have the Pills surrounded with white powder."

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

The Ætna's system of insurance is a most excellent one, as indicated by its great success; and there can be no doubt that its large and rapidly increasing business—doing as much in one month as most Companies do in a whole year—with all its investments drawing nearly double the rate of interest obtainable in Europe, will enable it, at all times, to declare large dividends to policy-holders.

Observe the difference:—While most Companies accommodate the insured with half credit for a few years only, after which full payments are required, the Ætna's half-credit runs throughout life, but does not accumulate as a debt upon the policy.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. He tried everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

5. That for the purpose of forming a sinking fund for the payment of the said Debentures and the interest at the rate aforesaid to become due thereon, an equal special rate of four mills in the dollar, shall, in addition to all rates to be raised, levied and collected in each year, upon the ratable property in said Municipality, during the continuance of the said Debentures or any of them.

6. That the said sum of Five Thousand Dollars being the amount to be contributed by the said Municipality of the Village of Ashburnham for the purpose in the recital mentioned, be paid over to the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Railway and Mining Company, on the passing of the first train over the Railway aforesaid from Cobourg to the Village of Ashburnham And provided that should the Rice Lake Bridge not be made permanent on the day of the passage of the first train, as aforesaid, the Railway Company is to give their guarantee that the same shall be made permanent within three years from the passage of said train.

And whereas, it is necessary that the By-law should receive the assent of the electors of this Municipality before the final passing thereof; and that the Council of this Municipality should by this By-law fix the day and hour and place for taking the votes of the said electors, and should also name a Returning Officer to take the votes of said electors at every such place.

Be it therefore enacted, that the said votes shall be taken on the nineteenth day of November, 1867, in the Town Hall of said village at the hour of ten o'clock in the forenoon, and James Stratton shall be Returning Officer.

3. That said Debentures shall be made payable in ten years at the furthest, from the day hereinafter mentioned for this By-law to take effect, at the office of the Treasurer of the said Municipality, and shall have attached to them Coupons for the payment of interest.

4. That the said Debentures shall bear interest at and after the rate of six per centum per annum, from the date thereof, which interest shall be payable half yearly, on the First day of February and the First day of August in each year, at the office of the Treasurer of the said Municipality

5. That for the purpose of forming a sinking fund for the payment of the said Debentures and the interest at the rate aforesaid to become due thereon, an equal special rate of one half a mill in the dollar, shall, in addition to all rates to be raised, levied and collected in each year, upon the ratable property in said Municipality, during the continuance of the said Debentures or any of them.

6. AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and all Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Ringworm, Tetter, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Mercurial Diseases, Dropsy, and all Diseases that arise from Impure Blood.

CHARLTON, Ind., 6th June, 1866.

J. C. AYER & Co., Gents: I feel it my duty to acquaint you with your Sarsaparilla has done for me. I have been troubled with a humor in my blood for years. It would appear in various forms on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and discovered me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my neck and ears with one sore, which was painful and beyond description. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was induced to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), for I knew from your reputation that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful to over a month, and used about three bottles. Now and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agencies of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Roses or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

DR. Robert H. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 15th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which accompanied an inveterate humor, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous case of Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Erysipelas by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Reuben Sloan of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a bad case—swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over four years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumors, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. S. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many females of the worst of leucorrhœas by it, and some others of the most painful tumors caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulceration itself was soon cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Edward S. Harrow, of Newbury, Ala., writes, "A dangerous cancerous tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but cutting—the usual relief—but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remains."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 20th August, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and report to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Diseases. One of my patients had Syphilitic sores on his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla soundly taken, cured him in five months. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the discase would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, not of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from the pains in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from the female, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, C. V. LARIMER, M.D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 4th July, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and struck in me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. REMAN.

John Y. Gotchall, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Kopp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Pits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia.

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this Sarsaparilla, which arouses the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has been required by the multitudes of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the evidences of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the deceitful history of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system: at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Louis Jacopine, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be applied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Disease Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the Blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. In the Western Country where this Great Remedy has been in use for a short time, it has indeed effected cures of the most Marvellous Cures, ever recorded in the annals of Historical Medicine. Such being the case, in addition to its former renown and celebrity, we defy humanity to dispute the fact, that this, the Great Shoshonees Remedy, in connection with the Shoshonees Vegetable Restorative Pills, is the Remedy of Remedies of the 19th Century, and the greatest boon ever laid at the alter of suffering humanity.

Poetry.

INTEMPERANCE.

What tongue can tell the misery
That drink has caused to me,—
Once happy as the summer rill
That make the flowery lea.
Now all my mirth is hushed and still,
As Arctic's frozen sea,—
The murmurs of the happy past
Are all that's left to me.

[illegible]
And mother now hears I,—
Nor dare I hope again to hear
Until the day I die.
The loss of wealth I grieve not for,
Though gained from many a vein;
Contrition, and treasures greater far
Has strong drink snatched from me.

And, worse than all, though I have been
Where fell the great and brave,
And I for one would rather die
Than live to be a slave;
And though I've fought the demon drink
With all my might and main,—
Yet still believe that I'm content
To hug his frightful chain.

Great God, thy power is infinite:
Whether my sins may be,—
Oh, see my helpless agony,
And set the prisoner free.
And then, perchance, when much forgiven,
In love I'll more abound,
And sing that, through thy heavenly love,
"The farthest lost is found."

CONSOLATION.

BY MRS. MARY C. VAUGHAN.

I knelt beside the coffin of my first born. I showered kisses on the cold brow, so white and softly, and on the lips that shut over eyes that had always I asked so lovingly into mine. Oh, the bitter sorrow, the fearful agony, the unforgiving rebellion of that hour! I heard nothing—nothing but that rigid shrouded form. All else I hated; even Him who had stricken me with this great sorrow. I hated little Alice, and I thrust off the clinging grasp of her small arms; and for the first time. I repulsed my noble husband, as, with tender caress and loving words, he tried to win from my right. The physician spoke a few words to him in a low tone, and then, leaning on the good man's arm, he sadly and reluctantly went out, and left me alone with the dead.

Then, still kneeling there, I went back, in memory, and lived over all my life since that child had been given me. Then I knew, for the first time, that I had lived only in him.

I remembered the first dawnings of his baby intellect. The first loving smile that gleamed from out those eyes of wondrous brightness, and brought the cunning dimples to the little round cheeks. I did not forget the impatient and imperious temper that had so early manifested itself, and the whirlwind of baby passion that had awed mother and attendants alike, and established a household tyranny only endurable because of the love for our young tyrant.—And I thought of the sweet penitence which, as he grew older, ever followed these outbursts, and so endeared him to my heart.

At one moment I blamed myself that I had not checked and restrained this fierce temper—at another I bitterly lamented the slight and irregular punishments that I had inflicted; and in the insanity of grief the not unnatural result of an undisciplined heart, I cast myself again across the coffin and pressed my lips wildly to the white lips of my darling, while I called upon him for pardon. Could I be mistaken? I started wildly back, then bent again. It was true! I felt his gentle breath upon my cheek!—And look! that eyelid moves, though so slightly that only a mother's eye would detect it!

He lives! He lives!

I ran to the door to shout the glad tidings! Then back to tear him from the narrow coffin, and with my boy, my living boy, clasped closely to my breast, I meet them as they rush wildly in.

Oh, the fear and the joy! Oh, the agony and the rapture of the hours that followed! At least they gave him into my arms and told me he would live. The shroud, and the coffin, and the grave, were not for my darling. Life bounded in his veins, health came slowly back, and again he looked into his mother's eye and smiled.

Henceforth my life was devoted to him. I ceased to exercise any care, or to perform any duty, to others. My child's room bounded in my universe, and I recognized no claims but his. I coldly spurned my husband's caresses. His love had lost all charm for me. I never observed then how sorrowfully his glance sometimes rested upon me, or thought that the sigh with which he turned, at evening, into the lonely parlor, where once I sat happily beside him, was given to the memory of lost domestic joys. Morning and evening little Alice came and lifted her rosy lips to mine. I kissed her coldly and consigned her to her nurse. And when the faithful creature warned me that her little charge grew pale and thin, and pined for her mamma, and refused to be comforted, I only bade her buy toys to amuse the child, and never let her disturb my darling Harold with her cries.

This blindness remained unbroken until little Alice was stricken down. They told me she was ill, and I tore myself from Harold, and went to the nursery. The little creature lifted up her wasted arms, and with a glad cry, nestled in my bosom. I held the sweet head, with its golden curls, there for a few moments, and even kissed her coldly one or twice, but my thoughts were with my darling. So when my husband came with the physician, I said lightly, that I saw no cause for alarm, and rose to go away, but my husband followed me to the door, and taking me by the hand, he besought me to remain until the doctor had left, "for my own sake, if the child and himself were no longer dear to me." I made no answer, but haughtily resumed my seat, as one who obeys an unwelcome mandate under protest. I heard, without heeding the physician's orders; and when he left the room, and my husband went with him to the door, I escaped again to my darling.

Afterward I visited little Alice at night and morning, and if the nurse came to tell me that she wept for me at other times, I went, sullenly, because the physician had said she must be indulged, and my husband, finding entreaties and menaces, had commanded me to spare [illegible] I felt that my presence [illegible] and [illegible] good, [illegible] had [illegible] it of him it [illegible].

But, thought I, who [illegible] was nearly recovered, and who was passionately fond of his sister, now resented upon returning to the nursery. Day after day he sat by the little one, and played with her, and held her hot and wasted hands, and subdued his imperious tones to the gentle murmur which, alone, she could hear.

And because Harold was there I, too followed. And then I did not leave my Alice to the alone, or with only servants beside her; I shared her father's night watch, for he never left her but to attend to the urgent calls of his business, and not by her side all day.

But I was not sorry when death came and snatched the tender little flower from off the parent stem, and they buried its beauty and sweetness out of my sight. She was gone, and there was nothing now between me and my darling. He had loved Alice while she lived, but now he had only me to love, and he was all my own.

From that hour I became the bond slave of my boy. I ministered to his selfishness and all his evil passions. I allowed him to tyrannize, not only over me, but every member of the household, and he had only to simulate one of his fierce paroxysms of rage to obtain any indulgence, no matter how deleterious or hurtful, which he chose to claim.

He was a despot whose will no one dared dispute, save only his father. One day, after exhausting his rage upon me and the servants, because we would not procure him some article which it was not only improper for him to have, but impossible to obtain, he fled shrieking to his father and demanded of him the indulgence. His father calmly assured him that he could not be gratified and on his proceeding to reason with him, the little fury snatched from his hand the hand the rare and costly book which he was reading, threw it upon the grate and stamped it down upon the glowing coals. Then, when it was beyond recovery, he turned and looked proudly in his father's face.

I should have committed impossibilities then, to procure the thing required, but my husband, still calm and stern, took the offender by the arm and led him to his own room; and after a few words of reproof, consigned him to a darkened closet.

I dared not interfere while my husband remained because, by a gesture which I well understood, he had forbidden me.—But no sooner had he left the house than I hastened to relieve the culprit, and to soothe his anger (for his punishment had brought no softer feeling) by presents and caresses. Henceforth his reign was more completely established than before. And, henceforth, also, the last remnant of my influence over my husband was destroyed.—He never attempted again to control the child, nor to interfere with me. In a serious manner he pointed out, for the last time, the wrong I was doing, and left the responsibility and all the consequences upon me. Though living in the same house, we became almost entirely estranged, and I seldom met him except at our almost silent meals.

When Harold was fifteen, my husband died. I had long ceased to love him, and for years we had been as strangers. Yet I watched by his sick bed, and stood over him while he struggled with the destroyer. Afterwards I heard myself spoken of as a most exemplary wife—one whose example was of precious value to those about to assume matrimonial responsibilities. I felt ashamed, but that very shame kept me silent under the punishment of this undeserved praise.

My husband died rich, and he left all to me, with the request that only an income, which he named, should be given to Harold, until he arrived at the age of twenty-five.

At first, I intended to make this request my law, and while Harold remained with me it was easy. But at seventeen he entered College. He was he became, at once, a member of the wildest clique of rule-breaking youths. The income which his father had assigned was but as a drop of water in the great ocean of his extravagance. I tried for once to be firm, but I shrank from the disgrace of unpaid debts; and I shrank still more from the threats of desertion and of crime which Harold well knew how to employ. Once he travelled three hundred miles, without food or rest, and burst into my room, with a glittering knife in his hand, with which he threatened to take his own life, unless I gave him a large sum—which I had written to refuse; and at another time, a sham letter from a college friend informed me that he had enlisted as a common seaman, on his occasion, and extorted a large sum to purchase his release. And yet I believe he loved me for he would come to my feet with the sweet penitence of childhood, sometimes, and beg to be forgiven, with solemn promises of amendment.

At twenty-one he left college, a brilliant scholar, and with high honors, in spite of all his wildness and his real crimes. He came home to me, and I thought him all my own once more. But I soon found that another love filled his heart. I cannot define the strange jealously which filled my soul when he brought his wife, a pretty, pussy thing, and ordered me to accept her as my daughter. Because only of that he would stay with me, I forced myself to receive her with simulated kindness, and we lived on together—wretchedly, of course, but still together, for three years.

Until the novelty of his new relations were off Harold was a tender husband.—But the time came when his wife was the victim of his fierce paroxysms of rage.—She had no strength of character, and she worshipped the man who thus oppressed her, and, day by day, I saw her pale and wan, and spiritless, under the infliction.

One day there was a fiercer quarrel than ever before, and Harold, for the first time, so far got himself as to raise his hand against the fragile creature. I heard her fall to the floor with a sad shiver, and Harold rushed from the house. We carried her to her bed, and before the next morning dawned she lay there cold and still—the dead mother of a dead babe.

After this, Harold went downward very fast. He spent all his time with wild companions, and the servants as they carried him to his room late at night, whispered to themselves of still stronger potations. My property had become much diminished by his insane extravagance, and, though I dared refuse him a thing in my power, I was not always able, at all, to supply his demands. And as from drunkenness he rushed into other crimes, and became the companion of dissolute and depraved men, such as scruple at no crime for the gratification of their passions or their appetites. He was not yet twenty five when they brought me word that he was in prison for murder!

My son, my Harold, a murderer! I could not believe it, but I hurried to him, resolved to sacrifice my last dollar to set him free. I went with love and such only as a fond mother could feel, and was met with curses and with assurances that my fatal indulgence had brought him there. I heard and bared, but death would have been safer to, for conscience whispered that Harold told the truth.

It is enough that no effort was spared. The great of lawyers were employed, and the land ransacked for witnesses, but in vain. His guilt was proved, and he was sentenced to die.

Then I did all that was left me. I cheered his remaining days as well as I was able, and counted with agony the swift hours. But he was hard, and cold, and defiant almost to the last.

All his last night of earth I sat beside him. As the morning dawned, he threw himself into my arms, and, all softened by the near reality of his fate, he sobbed out his penitence so of old. And then we sat until the officers of the law came to bear him away. They clothed him in the garments of the grave; they pinioned his arms and prepared him for the gallows. All this I witnessed from a corner of a cell, until they were about to lead him forth. I heard the shouts of the crowd beyond the jail, hungry for my Harold's blood, and knew that in a few moments they would glut their foul appetites. Then I threw myself upon the officers, and tore wildly at the bonds which confined my child. They gathered round me and were about bearing me away, when I shrieked aloud——

* * * * * *

Gentle arms were around me, and a soft voice whispered in my ear.

"Come away, Anne, you are worn out with your weary watching. Little Alice is weeping for mamma, and you can do no more for our dead boy. See how calm and peaceful he sleeps."

It was but a fearful dream that I had beside the coffin of my child. Not until long afterwards did my husband know why I had kissed that peaceful brow so lovingly and so fervently replied, "Thank God, with me, my husband, that He took him from us in his youth, before the evil days came."

I went with a heart almost glad to my room; and there, with my little Alice, alive and well, and nestling to her rosy slumbers close to my heart, I slept the sweetest sleep that has come to me in many weary days. Afterward I never murmured. I felt that he who took my innocent child perhaps and taught me, in a vision, what might have been the fate of one so wayward, if entrusted longer to my feeble guidance. Thenceforward I have known and felt that "He doeth all things well."

HOW TO GET RID OF RATS.—There is a public house on the St. John called Rat Tavern. The name originated thus:—An American was travelling up the river during a thaw in winter, when now and were nearly knee deep. Late in the afternoon he came to the tavern cold, wet, and hungry, and called for dinner. He was told rather roughly by the landlord that the dinner hour had passed, and he must wait till tea. He then asked for a cold lunch, as he was faint and hungry. After some grumbling, this was brought. The stranger ate and asked for the bill. 'Fifty cents,' was the reply, in a growling tone—'dinner is a quarter, but a lunch is out of season, and you must pay fifty cents.' The traveller paid the bill, and sat down to dry himself. Soon a cheese was brought in by the maid very much mutilated by the rats. The whole race of rats received a reply of above from the enraged landlord. 'And why do you keep rats,' said the Yankee, 'I can give you a recipe that I can warrant you will keep every rat away.' 'Ah! and how much will you charge?' 'Oh, about fifty cents.' The landlord, somewhat ease placent, returned the half dollar; 'And now,' said he, 'for the recipe.' 'Well, sir,' said the Yankee, 'whenever a rat comes to you cold, wet, hungry, give him a cold lunch, and charge him half a dollar, and I'll be bound he'll never come again.'

A SENSIBLE WISH.—A witty fellow slipped down on an icy pavement. While sitting he muttered, 'I have no desire to see the town burned down, but I sincerely wish the streets were laid in ashes.'

A pretty and well dressed young lady, after looking at several pair of gloves, lavender colored, in a store lately, shocked the clerk by asking him which pair he thought the 'lavenderest.'

Begging has been reduced to a science in Colombus. The latest application was from a little girl at a street corner, who earnestly pleaded for a 'chaw o' terbacker for her sick and dying mother.'

The bride's veil originated in the Anglo Saxon custom of performing the marriage under a square piece of cloth held at each corner by a tall man over the bridegroom and bride to conceal her blushes.

Enforcement of a Grave.

We have laughed heartily over the following ludicrous story told over their cups by a number of the Bar adjourned:—

A number of years ago, when Michigan was new country, Livingston, county of——, there lived a family by the name of Clayton, and one called Perkins also, as a great many others.

Pete Clayton was a tall, fine looking fellow—[illegible] of our backwoods—and, of course, 'it' that too in his stocking.

Pete had taken a shine to Miss Sally Perkins, and it was thought by many that they were engaged but the day when the knot was to be tied had not as yet been divulged.

In the month of August, 1848, Joyce's circus came through their town for the first time, and in fact it was the first circus that had ever passed that way, and there were a great many that had not seen one. When the important day arrived the town was filled to overflowing with a motley crowd, of course, and every young fellow had his gal. Now Pete wanted to get married on the coming Christmas, but Sally wished to have it put off until next spring. When the ticket waggon was opened the tent was filled in a hurry. Pete and Sally had been looking through the side shows and they were late getting in, and the performance had already commenced. They walked the entire ring, trying to find a seat, and although they could seat two thousand people, every seat was full.

'Never mind,' said Sal, 'I'd just as lief stand up.'

But the gallant Pete couldent think of it, and said;—

'Wait a minit, I'll get you a chair,' and off he started leaving Sall alone.

Just at this moment the clown came in, dressed in his usual, costume, and dancing around the ring, stopped right in front of Sal and began to sing:—

'Oh Sally is the gal for me,'

This caused Sallyto blush, for she thought that the clown was looking at her. As She stood near the ring, of course she had the view of those lower seats behind her, and as usual on such occasions the clown cracks his jokes at the offenders until they take the hint and find a seat, but she said that she had rather stand up. At this the clown commenced his jokes, remarking to the ring master:

'There's a chance for me now.'

'A chance for you?'

'Yes, don't you see that girl has lost her beau, and she is looking at me, I know, and turning three or four somersaults, he, stopped directly in front of Sal and began to sing:

'O, Sally is the gal for me,
I would not have no other,
And if Sal died to-morrow night,
I'd marry Sally's mother.'

This evidently meant for her, raised Sals dander, and she burst out with.

'I'm the gal for you, am I? Marry my mother, would you? If my feller was here he would wallop you for that! I wouldent stay here another minit—nor neither would any decent people either!' Saying which she rushed out of the tent amid roars of laughter.

The clown, assuming a comical attitude, remarked to the ring master that his grandfather was a remarkable man and so was his grandmother, too but that gal beat all his forefathers.

At this juncture Pete rushed in, closely followed by Sal, and jumping into the ring he squared off at the clown, and said;

'I'll teach you to insult any female under my charge!' and he let fly at his opponent and taking him plump in the face sent him to the mother earth, at which he jumped on him and commenced kicking him unmercifully. Sally standing on the outside of the ring, clapped her hands and sang out, "That's it, Pete, give him jessie, and we'll get married at Christmas, sure!"

At this moment the ring master and three or four others caught Pete and commenced to thrash him, when Pete's friends interfered and a general free fight ensued, which completely broke up the circus.

BEYOND REMEDY.—A well-known official, while doing his duty, last week, delivering warrants of removal, had a notice to warn out an old watch-maker whom he did not know had died some days previous, and while proceeding to his residence, he was accosted by a young lass (William is always good friends with the lasses) when the following conversation took place:—Lass—'Fat's this for on the day, Wm. I' William—'Nae very muckle. I'm just gane to summon oot my auld acquaintance, Mr. B——.' Lass—'Ya'll no need; he's summoned oot already.' William—'Fa in a' the earth cud a summon'd him oot fan I has the principal copy I' Lass—'Death, William!' William, after giving his head a scratch, with a sigh replied, 'Aweil, Aweil, he's done me oot o' sixpence.'

CAN'T SPELL THAT.—The editor of the Providence Journal recently had his patience sorely tried. Hear him, and sympathize with him:—'We can stand almost anything in the way of correspondence; but we cannot undertake to correct communication that spell cases with a y, and constitution with a k—unless, of course, they are in poetry—the proverbial and authorized 'license' of which, we think, is greater at this time than it ever was before.

SHORTENING A BOARDER.—'Does smoking offend you?' asked a landlord of his new-arrived boarder. 'Not at all, sir.' 'I am very glad to hear it, as you will find your chimney to be given to that practice.'

PROFITABLE PAIRS.—Advertities are blessings in disguise. We know a man who has lived six months on a sprained ankle. He belongs to a half-a-dozen societies, and draws four dollars a week from each. He once spent a whole summer at Saratoga on a sore throat.

THE COMMONS OF CANADA.

This august body met yesterday at Ottawa. The few hours between their meeting and our going to press, prevents our giving much information of their doings this week. The news arrived here during the day that Mr. Galt had resigned, for private reasons, but that he will continue to support the government. We cannot yet give Mr. Galt's reasons, nor may we ever be able to do so. He may have felt that his bank of issue scheme has to be remodified, and that consequently he might, if he remained in office, be forced into antagonism to his former self, and hence the prudent measure of resignation. To-day the speech from the throne is to be delivered, and then, the Leader says, both Houses will adjourn till Monday. The names of Messrs. Jas. Cockburn, Hon. J. Rose, and Hon. A. Gray, are mentioned in connection with the speakership of the House of Commons. Government has not yet declared their choice.

His Excellency, the Governor, has been pleased to appoint the Hon. Joseph Cowdon, Senator, speaker of the Senate. Many of the members of the Senate and also of the House of Commons, have reached Ottawa.

ROME.

We can give very little more than the usual report concerning Italy. The people are still for a united country, under one king, and large numbers of volunteers are said to be with Garibaldi, in the vicinity of the eternal city. French troops are also again in Italy, and a demand has been made by Napoleon for the expulsion of Garibaldi from the country. It is rumored that the king of Italy has also sent an army towards Rome, and declares that France has violated the treaty by occupying Rome with troops. Prussia is believed to sympathise with the Italian movement, but no one can divine results. The difficulty may be quelled for a season, but the voice of Italy is against any compromise short of the Pope resigning his ten-porral power. It is an anomaly to see one claiming such high and divinely appointed power, maintaining that power by the sword, and that the sword of strangers. He must have forgotten the word of the Son of Peace: "All they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." It is also vain to maintain for any length of time, any power that is contrary to the will of the whole people, for we are told that even the soldiers of the Pope refused to take up arms against the volunteers under Garibaldi. If this be so, the wisdom of France would be to influence Pius the Ninth to turn his attention to labors of love instead of deeds of war.

The very latest news is that Garibaldi was attacked by the papal troops, aided by the French troops, and forced to retire. He gave himself up to the Italians. The telegrams will be found in another column.

IMPORTANT MATTER BEFORE THE COUNCIL.—At the last sitting of the Town Council a By-law was introduced to grant town debentures to the amount of $50,000 to the Cobourg, Peterborough & Marmora Railway and Mining Company to induce them to construct a railway from Peterboro or Ashburnham to Mud Lake. Messrs. Burnham, Stevenson, Toole and others expressed their conviction of the absolute necessity of having railway communication with Mud Lake, but desired that the By-law should lie on the table for one week to give time for considering the matter more fully. We understand that the By-law will again be brought up on Monday next.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

The following is a "spiked despatch" to the New York Herald:

QUEENSTOWN, Oct. 29.—Garibaldi has given up the struggle and has surrendered to the Papal troops. The Papal troops have taken possession of Monte Rotondo. The Garibaldian headquarters position is in the field in plumed as a guest having Rome, and in full view of the Eternal City. There are no Papal troops between the land Rome, as the soldiers of the Pope, who have been steadily falling back, have retreated within the line of the fortifications of the city. Before their retirement from the field they burned all the bridges over the river. The Roman peasants take no interest in the progress of affairs. They are engaged at the plough and tending the flocks as usual.—Garibaldi's men do not therefore with them and respect their property. They do not take away sheep or cows, or any of the agricultural people or chattels in the vicinity of the camp or on the roads leading thereto with the exception of the wood of the fences. They behave indeed well.

TRIESTE, NEAR ROME, Oct. 31.—All the Garibaldian horse left here to-day, escorting the Papal military prisoners, taken in the late actions, en route towards Florence.—The prisoners were insulted at the stations by the people and some confusion ensued, but the Italian police restored order.

FLORENCE, Oct. 31.—A battalion of Italian Garibaldian volunteers from the city which had just mustered for the frontier, has been detained at Lucca on the way by Italian troops. The King's government has ordered that the revolutionary relief committees here, and in the provinces, shall be closed. Garibaldi demonstrations continue to be made daily in all the chief towns of Italy.

LONDON, Nov. 2 (noon).—There is no longer any doubt that the French troops have entered the holy city. The Italian reserve has been called out.

It is reported on good authority that the government of Prussia has pledged its support to Italy, in the event of a rupture of the friendly relations between that country and France. It is known that there is a crisis in the relations between France and Prussia, which causes much uneasiness and apprehension in monetary circles.

LATER.—LONDON, Nov. 2 (3 p. m.).—Gen. Menabrea, the prime minister of Italy, in a note justifies the advance of the Italian troops into the Papal territories. He says that the dignity of the Italian government and the vindication of the September treaty by the French required this movement.

DUBLIN, Nov. 2 (noon).—The trial of Gen. Warren for complicity in Fenianism was concluded last evening. He was found guilty of treason-felony.

FLORENCE, Nov. 2, midnight.—Garibaldi still remains at Monte Rotondo, to which place he retired when he heard of the landing of the French and the advance of the Italian troops, deeming it hazardous to make any attack on Rome, under there circumstances, with the insufficient force under his command. He has concentrated all the bands of volunteers at Monte Rotondo, where he has taken up a strong position and gone into camp. His men have since been actively engaged in throwing up entrenchments, and watch the course of events.

To the summons of the King to disarm, Garibaldi replies by refusing to disband his army or give up his enterprise against Rome unless a change is made in the present reactionary ministry, which will put the Government of Italy in accord with the national will.

The Emperor Napoleon has made proposition to the King of Italy to submit to the contract of Rome and the inhabitants of the Papal Territories, the settlement of the Roman question by popular vote, but the Italian government declared it unable to consent to the solution of a question involving the [illegible] of the whole nation [illegible] decided.

There are only two French regiments in Rome. Large bodies of troops are continually leaving Toulon for Civita Vecchia.—The Papal forces will assume the offensive immediately.

LONDON, Nov. 4, 3 p. m.—Late despatches from Florence state that the vote of the towns in the Province of Rome was unanimously for Italy.

It is now reported in Florence that the Emperor Napoleon requires King Victor Emmanuel to expell Garibaldi, and if that is done Napoleon will retire.

BERLIN, Nov. 4, noon.—Court Von Blamarck says officially, to-day, that the Government of Prussia is neutral at present on the Roman question.

LONDON, Nov. 4, noon.—It now seems that the proposition to settle the Roman question by a submission to the popular vote of the Papal provinces, was not suggested by the Emperor Napoleon, but was the spontaneous idea of the Italian, the Prussian and the French governments.

LONDON, Nov 4.—Despatches by the Red Sea cable announce that the war vessels and transports with troops on board, forming the first squadron of the Abyssinian expedition have left Aden, at the mouth of the Red Sea, for the coast of Abyssinia and Bombay Parke, Viceroy of Egypt, has offered his assistance to England and has despatched a corps of native troops to Abyssinia, to join the British expedition.

The Ballad of Young John Gray.

We have received through the post-office, a brochure of 8vo pages in a sort of doggerel verse, bearing as the title of "The ballad of young John Grey, by the ghost of Lord Byron, and sent by a Student at law." Where printed or from what quarter the pamphlet emanates, we are entirely ignorant.

The poem purports to be a sketch of certain doings in Prescott in connection with the late parliamentary election, and describes one of the subjects of the poem as a person—

"Who carried a stick—ash here—and down
It often came with patents might,
And divil blight in all the town . . . . .
Durst say the stick was not in the right."

This poem goes on to recount the scene which occurred in the Catholic Church at Prescott the Sunday after the election, eulogising "the gallant Gray" for the part he played on the occasion.

We have heard that several libel suits have been commenced against certain gentlemen in Prescott by the Rev Mr Rosier, but we know not whether the pamphlet under notice is the cause of these actions. We should think not, however, as there is nothing of a libellous nature in the poem. It is rather sarcastic—that is all—but when a clergyman undertakes to play an active part in a political contest, he ought certainly not to complain if told of his interference even in rather strong language.—Recorder.

THE ROYAL PLATE.—The London Times gives prominence to the following statement: It appears that the gold and silver plate at Windsor Castle, for the use of Her Majesty and the court, weighs nearly thirty tons, and the value may be roughly estimated at £3,000,000. It is secured in stone chambers with vaulted ceilings which form part of the original building, and are thoroughly proof against burglars. Among the plate is a single dish, one of silver gilt let, of solid gold, made to order in George IV., and representing all the orders, both domestic and foreign, which that Sovereign wore, or who entitled to wear; it is estimated at £3,000. Grand and magnificent as the assortment is, any person will be astounded to hear that very little of it, indeed, is old or curious, most of the plate used by former Sovereigns having been melted down and remodelled by George IV., very much of it, consequently, is tawdry and modern, as might naturally be expected from the author of the Pavilion of Brighton.

GARIBALDI'S PROCLAMATION.

Garibaldi, before his arrest on board the Lagonero steamer, drew up the following proclamation, which was found on his person when he was taken prisoner:

Romans, the moment has arrived for a final struggle between the tyrannical power of the Vatican and the liberty of Italy. That patriarch of tyrannies, the Papacy, has incurred detestation of the whole world, and has now become the [illegible] of the [illegible] of her glorious mission. According to the desire of many friends, I have resumed the command of the volunteers. I have accepted it [illegible] and without conditions, with the promise that a steamer should be sent for me to take me to the continent. As proofs the noble object whose cause is a chance to justify has resorted to the precautions of hired assassins to prevent my return. In that situation I only ask my fellow-citizens to continue in the sacred path in which they have trusted me with the calm and majesty of a nation which has the consciousness of its power. To the army and the people I spoke of the discipline when they, indignant at the cowardly servility of those who govern us, demanded to be led to Rome. I told the soldiers that they should reserve their bayonets for a more glorious occasion, and that for the necromancies of the Pope the stocks of their muskets were sufficient. Notwithstanding the good will of evil which weighs over our land there is one fact evident to all: that is, the impotence fraternity of all the robust elements of the nation, army, people, and volunteers. Where is he who should cast discord among these brothers? And when Italy shall see all her children united for her redemption those few wizards who pause [illegible] shall disappear.

I therefore repeat, you must prosecute the redemption of Rome as if [illegible] and, if you think my aid is necessary you must take steps to release me.

BANKING.

The run on the banks of the west which has just set aided, though it never amounted to a panic was the result not only of the weight of the banks of Canada has ever been tested. This important fact should be remembered when we consider that every demand made has been met without hesitation. A run is the best of a bank's strength. It is commonly said of a bank which is supposed to be weak, that "it could not stand a run." This remark, we have reason to believe, has been made, and freely, during the last week, respecting several western institutions. Their fall was not definitely expected to follow the suspension of the Commercial Bank, and in one quarter especially, high expectations were built on the probability of this taking place. There is a way of speaking of the west in certain parts of the Dominion which argues very little acquaintance with what has transpired during the last few years. It is no uncommon thing, in Montreal, for example, to hear the west put down as "poverty-stricken" "unsound," an "rotten." Business is said to be done on borrowed capital, banks are implored to be liberal, farmers are set down as a wretched class, whose property is eaten up with mortgages. The correct opinion is that there is no wealth and where enough in Montreal, and perhaps Quebec; for in Toronto, Hamilton and such places, everything is done and delicate. To those people, and it is to be feared they form a large majority of the population of the mercantile metropolis, it must have been a foregone conclusion, that the fall of the Commercial would be a signal to the stoppage of all the other western banks. It must then be matter of profound astonishment to them, as it is to those of pride to us, that these western banks, our home institutions, are proving themselves worthy of every possible confidence by standing the severest storm that has ever blown over the financial atmosphere of Canada; and not that this storm has subsided, and a calm reigns can be taken of the startling events that have recently transpired, it strikingly that the following conclusions may very properly be drawn:—

1. The Western Banks have proved themselves worthy of the confidence both of their holders and depositors; and they are entitled to the confidence of the people of the west in the question arises, with whom shall money be deposited? We say there are reasons enough and better this ground. The deposits made in the Western Banks are kept among the [illegible] of the west. [illegible] of the west. Further, it is well known, do not keep the money of depositors lying idle in their vaults; else they could pay no interest. They lend it, and the question is, to whom do they lend it? There is one bank which has large western deposits, and it is well known that it does not lend much of those deposits to the men who are carrying on the business of the west. Where it lends these deposits is best known to its authorities, but certain it is, that by far the larger part of the money it gathers from the western agencies is taken clean away out of the Province. But the deposits of the Western Banks are employed in carrying on western business, and hence it is reasonable that they should have the preference, now that they have proved themselves to be safe and strong.

2. But some persons will say, is not the Bank of Montreal the Government Bank, and has it not the largest capital of any bank in the country? Very true, but neither of these prove the bank to be safer and stronger than others. The Bank of Upper Canada was the Government Bank, yet it was the first of the chartered banks to fail. Many people believe, and with good reason, that if it had never had the government business it would have been standing to this day. The Commercial Bank has a large capital—a very large capital—the next largest in the country to the Bank of Montreal exceeding by a million dollars that part of the capital of the Bank of British North America which was allotted to Canada. Yet the Commercial Bank has just failed. It is evident, then, that the Government Bank may become insolvent, and even a bank with a large capital may fail. No reliance is to be placed on these things. The great house of Overend had a far larger capital, at one time, than the Bank of Montreal, yet it became insolvent, and finally broke down.

3. The real reason why banks fail is this, they get their funds locked up in unavailable securities, or they make bad debts;—indeed the two generally go together, as they have done with too Upper Canada and the Commercial. No form of business in Canada has proved so dangerous as lending money to railway companies, with the Grand Trunk, Ogdensburgh, the shares of the bankrupt Northern Railway in the Upper Canada; and the immense loan to the Great Western or Detroit and Milwaukee was the last and ultimate cause of the ruin of the Commercial. We have already hinted at the danger that may be incurred by a bank which keeps the accounts of the government. Now the Bank of Montreal keeps the account of the Grand Trunk and the government too, and is thereby exposed to a double danger.

4. The western banks have passed their ordeal through: the Bank of Montreal has had its strength tried, and until it has, depositors never know whether it is worthy of their confidence or not.

5. But, people will say, do not the bank statements show us which bank is the safest? No. These statements are of course enough to bankers and capitalists. The statement of the Commercial was a good one; indeed, according to the resources of specie shown, if that is the test, the Commercial was about the strongest bank in the Province. We have seen a comparative statement of the assets and liabilities of several of the leading banks, including the Bank of Montreal, drawn up with the view of determining which was most worthy of confidence. The test of strength was said to be the per centage of surplus assets over liabilities.—Yet when that test was applied to the Commercial, it came out the best in the list. Nothing, therefore, can be more fallacious than to trust in large capital government deposits, or apparent surplus, as shown in the statements of the Canada Gazette.

We repeat, therefore, that the true test of a bank's strength is the ability to stand a run, and as our western banks have shown their strength in this way it is now reasonable that the money of the western people should be deposited with them, that it may be lent out again to carry by western business. And if any body is tempted to withdraw his money from them and lodge it in the bank which keeps the account of the government, let him remember that, the only two chartered banks which have failed in Canada, have been the Upper Canada, which once had the government and Grand Trunk accounts, and the Commercial, which had a very large capital.

The banks to which we refer, as western institutions, are the following:—The Gore bank, at Royal Exchange, Bank of Toronto, Bank of Commerce, Niagara District.

It was upon the vaunted Canadian, the Gore and the Toronto, that the brunt of the storm fell, and it is they which have so ably sustained the credit of our home institutions.—Journal of Commerce.

From the official statement above it appears that the Banks of the Province, with the exception we [illegible] known to the public, are in a sound and flourishing condition. These that are in bad odor no doubt got into difficulties through imprudent management.—Hamilton Times.

FROM OTTAWA.

The Ministry is in a good deal of trouble over the appointments of Speakers for the Senate and Commons. It is said that the candidates are to be fixed on to-morrow.—Mr. Cauchon, it is expected, will be the nominee for the Senate. Colonel Grey, of New Brunswick, lately Speaker there, is spoken of to night as likely to be brought forward for the Speakership of the Commons. He is strongly supported by members from the Maritime Provinces. Hon. Jas. Cockburn's friends are pressing his claims vigorously.

It is expected the Clerks of the Senate and Commons, and the Black Rod and Sergeant-at-Arms will be appointed to-morrow.

The Governor will proceed to the Senate Chamber, on Wednesday afternoon, summon the Commons to the Bar, and then select three to elect their Speaker, when he will deliver his speech at three o'clock.

Mexican Presidential Election.

The Mexican Presidential Election has resulted in the success of Benito Juarez. Diaz was the only [illegible] candidate, and the friends of Gen. Ortega kept [illegible] for [illegible] though [illegible] other United States [illegible] supporting Juarez. Diaz was not a willing opponent of Juarez as he preferred his present position of first consul, to that of the enemy to the Presidency. It certainly gives him as much power, and he does not run the risk of disbursement. The Mexican election was conducted peaceably; and its history may be summed up in a few words. Juarez did not wish to be President; he was called upon the army to come him to be elected [illegible]; the army prevailed upon the people to vote for him; and he was elected.

It is one of the hardships of the editorial profession that it is working wheels—brains and heart—are not allowed to lag for sickness, or stop for calamity or sorrow. The judge may adjourn his court, the school may close their doors, their shutters, the mourner may wear his fearful tokens and turn friend and stranger from the door; but the journalist must forget before to-morrow the sorrows of to-day, must write gaily and freshly, as a newsmonger, on the drift of the hour, whatever burden has been laid on that hour by Providence, or his duties as a man. It cannot be [illegible] and mourn as the world reads what it has written would never dream of. The public bustle upon its pilot's [illegible] the Indian did upon the man that was cutting hay. He finally gave in his opinion that it was as easy to see the white man now.—Home Journal.

CAUTION.

Many persons neglect their horses' health and condition until it is too late, when at a trifling expense and no trouble the horse might have been saved if attended to in time. To all who may have occasion to use an article of the kind we would confidently recommend "Dar-ley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" it is without doubt the best preparation in use, as thousands who have used it testify.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and painters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure be complete. The newest and most successful method ever discovered. It also did be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured the when of longer standing, and there is no thing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere or small sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Poetry.

THE HARVEST HYMN.

Child of the rolling year! to Thee
Our songs shall rise—whose bounty pours
In many a goodly gift, with free
And lib'ral hand our autumn stores;
No Brighogas of our flock we slay,
Supporting shrine of human race—
But on thy hallowed shrine we lay
Our grateful hearts in sacrifice.

Borne on thy breath the lap of Spring,
[illegible]
The blushing rose, the gentle eglantine,
And Autumn's [illegible]
The ripening seed—the bursting shell,
The golden sheaf, and laden bough,
[illegible]

Maternal therapy, in princely dome,
Here want a gifted lord's behest,
But many a fair and peaceful home
Hath won thy powerful dove a guest;
No grovering tax on our fields glean—
No galling shadow o'er us go lowers—
But rustling stacks of golden corn,
And fields of waving grain are ours.

Safe is thy care the lanscape o'er,
Our flocks and herds securely stray;
No tyrant master claims our shore—
No ruthless robber reads away.
No fierce volcano's withering shower—
No fell simoom, with poisonous breath—
Nor burial guns, with baleful power,
Awake the fiery plagues of death.

And here shall rise our song to Thee,
Here lengenthed rales and pa-tures lie,
And streams go singing wild and free,
Beneath a blue and smiling sky,
Where ne'er was reared a mortal throne,
Where crowned oppressors never trod,
Here—at the throne of heaven alone,
Shall man in reverence bow to God.

Selections.

JAMIE'S HOME.

The twilight was gathering, on a chill February day, when James Cameron left his counting-room and took his way homeward. There was a shade upon his brow, a deeper shade on his spirit. Sadly, very sadly, his thoughts ran back over the past seven months, to loving eyes that used to welcome his coming; a gentle voice that ever came in affection's music to his ears, [illegible] hand that made his home [illegible] with comfort. But those eyes were closed in a sleep that should know no breaking—that loved voice hushed—those hands resting for ever.

Her place was occupied, as to household care and attention, by his motherless sons, and [illegible] of his most precious treasure—a bright, generous-hearted boy of eight years. Two little ones slept beside their mother; and the father's heart turned with a deep yearning towards the boy, his first-born an namesake. His bright brow and eager tones of welcome were the chief attraction in the picture of his home as it rose before his mental vision, and he quickened his tired footsteps, and soon neared his dwelling.

But Jamie did not spring to meet him as he entered. The tea-table stood ready spread, faultless in its neatness; the fire burned cheerfully in the grate; but the full, spare figure of his aunt rose in sharp contrast with the image in his thoughts; and his boy was not at his side.

'Where is Jamie?' he was about to ask, but his question was forestalled by his aunt's quick tones—

'You'll have to do something with that boy, or he will be ruined. He is beyond me.'

To the tired, sorrowing man, this was chafing in the extreme. But he tried to speak calmly.

'Where is he? What has he been doing?'

'I locked him up in your room, to stay till you came home,' was replied. 'He is an utterly disobedient, obstinate and saucy, that I cannot and will not bear it. If I'm to stay here and keep your house and mend all the clothes he contrives to tear and rend and burn, I'm to be treated civilly. He ought to have a severe whipping, and if you value the child's good, you'll give it to him.'

'But, aunt, can you not tell me definitely what he has done?'

'I have told you,' she answered, sharply, and straightening her figure, 'that he won't mind me, and is as saucy as he can be,—and I won't stand it any longer!'

Mr. Cameron was a man of good principles, a kind heart, and a judgment usually clear; but his mind just then was in so perturbed and wearied a state that it was difficult for him to see the right course to pursue. He rose from the easy-chair, where he had thrown himself, and, taking a lamp from the mantel, went slowly upstairs, trying to think what to do.

C nst nt complaints from his aunt fretted him beyond measure. Hitherto he had paid little heed to them, so far as action was concerned. But the thought occurred to him that it might be James was a very trying boy to govern; he knew him to be full of mischief and roguery, though to him he had always been obedient, and no complaint had ever come from the lips of his gentle mother. Mr. Cameron felt irritated with his aunt, his boy, himself; and, half resolved to punish James once for all, he opened his chamber door.

But the child was not to be seen. A terrible fear shook the father's heart, and he stood a moment as if paralyzed. Had his high spirited boy been pushed so far by his aunt's overbearing ways and continual chiding that he could endure it no longer? The bay-window of the room below occurred to his mind. And, though not an easy thing to clamber over it, he knew Jamie's daring spirit would not hesitate to attempt it, should its inclination lead thereto.

But a low, struggling sob met his ear, and, going quickly around the bed, he found his child asleep on the floor, his cheek and wet with tears, his eyelids swollen, and, his hand nervously clasping the daguerreotype of his mother. It was too much for the father's heart. Instantly, his vexation melted away, and tears filled his eyes, as he tenderly lifted the boy. Sitting down with him in his arms, he laid Jamie's head on his shoulder, and, taking the picture, gazed long and earnestly upon it. The artist of the little child wrote its record in fire on his heart's tablet, and he could not, if he would, put it aside. The meek pleadings of those eyes, the earnest tones of his wife, he seemed, 'James, for my sake, deal tenderly with our boy,' came home with a thrilling power.

Jamie awoke, and looked up in his father's face with a half doubting, half pleading expression, it was settled down to him again.

'Tell me frankly, my boy what is the matter with you and [illegible] Mr. Cameron spoke very gently. [illegible] you are disappointed many. But [illegible] say, I could not, for your honesty my son.'

Well did he know how to approach his child. The same manly and unselfish truth that characterized the one was true [illegible] in the other. Regarding James certainly was; with an indignation which unjust treatment quickly aroused, that he could be,—but never mean or false.

'You know, father,' Jamie began, 'Aunt Patty tells me to come directly home from school. Well, to-day, just as school was done, (you know it is prime sleighing,) Mr. Preston came in a double sleigh, with two splendid horses, to take Fred and Willie to ride, and he asked me to go. The boys wanted me to go very much, and I knew you would be willing; so I went. I ran home from Mr. Preston's without stopping there a moment; but as soon as I came in, Aunt Patty began to scold me for not coming home right after school, and ask me if I had been a bad boy and kept in, or all playing. I tried to tell her all about it, but she would not listen to me.—And oh, father, she said mother had spoiled me by her silly indulgence. I could not bear that, father. Indeed I could not—and I said—I guess you won't be troubled, Aunt Betty, with seeing mother again, for she is in heaven, and it'll be a long time before such people as you get there.'—Then she called me the most impudent boy any one was ever plagued with, and said she would teach me better; and she took me up here, and told me to expect a thrashing when you came home, for I richly deserved it. Oh, father, I try to mind her; but she is so strict and fussy and cross. Mother never hurried me,—it was easy to be good with her,—and she used to love me, and call me her good boy, and her blessing. Oh, father, I think we could go to mother now, and let Aunt Patty have the house to herself.' And the boy again burst into tears.

His father tenderly soothed him, and when he was quieted, said gently—

'My boy, you were not to blame for going to ride. I am always glad of your having a reasonable pleasure, as you know. And I certainly do not wonder that you were grieved and impatient at what Aunt Patty said. But do not lay it up against her. She tries to do right I think; but she is very different from your sunny-tempered mother—and, indeed there are few like mother. Aunt Patty has never been used to children; and has had a good deal of crossing and trouble in her life. I think she cared for mother, though she always thought her too lenient with you. Now, what I want of you, what will help to comfort me, is to be kind and respectful to Aunt Patty, and let little things pass without notice. She takes good care of your clothes, and, if you were sick, would do anything for you in her power. You must be ready by this time.'

Jamie went down stairs with his father, and quietly took his place at the table.—Aunt Patty looked keenly at the child across the tea-tray, and, noting his swollen eyelids, inferred that the prescribed dose of birch oil had been duly administered; and though pruning herself greatly thereon, began to feel some relentings towards the little patient; for her heart was not really hard, but her temper was quick. Her early life had been marked by bitter disappointment, and while the worst aspect of every one around her seemed to be ever the most prominent to her view, she knew no government but of fear.

'You'll have to do something with him.' The positive words recurred to Mr. Cameron's mind as he stood that night beside his sleeping child, and her days Jamie's tearful face seemed to follow him, and his words to ring in his ears.

'Poor boy! I shall, indeed,' he thought, 'but not as you mean it, Aunt Patty.'

* * * * * * *

'For the sake of his mother, Emily, will you take Jamie to board with you a while at least, through the summer?'

These were the concluding lines of a letter which found its way, a few months latter, to a pleasant country home about twenty miles distant. Emily Clement, to whom it was addressed, was the playmate of his own and his departed Anne's childhood, and in after years the dear and trusted friend of his wife. Her gentle tones had often made music in their home while Anne lived, and her sweet face was linked in Jamie's mind with that of his mother.

She was scarcely twenty-eight; but one sorrow had swept over her, piercing to the very depths of her womanhood.

At the time of Annie's marriage, she was betrothed to one truly worthy of her guileless heart. But her hope found no earthly fruition. Through the slow wasting of consumption, she ministered to her lover with the tenderness and devotion of a wife; and with his hand clasped in hers, received his farewell kiss. For a season she was overwhelmed; but she arose from the depths of grief with a new strength and depth of character, an endurance born only of pain. The parting from Anne Cameron was another severe trial. But so quietly and earnestly went about her daily duties, so cheerful was she in her home, that not even her father, mother, or sister knew how deeply she was wounded.

She readily consented to receive little Jamie, and the father's mind was relieved.

'So far, so good,' he said to himself, as he folded her letter. 'It may be that Jamie can remain a year or two with Emily, and attend school in her neighborhood; but, at any rate, this gives me several months to look about and determine what to do.'

Taking the precious sacred lamp and carefully upheld. The memory of the little child part of an earthly Eden. At the thought of pleasure from his father, however, the [illegible] [illegible] night till Monday morning.

It was not strange that the [illegible] pared the way for a change in Mr. Cameron's half-formed plans, or that they impaired in Emily's quiet life a [illegible] for, be it remembered, they did not dwell as strangers [illegible] with a many ties and associations [illegible] and a like sorrow. The shadow [illegible] parent presence, received [illegible] when she found herself looking forward to Mr. Cameron's coming with a [illegible] Annie [illegible] the approach of autumn; while upon her friend's mental vision a new care and more frequently, pictures of a home robbed and [illegible] by artful [illegible]

'Emily,' he said to her, one evening, as he sat in the summer twilight, on their return from a woodland ramble with Jamie, when the boy had sat good night, 'our loved ones await us at home but not our life-journey, or our re-union be less blessed, if we walk side by side, and hand in hand, each ministering to the other, mutually guiding Anne's child, and truly loving, though not for the first time.'

Early in October,—for Miss Clement's true heart and strong practical sense justified her friend's reasoning against delay.—a quiet wedding occurred at Chestnut Glen and Mr. Cameron, with Emily and Jamie, returned to his city home.

A new day had dawned for Jamie. His wants were again supplied with a loving as well as faithful care. His faults found no excuse, but met a firm, though gentle correction. Encouragement and appreciation of real effort never failed him, and the daily, hourly influence of her who proved, in all save birth, truly a mother, was as soothing to the fever, while his father found his home all that had been its want; and though his sainted one was never displaced in thought or affection, Emily was all he could ask, and loved as she deserved to be.

What did people say?

'Only a year since his wife died? What a shame!'

The Snider-Enfield Rifle.

We have the satisfaction of announcing that the whole of the Volunteer force are now been armed with the best breech-loading weapon which is as yet in existence.—Thirty thousand Snider-Enfield rifles have been distributed among the different Volunteer battalions of Ontario and Quebec.—These have, in several rifle matches within the last few weeks, been thoroughly tested, and the result has invariably been such as to give the greatest satisfaction and confidence in this weapon to all who are armed therewith. In accuracy of fire it is far superior to the muzzle-loading Enfield, while in respect to rapidity the breech-loader can fire at the very least, three shots for every single shot fired by the muzzle-loader.

It is obvious that every improvement in simplicity of loading and rapidity of fire must tend to raise the value of Volunteers or Militia as compared with that of regular troops in action, and the general result of the acquisition of these improved fire-arms by the Volunteers is to inspire them with a confidence in themselves and in their weapons, the importance of which cannot be overrated.

The Fenian leaders have been advertised by the manifesto of the Troy servant girls, that they will soon be reduced to their last cent if they do not devise some means of raising the wind once more, and attracting fresh subscriptions; and for this purpose they are now depositing in the most ostentatious manner depots of worthless old arms, and cases having the outer appearance of warlike stores, at different points along the Canadian frontier. But we shall be much surprised if the limit of gullibility of their benefactors does has not already been reached; and if these shallow devices succeed in filling the deplorable vacuum now existing in the Fenian treasury. Locke, and he is the editor of The Blade, a Radical republican paper, published at Toledo, Ohio. A leading clergyman in Boston, who has recently been west, speaks of him in exchange as follows:—

The history of the young man deserves to be known. His father lived in Cortland Co., N. Y., and was a pioneer abolitionist, who was accustomed to return from meetings called together to sympathize with the slave, covered with defilement of rotten eggs, beaten, abused, and cheerful. His son early imbibed his principles, and under the character of a Kentucky postmaster has done more to turn the popular current in the west against false conservatism than any half dozen editors in the land. He is a pleasant, genial gentleman, lives in a quiet way, sympathizes with every good word or work, and uses his transcendent power for man's good, if not for Horace Greeley's glory.

"What would you be, dearest," said Walter to his sweetheart, "if I was to press the seal of love upon those ruby-wax lips?" "I should be stationery."

Ordered, That the Clerk do transmit a copy of the foregoing Minute to the Governor General's Secretary.

Certified,

W. A. HIMSWORTH, Clerk P. C.

Ottawa, Nov. 7.

3 o'clock p.m. this day, proceeded to state to His Excellency the Governor General the names of those Members of the House of Commons who had been summoned to attend him in the Senate Chamber. They were accordingly introduced, when the Hon. James Cockburn, Speaker of the House of Commons, addressed His Excellency as follows:

Honorable Gentlemen of the Senate, and Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

In addressing, for the first time, the Parliamentary representatives of the Dominion of Canada, I feel it to be a source of no small satisfaction to my own deep feeling of gratification that it has been my high privilege to occupy an official position which has made it my duty to assist at every step taken in the creation of this great Confederation. I congratulate you on the legislative sanction which has been given by the Imperial Parliament to the Act of Union, under the provisions of which we are now assembled, and which has laid the foundation of a new national unity, that I trust and believe will, ere long, extend its bounds from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. In the discussions which preceded the introduction of this measure in the Imperial Parliament, between the one side and the delegates who represented the Provinces now united on the other, it was apparent to all those who took part in those Conferences, that while her Majesty's Ministers considered and pressed the principle of union as a subject of great Imperial interest, they allowed to the Provincial representatives every freedom in arranging the mode in which that principal should be applied. In a similar spirit of respect for your privileges of a free and self-governing people, the Act of Union as adopted by the Imperial Parliament imposes the duty and confers upon you the right of reducing to practice a system of government which it has called into existence, of consolidating its institutions, harmonizing its administrative details, and of making such legislative provisions as will secure to a constitution in some respects novel, a full, fair, and unprejudiced trial. With the design of effecting those objects, measures will be laid before you, for the amendment assimilation of laws now existing in the several Provinces, relating to currency, customs, excise and revenue generally; for the adoption of a uniform postal system; for the proper management and main ynance of public works and properties of the Dominion for the adoption of a well considered scheme of militia organization and defence, and for the proper administration of the Indian affairs, for the introduction of uniform laws respecting patents of invention and discovery, of the naturalization of aliens, and the assimilation of criminal law, and the laws relating to bankruptcy and insolvency. A measure will also be submitted to you for the performance of duty imposed upon Canada under the terms of the Union Act, of immediately constructing the Intercolonial railway, this great work will add a practical and physical connection to the Legislative bond which now unites the provinces composing the Dominion, and the liberality with which the guarantee for the cost of its construction was given by the Parliament, is new proof of the hearty interest felt by the British people in your prosperity. Your consideration will be invited to the important subject of Western territorial extension; and your attention will be called to the best means for the protection and development of our fisheries and marine interests; you will also be asked to consider measures defining the privileges of Parliament, and for the establishment of uniform laws relating to elections and the trial of controverted elections

Gentlemen of the House of Commons—

The circumstances under which the Act of Union came into operation rendered it impossible to obtain the assent of the Legislature to the expenditure necessary for the carrying on the ordinary business of the Government. The expenditure since the 1st July has therefore been incurred on the responsibility of the Ministers of the Crown. The details of that expenditure will be laid before you and submitted for your sanction. I have directed that estimates for the current and succeeding financial year shall be laid before you, and you will find that they have been framed with all the attention to economy that is compatible with the maintenance of efficiency in the different branches of the public service.

Honorable Gentlemen and Gentlemen:

The general organization and efficiency of the volunteers and militia have been greatly improved within the last year, and the whole volunteer force of Ontario and Quebec is already, by the liberality of the Imperial Government, armed with breech-loading rifles. I am happy to be able to congratulate you on the abundant harvest with which it has pleased Providence to bless the country; and on the general prosperity of the Dominion. Your new nationality enters upon its course backed by the moral support, material aid, and most ardent good wishes of the Mother Country. Within your own borders peace, prosperity, and security prevail, and I fervently pray that your high aspirations may be directed to such high and patriotic objects, and that you may be inspired with such a spirit of moderation and wisdom as will cause you to render the great work of Union which has been achieved, a blessing to yourselves, and a moral, political, and material advancement to the people of Canada.

His Excellency retired.

"None but the brave deserve the fair."—No and none but the brave can live with those of them.

The Hon. Mr. Howe's Speech on the Governor General's Address.

Hon. Joseph Howe addressed the House at considerable length. He remarked that plain friends had assigned him to position of leader of the Opposition—a position which he could not accept. The question of supporting or opposing the present Government did not enter into any of the political contests in Nova Scotia. This being the case, and holding the opinion he did in reference to Confederation, he thought it better to take a seat in the body of the House as an independent member. The gentleman from Nova Scotia came pledged in any way as to the party politics of Canada. If good measures were brought up, he would support them, come from what source they might, and if bad he would oppose them. His first friend from York, Mr. Fiske, had practised a principle of peace and harmony among politicians; but he was afraid he would be sadly disappointed. Confederation had not the merit of producing goods upon earth and good will among the men of Canada. Referring to the International Railroad he said that whether the words attributed to Mr. McDougall at the Toronto Convention were his or not, the fact remained that the Government had that railway in their hands. They had the expenditure of fifteen millions, and he very much mistook their character if they could not with this power in their hands maintain themselves in power for the next 10 years. Referring to the opening paragraph of his Excellency's speech, he told the people of Nova Scotia could not join in the congratulations of his Excellency. They will read his speech with sorrow and humiliation and not with congratulations. He referred to the manner in which the Act had passed the Imperial Parliament, and averred that the House of Lords of more than 400, there were never more than 50, present while Confederation was under discussion, and when the Act passed its 3rd reading, there were only 12 members in the House of Lords. It had been represented to the Imperial Parliament that the people of Nova Scotia were in favor of Union, while every man in that country knew that statement to be a deliberate falsehood. The Bill might have been submitted to the people of Nova Scotia and still there would have been time to pass it the same session. His Excellency spoke of a "new nationality" extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific. He (Mr. Howe), could only say that he saw in the Union a source of weakness, a want of material that was absolutely indispensable to a great nation. Who is to protect? He came from a country that has 400,000 tons of shipping. This Act had relieved the Imperial Government of the responsibility of defending the western country. How are we to assume that responsibility. The United States have opened up the country on their side of the line, whilst Great Britain has allowed the Red River country and British Columbia to take care of themselves. What is the result? Out of Kincardine could go men enough in a week to cut Canada off from the Red River country, let her do the best she could. The position of British Columbia, with Russian America on the north, and California on the south renders it doubtful to his mind, if Britain with all her power could hold that country against a hostile army from the United States. He held that Canada was not so thickly settled that we need be in a hurry to extend our borders. There is room enough in Canada for fifty millions of people, and in the Lower Provinces for ten times their present population.—He repudiated the cry that those who opposed Confederation were disloyal, and claimed to be as loyal as any member of the Government. During the 30 years of his public life, he defied any man to point out a single act of his indicative of a disloyal spirit. His Excellency had referred to the generous manner in which the Imperial Parliament had allowed the people to deal with the details of Confederation. He (Mr. Howe) denied that any such privilege was allowed. It did not even go before the Legislature of Nova Scotia. The only chance the people of Nova Scotia had of expressing their opinion on confederation was last September, when the elections came off, and they showed then unmistakeably that they were hostile to the measure. He referred to several instances in history when a change of constitution had taken place; but it was always with the consent of the people. Referring to the currency question, he remarked that in Nova Scotia they had a narrow system, and never had a bank failed there; the Government keeps its account with one of the banks, but gives it no exclusive power. Since the 1st July a restless feeling had gone abroad among the people there, that something is to be done which will limit the circulation of those banks. He trusted that would not be the case. He could not understand how any bank that is really sound and solvent could be broken by any Government; if they had such power, it was a great calamity. He referred to the question of revenue to maintain the dignity of the Dominion, the standing army that is promised, the navy that is guaranteed. Taxation must increase; all the revenues of his Province are to be taken up by the General Government, and all they got back is 80c a head, the price of a Nova Scotian as well as the price of a sheepskin. (Laughter). He went on to refer to the postal system, noticing the negociations of Lafontaine and Merritt, which resulted in free interchange of various products and establishment of 3c. postage. He thought the best thing that could happen would be a penny postage; but this could be done without changing the constitution of the country. The management of this system would be removed up to Ottawa.—What happened even now to Nova Scotia might one day happen to this Province, and every Postmaster and Postmistress be appointed here by a Government which we could not for a moment influence. Then, as to public works, by careful management Nova Scotia had spent something like a million and a half on them; and what had happened? Why, on election day every employer was marched up to vote for the Government candidate, influenced by some power which could not be discovered. According to resources and population, Nova Scotia had as many men as England; but now they were told these was to be some new organization. He only hoped it would be more effective. He would promise a careful consideration of it. But reports had reached Nova Scotia which had caused some alarm. It was said that every man in the Dominion was to be armed. He hoped no unpatriotic scheme would be adopted. Against whom were we to arm? There was only one enemy to fear, and he regretted that the whole of the proceedings in regard to Confederation looked too much like a menace against that country. If we arranged our affairs properly we should be the best of friends with our neighbors. Peace with them was what we invariably prayed for. Nova Scotia had never yet been able to frame a universally acceptable Bankrupt Law and if this could be done, he would be glad to see it. Referring to the next clause in the address he expressed his belief that in England they were preparing their minds to let us assume the responsibilities of a separate nationality. As to our fisheries, they were given up to the States. England would not fire a shot in defence of them. He thought some system ought to be adopted in regard to contrverted elections.—Mr. Howe passed over other passages of the speech without remark, and in conclusion deeply regretted that the measure had been passed in such a manner as to make it highly distasteful to the people of Nova Scotia, a free and loyal people, who had for years conducted their affairs with loyalty and vigour, should be obliged to send representatives here to make such speeches as he had made to-night. As the debate went on he would move a short amendment expressing his regret that this measure had not been submitted to the people of Nova Scotia. He knew that the decision on this question was a foregone conclusion. He knew that he stood here powerless to do more than express the sentiments he entertained.

VARIOUS ON DITS.—It is stated by Ministerialists here as a cause of Mr. Galt's resignation that he wished to alter the value of the American silver half dollar and quarter to 40 cents and 20 cents respectively, and that Sir John's friends sent him word if this were do e, he would make every one his enemy. Others say that Sir John had been making orders which interfered with the perogative of Mr. Cauts Department, while a gifted adherent of the great conservative party from Toronto, said the whole difficulty arose about a matter of family precedence connected with the illustrious title of Companion of the Bath The names of such low radicals as McDougall and Howland being placed before those of the descendant of Jacques Cartier and the great Alexander Tilloch Galt.

—Mr. Galt's reasons for retiring are:—First, his own personal interests, the urgency of which he discovered just on the meeting of Parliament; and, second, the indignation of Ontario against him and his policy on account of the failure of the Commercial Bank,—a failure with which he had nothing to do. Mr Holton and Mr. Morris both concur in defending him from blame on account of the Commercial Bank.

Howard, one of the Kingston distillery bagmen, while being examined for his convict suit the other day, managed to administer a kick to Whelan, the Queen's evidence, "as a slight punishment for turning tail on his accomplices."

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1867.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The first Parliament of the Dominion is now fairly commenced, and the Governor General's speech contains work enough for a long session. The assimilation of the laws of the Provinces relating to currency, customs, excise and revenue is a work that will require time and care; a uniform postal system, a militia law, the assimilation of criminal laws, the law of bankruptcy, the construction of the Intercolonial railway, western territorial extension, the development of the fisheries and marine interests, and the election laws, are all to have a share of attention; work enough to extend the session to several months. Already the effect of the failure of the Commercial Bank has told on the ministry. Mr. Galt's resignation was caused in some degree by it, together with the feeling of Ontario against him on account of his Bank of Issue Scheme, which appears to be very unpopular in this province. He gives private affairs as the cause of his resignation but at the same time admits that the feeling in Ontario has also had something to do with it.

Mr. Howe has made his first speech in the new parliament, but while all acknowledge his ability, some have felt that his opposition to confederation was imprudent. It is satisfactory to find that he accepts the situation and is likely to try to make the best of it. In his speech he made some hard hits at the government and the threats of Mr. McDougall to use the power of the Intercolonial Railroad funds to maintain their position for the next ten years. Mr. Howe, it is said, refuses the leadership of the opposition, and in consequence it will fall on Mr. Blake or Mr. McKenzie. Both are clever men, able in debate, and conversant with Canadian politics, so that we may feel easy as to which of them may be selected. Mr. Howe will work with the Reform members, and will be no mean acquisition, the bug-bear cry of annexation, notwithstanding which he entirely repudiates. He claims to be as loyal as any other member of the House, and dared any one to point to a single disloyal act of his during a public life of 35 years. He also deals a blow at a government banking system and considered it a great calamity if the government had the power to break a bank.—He expressed himself in favor of a penny postage, and also referred to the baneful influence that government exercised on electors engaged on public works.

Mr. Blake also made an able speech, which for a maiden speech was well received, so was Mr. McKenzie. No test question has yet come up to try the strength of parties; all appear willing to afford a fair trial. Mr. Galt's resignation does not bode well.—It is a blessing to the country, however.

The vote on the By-law for the erection of a new Town Hall in Peterborough will take place on Monday next. There is, however, some doubt as to who should vote on the By-law, because it does not state the time over which the debentures are to extend, as is usual in all By-laws of the sort for creating debts. There may or may not be some intention of ambiguous wording of the By-law. One thing we do know that unless it is according to law ratepayers ought to vote it down whether they want a hall or not, and in this case particularly. Let there be a By-law that people can understand and then they can vote intelligently.

PETERBOROUGH LACROSSE CLUB.—The committee of management have appointed Tuesday and Friday in each week as the regular playing days of the club. The place of meeting to be the cricket ground, Ashburnham, and the hour 3 o'clock. There will therefore be a game to-morrow afternoon at the above hour and place.

A Painful Accident.

We regret to learn that Mr. A. Garbutt, Deputy Reeve of Smith, met with a severe accident on Saturday last. It appears that Mr. Garbutt had been killing a sheep, and in making a spinster to keep the hooked spirt, put the stick against his own breast; at first the knife did not go freely, but all at once the stick split and the knife point coming in contact with his body to the region under the stomach caused a severe and dangerous wound. At first it was feared that it had entered deeply, and that the consequences might be fatal, but we are glad to learn that under the care of Dr. Burnham he is doing well. At last accounts he was believed to be past danger.

Almost an Accident.

On Tuesday last a workman named Patrick McNamara while descending a ladder at one of the new buildings now being erected, slipped and fell, but very fortunately was not much hurt. It is believed that he will be able to resume his duties in a day or so.

PETERBOROUGH LITERARY CLUB.—Subject for debate this evening—"Are the colonies a source of weakness or strength to Great Britain?" Leaders—Messrs. Kennedy and Kidd. Members only admitted.

Our thanks are due to Mr. Perry for several important papers already forwarded to us from Ottawa.

TOWN COUNCIL.

On Monday evening the Council met to discuss the By-law to raise $40,000 to aid the C., P. & M. Railway and Mining Company to extend the Cobourg & Peterboro railway to Mud Lake. During the meeting another By-law was introduced differing from the first one only in being more definite. Considerable discussion and cross-firing took place. The great effort, evidently, was to prevent the By-law being read a second time, and the consequence was that a motion to defer the consideration of the By-laws for two weeks was carried by a vote of 6 to 5.

The Mayor then read a communication from the Clerk asking instructions in reference to making out the necessary voter's list to be used at the approaching vote on the By-law to erect a new Town Hall. The Clerk could not see his way clear in the matter.

Mr. Toole thought that Mr. Burnham, the father of the By-law, should make the necessary explanations; for his own part he thought the By-law was defective and required a little patchwork, and considered it better to do that now before the matter had gone too far, for most assuredly if the By-law should be passed, he (Mr. Toole) would take steps to quash it.

Mr. Burnham thought that it was time enough to trouble with it when Mr. Toole had taken steps to quash it.

Mr. Chamberlen thought that as the debt had been permitted to be created by an act that provided for all voters who voted at a common election also voting at an election like this, the list should be made out as in ordinary cases.

Mr. Stevenson thought the Clerk should be left to his own judgment in the matter.

The Mayor thought that the law was defective, but at the same time thought Mr. Chamberlen was wrong. That all law had to be taken as it is, and, therefore, in the case he believed the law implied that only owners of real estate or tenants whose lease extended to a period equal to the length of time the debt was to extend, should vote.

Mr. Toole thought the By-law was defective, for it did not mention the time over which the debentures were to be extended.

Finally it was left as it was, the Clerk to do as he thought right in the matter.

Mr. Dickson then moved that Mr. Dumble be heard before the Council, but as there was a motion of adjournment already moved it was pressed and carried to adjourn for two weeks.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—A Rifle Match came off yesterday on the "Range" convenient to this town between Companies No. 1, 3, 4 and 5, of the 57th battalion. After the last match some of the members had discussion as to the merits of their respective companies with regard to their shooting, and on that account arrangements were made to test it between each company, competing for a sweepstakes of 25 cents per man. It was agreed that ten rounds per man should be fired—3 rounds at 200 yds., 3 at 300, and 4 at 400. Major Kennedy superintended the firing, and Adjutant Kennedy acted as scorer. The match commenced about 3 o'clock in the afternoon and got through at dark, with the following result:—

No. 1 Company being the winner by 28 points. No. 5 Company labored under a disadvantage as its members are widely scattered through the country and, therefore, they could not get their full number, so they filled it up by taking in Private Martin, of No 1 and Band Master Rackett. The Band Master took the fourth place on their score by scoring 13, but Martin was rather a weight on their shoulders, coming out with a round 0 all round.

The men are determined to keep it up, and as the government has supplied them with "first-rate" rifles they will strive and have nothing undone on their part, so far as the practice is concerned.

Yours,

ENSIGN.

LATEST FROM EUROPE

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Telegrams have been received here, stating a serious outbreak has occurred at Minas, in Chinese Tartary, attended by property and life sacrifice. Hundreds have already been slain and wounded.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—General La Marmora, the Italian Minister, recently had an audience with the Emperor, and asked for the withdrawal of the French troops from Rome.

The annual yellow book is ready for publication. It shows that Baron de Rotazzi has long warned of the plans of the insurgents under Gen. Garibaldi, and of the action France was certain to take in the premises.

LONDON, Nov. 8, midnight.—The bread riots at Tuxpany, Exmouth and other places have been suppressed, and all parts of Devonshire are now quiet.

The news of the great loss of shipping and destruction of property by the hurricane at St. Thomas, creates a widespread feeling of depression in mercantile circles, as British shippers and underwriters are heavy losers by the calamity.

England, France and Austria, have come to a common understanding as to the policy to be pursued by them hereafter in the Eastern question.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The Moniteur this morning says that Popular tumults, caused by the Mazzinni, broke out in Milan and other large cities of Italy; but it asserts that by the prompt and decided action of the Italian government all these outbreaks have been suppressed.

FLORENCE, Nov. 8, evening.—The trial of Garibaldi has been postponed, it being considered doubtful whether any of the courts here have jurisdiction in his case.

Gen. La Marmora has not left France, as was published by some French journals; but still remains in Paris, prosecuting the important mission on which he was sent by the King of Italy.

MILAN, Nov. 8.—Several persons implicated in the late disturbance here, have been arrested.

Great distrust is felt about the relations between France, Italy and Rome, which are regarded as liable to rupture at any moment.

PARIS, Nov. 8.—The French government has asked the Papal authorities to release the insurgents who have been taken prisoners in the late campaign, but the request has been refused.

The Monsieur du Soir admits that French infantry, armed with the Chassepot rifle, and artillery supplied with rifled cannon, took part in the battle of Monte Rotondo, and their coming to the assistance of the Pontifical forces decided the fate of the day against Garibaldi.

PARIS, Nov. 9.—Gen. La Marmora asks the French Government to withdraw its troops from the Italian soil, because, he says, Italy has proved her ability, as well as her disposition, to maintain order. He also declares that there need be no fear of further disturbance, as the leading agitator, Garibaldi, his sons, and his principal lieutenants, will leave Italy and go the United States.

The sublime Porte has replied to the last joint note of the European powers. He declines to receive their advice, and accepts the responsibility for the events which may ensue.

LONDON, Nov. 9.—A despatch from Glamorgan, Wales, states that a terrible explosion took place in one of the mines of the Ferndale Colliery, in that country. All the miners, three hundred in number, were at work at time. At last accounts the mine was on fire, and it was feared that but few lives would be saved.

Advices from Canto reports that the tea market was quiet. The total exports of tea, from the commencement of the season to the 15th of October, amounted to 77,000,000 lbs.

FLORENCE, Nov 10.—The Italia says King Victor Emmanuel having fulfilled all the obligations imposed upon Italy by the September convention, now demands of the Emperor Napoleon the departure of the French troops from Italian soil, and the recall of the French fleet from the Italian coast. The Italia also says that the King in his communication to the French Emperor firmly protests against European conference composed only of catholic powers, for the settlement of the Roman question.

PARIS, Nov. 10, Sunday.—Napoleon is at Lyons where he met a cordial reception from the people. An address of welcome and congratulation was made by the Mayor, to which the Emperor responded.

PARIS, Nov. 10 (Sunday).—General Tailly, the commander of the French expeditionary forces to Rome, reports that the French in the fight at Monte Rotondo lost 40 killed and wounded. The Papal troops lost only twelve men. The casualities of the Garibaldians were 600 killed and as many wounded, while 2,200 were taken prisoners. The castle of the great slaughter of the rebels is due to the Chassepot rifle. The rebels were only half armed.

FLORENCE, Nov. 10.—King Victor Emmanuel has extended aid to the families of the Garibaldians who were killed and wounded in the recent engagements. There is general discontent throughout Italy, and a state of seige is threatened in every large town.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—The Moniteur, in its official columns to-day, announces that the Emperor, seeing Italy was resolved to do her duty and fulfil all her obligations under the September Convention, has withdrawn the French troops from the city of Rome and other parts of the Papal territory to Civita Vecchia.

PARIS, Nov. 11, evening.—The French Government has issued a second note in regard to the proposed conference on the Roman question. In this note even the third rate Powers of Europe are called upon to participate. It is thought that none will decline.

FLORENCE, Nov. 11th, evening.—The Government of Italy which is hostile to the projected conference, has sent a note to the European Powers in order to enable them to decide against the necessity of any conference whatever. In this note the Roman question is discussed from an Italian standpoint. The details, however, have not transpired.

MENDACIOUS ASSAULT.—The Belleville Intelligencer says on the morning of Thursday, the 31st ult., a respectable young man, a resident, named Joseph Reeves, had a miraculous escape from assassination. While walking in company with a friend, towards the railway station, about 7 o'clock, he was overtaken by a man, who asked him, "Is your name Joe Reeves?" Upon being told that it was, the other replied, "Then your the chap I want; I'll shoot you," and suiting the action to the word, discharged a revolver at him, the ball taking effect upon the back of his neck and inflicting a slight wound. Fortunately, just as the intended assassin presented the weapon, Reeves stooped, otherwise "saltpetre wouldn't have saved his bacon." Reeves recognized his assailant as being one Ray, who some few years ago resided in this town, but now lives adjacent to Cobourg or Port Hope, and it appears that the motive which prompted him to wreak his vengeance on Reeves was to satisfy an old grudge he had against him. The police immediately went in pursuit of Ray; but, so far, he has managed to elude their vigilance.

Two Indians were drowned lately while crossing from Harwood to the Indian Village. It is said that they were under the influence of liquor at the time they started from Harwood. The man who gave them the liquor ought to be held accountable for their death.

OTONABEE.—The vote on the By-law to raise $15,000 to aid the C. P. & M. Railway and Mining Company, will be taken on Wednesday, the 27th inst.

ASHBURNHAM.—The vote to raise $5,000 to aid the same object, will be taken on Tuesday next.

Mr. David Henthorn has purchased Mr. Eastland's Livery Stables, and is now ready to accommodate travellers in his line.

POLITICS IN THE PULPIT.

The Page complains of the abuse of their pulpits for the purpose to promote the interests of one political party, and as both the other papers do during the election, they do not meet its suggestions, and dare not defend the conduct of the bishops and curés, which it exposes; but only lump abuse on the Bishops and their journals.

It gives an account of some of the doings of E. Dupuis, curé of St. Antoine, who, it says, for three months before an election, preached with but politics, and who, on one occasion, gave his parishioners the following remarkable precept, which we have not met with in Scripture:—

"Remember, my brethren, that if theft is a great sin, and adultery a greater, to vote for a Rouge would be even a greater sin than both these."

M. Dupuis still further said: "Those who have voted for the bad party cannot receive absolution without promising to have it; and if you go out of the parish to seek absolution, you will have stolen your absolution." Nor was this a mere threat on his part; for, when some Liberal parishioners of St. Antoine went to confession to him, he asked them a question he had no right to put; namely, "Did you vote for the bad party?" The penitent replied, "I voted for M. Geoffrion." The case insisted that he should promise to leave the bad party. The penitent replied that he conscientiously believed he belonged to the good party. The confessor refused absolution and shut the grating of the confessional.

What abominable conduct!" exclaims the Page and adds that there is still worse to be told. "The wives of some of those who had been refused absolution were also refused, because their husbands belonged to the bad party."

Rev Mr. Ricard, of Acton, said, on a recent Sabbath, to his flock:—

"Remember what I told you before the elections. I will stick to it. Whoever has voted Rouge will not get absolution unless he admits, before two witnesses, that he was wrong, and promises to renounce the Rouge party for ever."

The Page adds that the Bishops will now express sanction such language, but neither will they interfere with the curés who use it.

Another case told by a people that if any of them voted for a Rogue, and took the sacrament without confessing that he had done so, he would have come dead on enormous sacrilege; and that "it would be better to put a match to his neighbor's barn than to vote for an excommunicated candidate."

The Minerve—Mr. Cartier's organ—justifies the priests in the above conduct, and thinks it an honor to them to have the opposition of the Page.

British Taxation—A Contrast.

In the better days of the Republic, before Radical brutalities had fastened the blasting policy upon the country, we used to boast of being the most lightly taxed people in the world. It was a common thing in those days to point to Great Britain as an illustration of the evil effects of onerous taxation. The contrast was one in which our politicians delighted, because it served to show how much superior we were as a political economists and legislators to our British ancestors. How is it now? Only seven years of Radical rule? The aggregate wealth of Great Britain within the British Isles is £36,000,000,000; that of the United States is now estimated at $40,000,000,000.

The rate of taxation in great Britain is ninety cents on the one hundred dollars; in the United States the rate of taxation by the Federal Government alone, without counting that by the States and local corporations, is three dollars and ninety-three cents on the on hundred dollars. Thus our rate of taxation by the Federal government alone is more than four times as great as that of Great Britain. Nor is this all. We pay to the federal government alone upwards of two hundred millions of dollars more, in taxes, than the subjects of the British Islands pay. This American Radicalism is a far more expensive luxury than British monarchy or aristocracy.—St. Louis Republican.

CURIOUS TRIAL IN SCOTLAND.—A remarkable trial, involving the right of succession to the Breadalbane peerage and estates in Scotland has been recently concluded in the British House of Lords. The grandfather of the present marquis, in the year 1780, ran away with the wife of an apothecary named Ludlow, took her to live in Corsica, and lived with her as Peerward in England and Scotland, always calling her his wife, though no marriage ceremony ever took place, even after the death of her husband Ludlow. The connection lasted until the lady's death in 1806, and the father of the present marquis married. A suit was then brought by the head of another branch of the family to determine the legitimacy of this offspring. It has now been decided that since the Scotch law requires no ceremony to make a marriage valid, but only that the man shall acknowledge the woman as his wife, the connection which began in adultry became a valid marriage after Ludlow's death, and the present marquis keeps his title and his property, valued at $200,000 a year.

A LOCAL BANK.—The Intelligencer says:—"The suggestion contained in the letter of Hon Billa Flint, to establish a Local Bank, has been acted upon so far as to give notice of an Act of Incorporation, which will be applied for at the next Legislature The promoters of the scheme are men of means, and men who are determined to carry out the project. In a wealthy County like Hastings, which deposits from farmers and business men in the banks, to the extent of $500,000, and with a large surplus capital which could be made available, there is no reason why our business men should be compelled to go on their knees to the Montreal or any other mammoth Bank to ask for accommodation The operation of the proposed bank would be confined to the legitimate business of the County; every business man would have an interest in it, and would keep his deposits there; the means of the Bank would be employed only in the business of the County, and there would be no question, in the hands of absentees, that it would pay a handsome dividend to stockholders. It is proposed to make the capital $250,000, with power to increase that amount."

THE BATTLE OF BAGNOREA.—The Mercure copies a letter from a soldier of the Papal army, describing the battle of Bagnorea against the Garibaldians, in which he says:—"When I was aiming at a Garibaldian captain, I received a ball on my musket, which would just have struck my breast on the spot where I wear the medal of the Immaculate conception given to me by the august Pius ninth The Garibaldians numbered 1,700, and lost 50 killed, many wounded, and 120 prisoners. We were 400, and could have killed many more, but we took pity on their cries for mercy. I said the Madonna of the Holy Rosary protected us in a miraculous manner, so that we had only ten slightly wounded. Many had their coats pierced with balls, but nothing more. I will only say two words on the profanations committed by the Garibaldians in the Church of St. Francis. They threw on the ground the Bread of Angels, our Lord well beloved. They broke the holy ciboire the chalices, &c. They broke the crucifix and the images of saints. Do not forget to thank the Lord for the victory of the papalines."

GREAT STORM.—One of the most violent storms that has ever occurred in our country took place on last Sunday night, Premonitary symptoms in the shape of a big gale had been going on for several days, but on Sunday night it blew a hurricane. Much damage was done to shipping on the lake and in one instance at the entrance of Toronto bay, the damages resulted in loss of the life of a sailor named Kelly, while attempting with the rest of the crew to escape from the schooner Admiral, which went to pieces laden with lumber. The Propeller St. Lawrence ran into this port yesterday morning, much shaken. We have not heard of injury to any of the Cobourg fleet.—Cobourg Ex.

BRYAN'S WARNING.—The great public remedy have now been in use over twenty years, hence it cannot be said that they are on trial. They have been thoroughly tried, and pronounced (on the authority of those whose lives and health they have preserved) to be a pure, harmless, and eminently salutary preparation, and if taken in season will invariably cure colds on the lungs, sore throat, and all Bronchial affections. One fair trial will convince the most skeptical. Sold by all medicine dealers, at 25c cts per box.

THE ARMY WORM.—This pest is making sad havoc among the wheat and other crops, in various parts of the country, and we are unable to advise as to the best means of getting rid of them; but for the cure of colds, rheumatism, Burns, Cramps, Pains, Neuralgia, and all pains of the body, the "Canadian Pain Destroyer" is decidedly the best. Sold by all Medicine Dealers, price 25 cents per bottle.

POLITICAL NEWS.

—A bank delegation from Western Canada is now at Ottawa to confer with the Government respecting the present monetary crisis.

—News from St. Petersburg says:—It is reported on good authority that the Sultan of Turkey is making unusual military preparations. In support of the report it is stated that 50,000 needle guns have recently been purchased by the Turkish war department, while large shipments of rifled guns have been made to the Turkish forces in Asia. It is also known that the government has been treating the citadel, completing the walls and otherwise strengthening the fortifications of Kars.

There have been serious bread riots in Devonshire, England. The latest says:—The disturbances caused by want of employment and scarcity of food continues in Devonshire. Riots are reported in Torquay, Exmouth, and other places in the county. By the efforts of the authorities the troubles at Exeter, the capital of the county, were suppressed, and the town is now quiet. Many of the rioters there are now under arrest.

The London Times predicts that should Napoleon fail in bringing about a general conference of the European powers, to settle the Roman question, he will abandon the defence of the Temporal Power of the Pope, and leave Italy free to decide upon the future position of Rome.

—The Democratic majority in New York City, yesterday reached the enormous figure of 30,000, a number which the Republican majority in the rural districts of the State cannot hope to overcome. The city and State will therefore be deprived of the present excise law, which has done so much good, especially in keeping the Sabbath free from the sale of liquor. The above majority is mainly composed of negro haters, Sabbath-breakers, liquor-lovers, and friends of the Southern rebels, together with all those who wish to obtain power through their votes.—Witness.

SOLICITOR GENERAL RICHARDS.—The St. Catharines Constitutional thus enlightens the public: "We learn that a constituency has been secured for Mr Stephen Richards, where his return by acclamation is almost certain. We shall not at present name it, but as it is not more than 1,000 miles from Lincoln, our readers will be able to exercise their ingenuity in guessing the location."

The Italians assert that 5,000 French soldiers, under command of General Polhes, belonging to the division which first reached Rome, came to the assistance of the Papal forces during their last engagement with the insurgents, and the timely arrival of these reinforcements turned the tide of the battle and caused the defeat of Garibaldi.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

OTTAWA, Nov. 7.

The Commons have re-assembled in their chamber.

Sir John A. Macdonald introduced a bill respecting the administration of the oath of office.

The Speaker intimated that to prevent mistakes he had obtained a copy of the speech delivered by His Excellency and proceeded to read the same.

Sir John A. Macdonald moved that His Excellency's speech be taken into consideration to-morrow.—Carried.

Sir John A. Macdonald then moved the formal resolutions adopted at the beginning of each session about the printing of the votes and proceedings; the making it a misdemeanor to offer a bribe to any member of the House, &c., all of which were agreed to.

Sir John A. Macdonald also moved that until otherwise provided the rules, regulations, and standing orders of the Legislative Assembly of the late province of Canada be those of this House.—Carried.

M. Dorion inquired whether there was any truth in the rumor that one or more of the gentlemen on the treasury benches had sent in their resignations. He said it was a matter of importance that the public should be informed of the truth of these reports, and also when explanations would be given.

Sir John A. Macdonald in reply said that the Secretary of State for the Provinces, Hon. Mr. Archibald, having failed to secure his seat in this House had placed his resignation in His Excellency's hands, and it had been accepted. That gentleman now merely held office until his successor was appointed The Hon. Minister of Finance had also resigned his office, his resignation had been accepted, and he merely holds office till his successor should be appointed. Explanations would be given to-morrow.

The House adjourned at four o'clock.

FIRST PARLIAMENT OF CANADA

The Ottawa Citizen says, the interest manifested in the proceedings of the House yesterday was even greater than that shown the day before. The gallery of the Senate Chamber was, if possible, more crowded, every available inch of space being occupied. On the floor of the House were a large number of ladies and many distinguished personages.

The disposition of the troops was similar to that of the day before, the Rifle Brigade being posted at the main entrance of the Buildings, and the 17th regiment, Garrison Artillery, Ottawa Provisional Battalion of Rifles and Civil Service Rifles lining the way to the entrance on Elgin street.

About 3 o'clock a salvo of guns from the Field Battery on Major's Hill announced the arrival of the Governor General. His Excellency was accompanied by a numerous and brilliant suite, embracing many of the most distinguished officers of the Dominion.

Having taken his seat upon the Throne, His Excellency commanded the attendance of the House of Commons. The members of that body, preceded by their Speaker, the Hon James Cockburn, appeared at the Bar. The Hon. James Cockburn then informed His Excellency that the choice of the House of Commons had fallen upon him to be their Speaker, and prayed for the members there of the customary parliamentary privileges.

The Ætna's system of insurance is a most excellent one, as indicated by its great success; and there can be no doubt that its large and rapidly increasing business—doing as much in one month as most Companies do in a whole year—with all its investments drawing nearly double the rate of interest obtainable in Europe, will enable it, at all times, to declare large dividends to policy-holders.

Observe the difference:—While most Companies accommodate the insured with half credit for a few years only, after which full payments are required, the Ætna's half-credit runs throughout life, but does not accumulate as a debt upon the policy.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered it can be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured the sooner it longer standing, and there is nothing to pain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, ear, lip or elsewhere or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a loathsome, disgusting mass. Such a remedy has long been required by the countries of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the orders of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary diseases, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects or some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these diseases, and as they know, too, the efficacy of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has in all the victims that it did have when made the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofula and Scrofulous Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scald Head, Ringworm, Syphilis, Mercurial Diseases, Dropsy, Tetter, Erysipelas, Scald Head, Ringworm, Syphilis, Mercurial Diseases, Dropsy, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Kidney Complaints, Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Heart Disease, Female Weaknesses, Irregularities, Suppressions, Sterility, and all Complaints arising from Impure Blood.

GALENA, Ill., 6th June, 1866.

J. C. AYER & Co.—Gentlemen: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a scrofulous taint in my blood, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it broke out in ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and discovered me at the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my scalp and ears with one sore, which was painful and loathsome beyond description. I tried many of the doctors and several patent medicines, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disorder grew worse. At length I was recommended to read to the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla). I did so, and, learning from your pamphlet that many things you made were good, I went to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles, new and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I am saying when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the benefits of the age, and remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Fulton, N. Y., 19th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Blind tetter Dry Scaldin by large doses of the same medicine the common Eruptions by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Sebastian Stone of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a bloody sore on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulcerations, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. B. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in stating I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the scrofulous diathesis. I have cured many incredible cases of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the uterus had ulcerated to a considerable extent, and even where the ovaries themselves were more or less involved. The ulcers healed, and he is well again, and of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman, who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from its formula, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me."

Yours truly, G. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDIANAPOLIS, Perry Co., Va., 5th July, 1866.

Dr. J. C. AYER & Co.—Gentlemen: I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and sick as one is quite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. PEKAM.

John Y. Getchell of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years to me other remedy than derangements of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Espy, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Fits, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia.

Many remarkable cures of these effects are here been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital forces into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the orders of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary diseases, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects or some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these diseases, and as they know, too, the efficacy of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has in all the victims that it did have when made the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—Gentlemen:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonee Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking, just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; could get nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; to it a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well a night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was afflicted with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

We speak from experience in this matter, having tested it, thoroughly and therefore those who are suffering from any of the complaints for which it is recommended may depend upon its being a Sovereign Remedy.

The astonishing efficacy of the Canadian Pain Destroyer, in curing the diseases for which it is recommended, and its wonderful success in assuaging the torturing pain and Excruciations, and in relieving the most Afflictions entitle it to a high rank in the list of remedies for those complaints. Testimony coming in from Moderate Dealers, in all parts of the Country for further supplies, and each testifying as to the universal satisfaction it gives.

Poetry.

"OUR FATHER."

BY ANN A. MERRILL.

In breathing silence I await
With my request at heaven's gate;
I dare not pass the portal through,
Though on the wings of prayer I go.
For how can I that awful Name,
In language, fully spoken, frame;
Or, daring still to step across,
Reach up those heights unless I see
Not like the Stranger sent forth
By heavenly privileges of earth,
When unrobed leaves their valor way,
With diamond escapes floating high,
And clashing steel, and rolling drums,
Bert soft and clear the answer comes;
And O! how sweet the accents fall—
"Our Father!—that, sweet child, is all."

"Our Father!" O, what joys divine
From those free-spoken words outshine!
What wondrous love to worms of earth,
From Him who knows our little worth!
How trembling hope and gladness blend,
That God, our God, should condescend
That we may breathe His glorious name
In language angels may not frame.

"Our Father!" blessed, solemn thought,
With strength and consolation fraught
To pilgrims poor, and faint, and blind,
Perse ts of heart, and weak of mind.
It tells us of a parent's care
That guards and guides us everywhere;
Of love that knows no swift decay,
Of patience no offence can slay.

It tell us of a home on high
In mansions far beyond the sky;
Of rest, and peace, and pleasures rare
That bloom and brighten, ever fair,
For where "Our Father's" legion stand,
Our "Elder Brother" crowns the hand;
And we, joint-heirs of heaven, may be
With Him who gives the victory.

"Our Father!" may it ever be
That we as children, turn to Thee;
Our hearts refined, with holy fire,
To filial trust and pure desire;
Our aim to do Thy righteous will,
And all Thy purposes fulfill!
In youth, in age, till time shall end,
Still be "Our Father" and Our Friend.

Courtship after Marriage.

'For goodness sake, why don't you keep that child quiet, Mary? I shall be obliged to leave the room, and am not sure but the house, to get an opportunity to read my paper. Give him a dose of laudanum.'

'That would undoubtedly quiet the child,' replied Mrs. Baker, a dark eyed sweet-faced woman—without raising her voice

'Upon my word I do believe you do something to the young one in order that he may make the little time I pass at home as uncomfortable as you desire it; but I will pay you $5 in your own coin, and not come home at all, except to sleep, and unless your conduct change very materially, I shall not trouble you then.'

'Just as you please, Charles. If I were never to see you again, I assure you it would not make the least difference to me. For five long years, I have borne uncomplainingly, all the bitter abuse you have seen fit to heap upon me, because I loved you, and wished to believe that your ill-treatment was the result of a passionate temper, and that, notwithstanding all this, you did truly love and respect me; but that stupid delusion has, thank God, taken its flight, and now I submit to your taunts and invectives because a the which I dislike to ignore binds us together. But now be careful how far you go, for as I have neither love nor respect for you, it will not take much to send me out with my baby to earn our bread and butter; and then good-bye forever.'

Charles Baker twisted his mustache, rubbed his handsome eyes, to see if he must not be dreaming, for this was the first time the gentle woman, who hand been kind and loving through any and all she had ever replied to him; and now could he believe his senses? Why had she never hinted at such an event before? Not love him? Not respect him? Why, he had, like many another, foolishly imagined that no amount of ugliness or unappreciation on his part could be able to wean from him the heart of his wife. Had she not always been gentle and forbearing? Had she during the four years of their married life, failed to meet him with that sternotyped smile which men and authors rave about?—Had she not always attended scientifically to his short tuitions?—and did she not, whether sick or well, invariably tickle his palate with every dainty his epicurean taste suggested? Where had she ever failed to minister to all his wants? Why, the woman must be insane—to tell him, thus coolly, and without apparent premeditation that she never loved or respected him? Of course, she was crazy; and he surveyed her sweet countenance as she smiled on her baby and endeavored to amuse him.

'If this is the case, Mary, perhaps I had better pack up my traps and leave now?'

'Just as you please, Charles.'

'Perhaps you love somebody else?'—the idea suggested itself as the one most likely to account for what he called her inconsistent conduct.

'No, thank heaven! that misery is spared me. The only person I love in the world, truly and fervently, is my darling baby. You know, Charles, when you took me, that I was an orphan, all alone in the world, with no near relative to whom I could apply for sympathy and consolation; and you promised, sacredly, before God and man to love, honor and cherish me, so long as we both should live. You have proven false to your marriage vow. Instead of love, I have received foul-feelings and abuse; and, of course, there can be no honor where there is no love. But I never thought to say so much about it, for I have long since ceased to sorrow over my lot; and you know enough of the human heart to perfectly comprehend that, when indifference takes the place of warm devoted love, there isn't much desire to talk about it, even. So pursue whatever course you think proper; anything will be agreeable to me.'

Charles Baker could hardly credit his own senses. She had made the astounding revelation with no sign of passion, or feeling, even. She had not raised a tone of her voice, or spoken more quickly than was her wont. So much the worse, thought Charles. He knew full well that words, sometimes spoken in the heat and fire of feeling can be recalled and scarcely a shadow left on the soul; but his cool, unimpassioned wife to arrogate consideration the circumstances attending this unlooked for revelation and the bitter knowledge caused him in the face that his wife had spoken the truth, and the iron entered his soul

Indifference was the paper name for Mrs. Baker's feelings. She was in a sort of morbid, apathetic state, where it would take a tremendous shock to bring to her again the power of feeling. She loved her baby with a mother's whole-souled devotion, and this, to all appearance, was her only valuable spot

The baby seemed to have been born more nervous and irritable than the most of babies, and had now arrived at the teething age, when it took all his mother's time and strength to take proper care of it. It never occurred to him that he, as the father of the child (not taking into consideration at all any love and tenderness he might feel for his wife,) ought to bear his share of the labor. When he could no no longer endure the child's cries and moans, he betook himself to another apartment, carefully closed the doors, that no sound might disturb him, and proceeded with his unINTERrupted slumbers.

Evenings were spent at lodge, club and theatre—most anywhere but at home; and never since the first year of their married life had he invited his wife to accompany him to a single place of amusement, and scarcely ever to church; and yet this foolish man expected to preserve his wife's affection—expected that she would always be the tender, devoted companion. But here was a waking up which made Charles tremble, and he scarcely knew what reply to make, what course to pursue or how to frame anything like an int-ligible sentence.

'I'm to be blamed for this,' he finally groaned out.

No answer.

Mary had fallen asleep, with the baby in her arms. Tired nature could endure no longer. Night after night had she walked the floor with the screaming infant, and day after day struggled with a multitude of cares, which had almost crushed the life out of the patient woman.

Charles looked at her carefully. Ah! there were lines of care around the small mouth, and fatigue had made deep, dark circles around the beautiful eyes; and then her complexion, usually so brilliant, had given place to pallor almost deadly.

Charles asked himself in dismay, why he had never observed this change before.—How could he have been so blind? A perfect torrent of tenderness seemed to rush into his soul at this the eleventh hour, and he arose, removed the slumbering infant from its mother's arms, laid it into its rosewood crib, then throwing his arms gently round the inanimate form of his wife, carried her to the bed, and then sat by her side to watch and think.

Better late than never,' hopefully whispered his good angel; and he determined that, if God spared his life, he would win back the love he had lost; he would put up with coldness, with indifference, for he felt that he earned all the misery he would be compelled to endure before he could again be restored to his wife's confidence and affection.

Mary awoke after awhile with a start and a shriek, but the light of reason had fled. Physicians were summoned; pronounced it brain fever, and held out very little encouragement as to final restoration. Charles deserted his business entirely, and the poor fellow was nearly distracted. Love and remorse, alternately held sway, and from the careless, fretful husband, he became the tender, devoted nurse.

The crisis had passed; Mary had opened her eyes and looked about her.

'Where's baby?' was the first faintly-articulated question.

'Asleep, darling. Please don't talk any more. You have been very ill.' And the brown eyes were again closed, and the little hand was nestled close into her husband's.

What did this mean? Had she forgotten herself, or did she love him again?—Hope whispered a few words of comfort, and the rest of his vigil was made with a thankfulness which he had never before experienced.

Mary was declared convalescent; and Charles resumed his business, spending a small portion of the day at the office.

Every word to his wife was affectionate; every tone overflowing with love.—Baby, too, came in for a large share of papa's attention, and the change was really remarkable. Not an allusion did Charles make to the conversation preceding her illness; but they rode and walked, and their manner towards each other was more lover like than it had been since their marriage. Lodge and club seemed to be unthought of, and Mary could hardly bring herself to comprehend that her society was now infinitely preferable to anything else.

One evening they sat together in the cosy library, Charles reading aloud a selection from Holme's beautiful poems. Mary looking intently into his face as he seemed to catch the spirit of each line, baby asleep; for now that the domestic element had become more tranquil and harmonious baby seemed to be less irritable, and where misery and discord had so long reigned, the angel of peace and love at last descended.

I doubt if Mary heard much of the poem. Her thoughts were too busy; and when her husband had finished, and looked into her eyes for the appreciation he knew would be written there, she asked to hing at her watch abstractedly:

'But have you forgotten, Charles, that this club night? I am quite well now, you know, and I would not detain you here, if you have the desire to go. You have been very kind, dear, and I shall never forget it. There are not many men that would show a woman so much tenderness and consideration, after so cruel a conversation as our last was.'

The husband's eyes overflowed, and drawing the darling wife's head closer than ever, on to his knee, he said:

'Oh Mary, if you can only forgive me my cruel treatment of you, and from me just a little, I shall be so happy') and I swear to you, by every hope I have of heaven, that you shall never again have cause for dissatisfaction. My club shall now be devoted to you, instead of the clubs, or anywhere amusement where you are not invited. Every year you give me additional cause to love you more and more, and I feel proud of you that I ever was so foolish as to think for a moment that the love I have for you is not returned.'

PARLIAMENTARY.

INDEMNITY TO MEMBERS.

Sir John A. Macdonald, moved that the House go into Committee of the Whole upon the resolutions respecting the indemnity to members and the salaries of the Speaker of both Houses of Parliament.

Sir John A. Macdonald explained the provisions of the law of the former Province of Canada, which he said had been found to work satisfactory, and the principle of which had therefore been adopted by the Government in these resolutions. He proposed to fill up the blanks in the clause respecting the salaries of Speakers of the Senate and House of Commons with a sum equal that formerly paid Speakers of the Legislative Council and Legislative Assembly of Canada.

The motion was carried.

The House then went into Committee, Mr. Morris in the chair.

Mr. Blackburne said he was in favour of an allowance per diem for indemnity to members till it reached a certain amount which it was not to exceed.

Mr. Blake said, that in such an event, it was obvious that members remaining in the House to attend the public business of the country would consider that they were doing so at their own charges, and consequently important measures would be hurried through at the close of the session, without receiving proper attention. The true remedy for this is to pay members a per diem allowance for the time they remain here. It was not a right principle to receive $180 for thirty days and $60 for thirty-one days. They were not dealing with the question for the session only but for future sessions. It was reasonable to suppose that their sessions would be very much shorter than were the sessions of the old Canadian Parliament, and it would be unfair to pay themselves a sum based upon the sessions of that Parliament.

Mr. Holton was surprised that the Minister of Public Works and Minister of Internal Revenue should acquiesce in the statement that a sessional allowance worked satisfactorily in the late Province of Canada. It was adopting a system used in New York, and applicable in that country to a different system of Government from this country. The pay members got there is $3 00 per day, and the time of the session limited to one hundred days. They meet on a fixed day, and it is in their own power to shorten the time of the session. Here they meet at the call of the Executive, in whose hands are all important measures, and they rise not by their own will, but by the will of Ministers. He had known Ministers in former times bring in measures at the last of the session, which were passed through without receiving proper consideration in Parliament. That mode of indemnifying members of Parliament is not applicable to the British system of Government. Under that mode they could not get a session closed under thirty days, but after that time had expired, a great number of members would feel they were staying at the seat of Government at their own expense, and they would be impatient if any member, in the discharge of public duties, sought to enforce upon Parliament a proper consideration for the measures submitted to it. They should adopt such a system of indemnity as would pay members for whatever time the exigencies of the public service required them to stay here.

Hon. Mr. McDougall said that he had always endeavored to vote for any question that came before the House, if he believed it for the public interest for the time being. He did not think that there was any member in this Parliament, who was a member of the late Parliament of Canada, but he would say that under this rule of sessional allowance the session had been shorter and the expense less, than under the old rule of paying members by the day. Before they adopted the new mode, he had known sessions to be prolonged to upwards of six months.

Mr. Blake thought members might be paid on the principle acted upon with respect to witnesses in courts of justice, and receive such a sum as their expenses would seem to have amounted to. He thought they ought to adopt a maximum; but members should certify what their travelling expenses were and receive no more. He did not think they should vote themselves what the leader of the Government himself admitted was too large an allowance. If members were capable of prolonging the session for the sake of getting six dollars a day, they would certainly be capable of hurrying it to a conclusion for the sake of getting six hundred.

Mr. Holton admitted that the Hon. Mr. Brown, and some of his friends, had acquiesced in 1859, in the motion of the hon. gentleman, at present Minister of Militia. But there was a general opinion among gentlemen opposite that Mr. Brown did sometimes make mistakes, and he (Mr. Holton) was willing to admit that this was a mistake on the part of that gentleman; though, perhaps, not so great a mistake as he committed when he entered the Government with the hon. gentleman opposite.—(Laughter.) He denied that the working of the bill of 1859 had proved satisfactory to Canada.

Mr. Johnson, of Northumberland, N.B., said that the remarks of the Minister of Militia seemed to indicate that he considered New Brunswick as a mere appendage to Canada. He (Mr. Johnson) wished to forget that there were any dividing lines between the Provinces; but, at the same time, justice must be given to all. Sixpence a mile was not enough to pay the travelling expenses of members from New Brunswick. He was afraid the Government was trying to be economical at the expense of New Brunswick members. He would move, in addition, that members of Government receive no sessional allowance or mileage.

Mr. Blake, with reference to the second resolution, which provides a reduction of $5 for each day a member is absent when the House sits, said he preferred the the original Act, which provided for a reduction on each day a member was absent from the Seat of Government, whether the House sat or not. The original provision tended better to secure attendance on Monday, when the House adjourned from Friday till that day—bring a check on those stalled then selves of that adjournment to go to their homes.

Mr. Cheval said he wished the indemnity per diem diminished every month—never being over $600 per session, instead of being so much per session. He believed, also, that Ministers' salaries were too high in proportion to that of members.

Mr. Dufresne expressed the opinion that perhaps the indemnity was too low and could be raised at least indirectly by making two sessions instead of adjourning.

The resolutions were then agreed to, with considerable amendment on the 5th and the blanks in the resolutions relating to the salaries of speakers of the Senate and of the Commons being filled up with $6,000 to each.

PARLIAMENTARY.

The present session will in all probability be a short one. The Local Legislatures are to meet on the 27th or 28th of December, and as the Christmas holidays come before that period, we may hear of members returning home to enjoy the holidays. Sir John A. McDonald has announced in the House that it is the intent on of Government to divide this session into two parts, the first part to close as early as possible in December, the second part to commence in February. It appears now that the ministers have not had time to prepare their measures and elaborate details, and hence they ask two months longer for that purpose; in the meantime to have letters of credit to spend what money they deem necessary. There has been considerable discussion on the pay necessary to give to members; some contending that it would be better to pay by the day than by the session. If paid by the day they might extend a session indefinitely, while if paid a sessional allowance they would then endeavor to get through with business as fast as possible. Some of the Nova Scotia members think that $6 per day does not remunerate them for loss of time and expenses, and would hence propose that instead of receiving pay they serve for patriotism. The majority are for the pay and it is likely to be the same as members of the provincial parliament received, $600 per session, and then if they can make two sessions in the year they will receive $1,200 per annum. The public accounts have not yet been prepared. It really does appear as if nothing has been done since the passage of the Confederation Act but prepare for the elections. They promise a great deal but very little has yet been accomplished. There is one gratifying fact worth recording, however; they have banished the saloon from the Parliament buildings, and so far we hear of none of those scenes that disgraced the last parliament of the Province of Canada. We find by hope that it will never be permitted in the legislative hall of our country again.

The Fenians that were tried in Manchester for the murder of the policeman, Brett, are to be executed, we are told, and that the sentence will not be commuted. If the had been done with the leaders of the Fenian raggamuffins at first, the trouble and annoyance of the whole affair would have terminated long since. In Canada we were too merciful and allowed the murderers and robbers of our fellow citizens to get off with a few years imprisonment, so to speak, while a severer punishment was most undoubtedly deserved. It is better to err on the side of mercy, however; we do not regret that our Government did so, but very few would have remonstrated if the cut-throats had been hung. In Manchester there will be no efforts made to save the sentenced Fenians from execution. An effort was lately made in Canada to get a reprieve of Father McMahon's sentence and get him released from penitentiary, but we have not yet heard of its success, nor do we think that the Governor General will pay any attention to a petition for that purpose. We understand that one or two in Peterborough sought to get up a petition for the same object, but we have not heard with what success. We cannot think that any of our citizens would desire to have Mr. McMahon at large again; he is receiving no injury where he is; he has sober moments for reflection and repentance, and he is deprived only of the opportunity of doing harm, for he must be a dangerous man to be at liberty. If he were sober at the time of the raid then he must be a man of blood, for the intentions of the Fenians at Ridgeway were murder and rapine. If he were drunk, and this is the most charitable view we can take of him, then he is unfit to hold any hours' office where he would have the power of advising, and where there would be danger of his advice being taken; in fact whether he was drunk or sober in the time, he is alike guilty. Readers of exhibit nothing the interest of their industry, and whose money is expended in up to the penn purposes, drains that have followed blood-thirsty thief-

A SURPRISE AND PRESENTATION.

—On Thursday evening last Mr. W. J. Smyth, teacher, Lakefield, received a very agreeable surprise in the shape of a visit from a large number of citizens of the village and neighborhood, among whom was the Rev. Mr. Clementi, Incumbent of Lakefield. (The party took possession by intimating to Mr. and Mrs. Smyth that for the evening they must relinquish control of their concerns to the visitors. At the close of a very agreeably spent evening, a very handsome and costly silver fruit basket and a butter bowl were presented by Mr. Clementi, on behalf of the surprise party. The whole, we understand, is worth at least $25. It must be gratifying to Mr. Smyth to know that his labors in "teaching the young idea how to shoot" are fully appreciated by the good people of Lakefield, and this mark of esteem will, we doubt not, tend to warm his already ardent zeal in his work. Mr. Smyth is an excellent teacher. The people of Lakefield know this, and they have taken a wise course to express their appreciation of his services. Too often the people think the pay enough without praise.

There is a project on foot in Cobourg to construct a new road from Cobourg to Baltimore, and thence to Hastings. Our sister town is using every means within her power to draw the trade of the county and back country to Cobourg, of course. Many citizens of Peterborough are using every effort to force the trade of the back country to Lindsay, although to Peterborough is its legitimate course; or in other words, the people of Cobourg wish to build up their town; Some of the people of Peterborough wish to let their town go to ruin. Well, no they don't wish it, but while Lindsay enjoys the trade thus should be transacted in Peterborough, but for want of means of access does not, the result is, Peterborough suffers.

ASHBURNHAM.—The By-law to raise $5,000 to aid the C., P. & M. Railway and Mining Company was carried in Ashburnham on Tuesday without opposition. The vote polled was not very large, being 37; but there was not one vote against it. There can be little doubt but that the road will benefit the village to some extent; the only question that can arise is, will it be benefited by the road in proportion to the amount given This the citizens of Ashburnham answer for themselves in the affirmative, and we trust that their brightest hopes will be realized, and that the march of progress will extend itself so that they may become our rival in dimensions and trade.

THE TOWN HALL BY-LAW LOST.—On Monday the ratepayers of the town gave their decision on the project of building a new Town Hall, and wisely they cast their vote against it. The vote stood: North Ward, for, 5, against, 85; South Ward, for, 26, against, 12; East Ward, for, 24, against, 44; Centre Ward, for, 7, against, 41.—Total votes polled, 222. It will, therefore, be seen that the friends of the project were not numerous, less than its opponents and must fear the result or they would have cast a larger vote. The majority against is was 102.

The Rev. Henry Ward Beecher lately made a visit to Canada, but it was purely a business visit, to obtain a copy right for his novel—"Norwood." This right it appears can only be obtained by a resident or native of Canada, and it appears that even one day's residence will suffice. Mr. Beecher left Montreal for Toronto, with the intention of visiting a son who is in the lumber business at Bell Ewart.

At the Examiner Book Store, names will be received for a club for the weekly Globe and Canada Farmer for the year 1868. The larger the club, the cheaper those papers can be obtained, hence the desirability of a large list. Those at a distance can have their papers mailed to their own post office, but to prevent mistakes it would be well to give in names as early as possible.

LONDON SOCIETY, for November, has been received. The contents of this number are interesting and entertaining to the readers of this magazine. This and all the other magazines can be obtained at the Examiner Book Store, or at W. C. Chewett & Co's, Toronto.

The Norwood Board will meet the week following.

The Catholic clergy of Ireland are taking a very determined stand against allowing the children of their people to attend the national schools. They deny the ordinances of their church to those who permit their children to go to such schools.

St. Andrew's Society.

The Annual meeting of the St. Andrew's Society was held in the Firemen's Hall, on the evening of Wednesday, 20, A. Graham, Esq., President, in the Chair.

The Secretary read the minutes of the meeting held on the 30th November last for the purpose of submitting a balance sheet from the Bank to the credit of the Society of [illegible]

The Chairman then announced to the meeting that the next business was the election of Officers for the ensuing year, when the following were duly elected, viz.:

A. B. Campbell, Esq., St. Leonards, President.
John Carnegie, Jr., M.P.P., 1st V. President.
T. B. Fairbairn, Esq., Berrisdale, 2nd do.
Wm. Mercer, Esq., Chatsbier, 3rd do.
Alex. Smith, Esq., Miller, Treas., re-elected.
Chas. Cameron, Esq., Secretary, re-elected.
Chaplains—Rev. Messrs. Gilmour, Rogers and McDonnell.
Physicians—Drs McNabb and Harvey.

Committee for the Town of Peterborough—Messrs. W. A. Scott, D. Sutherland, A. Williams, John Cameron, Robt. Renfrew, Henry Lawrey, Robert Grant, James Hope, James Miller, H. T. Anderson, James, White, L. McGregor and W. Cameron.

Committee for Township of Smith—Messrs. W. Darling, James Jack, Andrew Millar and William T. Reid.

Committee for Township of North Monaghan—Messrs. George Tully and John W. Gilmour.

Committee for Otonabee—Messrs. W. Long and James Millar.

Committee for Douro—Messrs. W. Stoddle and Robert Graham, Lakefield, and Robert Reid, Auburn Mills.

In the absence of the newly elected President (Mr. Cam. Tully) Jr. Carnegie, late V. P., took the chair.

The Society agreed to adopt a small badge to be worn by members on special occasions. It was also agreed to ask the Rev. Mr. McDonnell, of St. Andrew's Church, to deliver the annual Lecture or Sermon to the Society.

Mr. W. A. Scott asked the meeting how it was proposed to celebrate St. Andrew's day.

Mr Renfrew said he thought some new plan ought to be adopted. The Society had hitherto invariably celebrated the day by a dinner, at which of course none but gentlemen were present, and he should like very much if it were practicable to get up a banquet or concert, at which the ladies might be present.

Mr. Fairbairn said that our Sister Society in Toronto have decided to celebrate the day by a banquet, at which the ladies are to be present.

Mr. W. A. Scott was very much in favor of something of this kind, and after fully discussing the subject the matter was finally left in the hands of the following Committee to carry out the wishes of the Society in the best manner possible, viz.: the President and Vice Presidents, Messrs. Smith, Sutherland, Grant, H. Millar, Lawson and W. A. Scott.

The Secretary reminded the Society that St. Andrew's day falling on Saturday this year, it might be well to empower the Committee to change the evening for the banquet if they thought it necessary to do so. The Committee were accordingly instructed to have the banquet either on Saturday, the 30th, or Monday, 2nd of December, as they thought best, and after transacting some other preliminary business, the meeting separated.

The meeting was very successful. It was proposed and resolved to celebrate the honoured day by a banquet, but the Committee after making every effort to obtain suitable apartments are reluctantly compelled to abandon the enterprise for this year at least. It is now resolved to give the usual annual dinner, of which timely announcement will be made. It will hardly be denied that a social evening in honor of one's country leaves a deeper toned patriotism behind it, and conduces to a more intimate and happy knowledge by men of each other.—We sincerely prefer the former and would advocate the adoption of such a celebration next year, if possible. We understand the term "Banquet" to imply the exclusion of intoxicating liquors, but the presence of the ladies, for both of which we "go in strong." Meantime we hope that the "Sons of Scotia" may have new life infused into their Society and have it made a useful institution, promoting good feeling amongst fellow countrymen and benevolence towards the destitute.

THAT MEETING IN THE SOUTH WARD.—We heard it announced that there was to be a meeting in the South Ward to condemn the action of one of its representatives in the Town Council for the course he was pursuing in the matter of a certain By-law. The meeting was held, but lo, to the surprise of its originators it sanctioned the straight-forward course of Mr. Leonard, but condemned the course of those who wished to have Mr. Leonard resign. The ways of the world are not always according to our wishes, of course. Mr. Leonard made some strange revelations in regard to council meetings and the mode practised to prevent quorums, when such is desired, that some of the councillors did not wish to hear. The following are the resolutions that were brought forward at the meeting, but as we were not present we can only give the resolutions.

"Moved by W. A. Scott, seconded by A. Williams,—Whereas we understand that this meeting has been called by a few of the ratepayers of the South Ward to pass a vote of censure, or ask one of the councillors—Mr. Leonard—to resign his seat in the council, on account of his willingness to leave the matter of aid to the Cobourg, Peterboro and Marmora Mining and R. R. Company to the decision of the ratepayers—in the opinion of this meeting Mr. Leonard has not in his action in connection with the R. R. move [illegible] forfeited the confidence of his constituents but, they approve of leaving all matters in connection with railroads and other improvements to a vote of the ratepayers."—Carried by a large majority.

"Moved in amendment by Mr. Robertson, seconded by Mr. English, and resolved,—That this meeting views with indignation the conduct of Thomas Leonard, one of our councillors, in voting for the By-law granting $40,000 to the Cobourg railway, and this meeting hereby calls upon him to at once resign his seat in the council unless the pledges himself to vote against that or any other By-law having reference to the Cobourg railway. And resolved further that all the councillors for the South Ward be requested to give a similar vote."—Lost.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT.—A very serious accident occurred on Tuesday evening from the often condemned foolish practice of toying with fire-arms. It appears that three ladies were passing the evening at Mr. Solomon Easton's, Grocer, Main street. They were in the bedroom, where Mr. Easton keeps a pistol. One of the ladies, Miss Jane Rose, took the pistol in her hand, playfully saying, "I wonder if I can fire this off," and in a moment the pistol was discharged, the bullet entering just beneath the right eye of Miss Easton, daughter of Mr. Seymour G. Easton. The bullet lodged in the roof of the mouth, and has not yet been extracted. Will people never learn to give over foolishly playing with fire-arms? Scarcely a week passes but accidents are recorded from this cause.—Brockville Recorder.

SEAT FOR MR. RICHARDS.—Mr. Robertson having resigned his seat for Niagara, in the Ontario Legislature, in favor of Honorable Stephen Richards, the election will come off in about ten days.

The sale of intoxicating liquors in the Parliament House has been prohibited.—Refreshments will still be furnished, but none of a spirituous kind.—Freeholder.

The Firemen's Annual Dinner.

The Protection Fire Company held their annual dinner yesterday evening. Captain O'Donnel very ably presided, and on his right were the Mayor, J. Carnegie, M. P. P., and Capt. J. J. Rogers; on his left, Col. Peile, Major Kennedy and H. Calcutt, Esq. Mr. Hatton, Dr. Kindell, Mr. Lawrey, Mr. Shiels and a large number of guests were also present. The evening was pleasantly spent as all dinners with the Firemen have been. Full attention having been paid to the good things provided, Capt. O'Donnel gave the usual loyal toasts. "The Queen," "The Prince and Princess of Wales and the rest of the Royal Family," "The Governor General," &c. "The Army and Navy" being given, the flow of soul then commenced. Lieut.-Col. Peele, Major Kennedy and Capt. Rogers responded in turn.

Lieut. Col. Peele remarked that although not going to the dinner with the intention of making a speech, still he could not let them with the Army and Navy of Great Britain were mentioned, and the Volunteers of Canada. He was glad to be able to say that the Army and Navy of Great Britain was in a healthy state. The first great naval engagement of Great Britain he believed was the destruction of the great Armada, by all upon a few insignificent vessels; since that, France had raised the cry, and he believed would continue to do so, but great iron clads were invincible, and no invasion could stand before them.

Major Kennedy was happy to have responded to the toast of the Army and Navy. It was an honor to be connected with brave men; it was a great honor to be connected with the Army and Navy and Volunteers of Canada. He was particularly proud to be connected with the Volunteer force of Canada. They were second to none to the regular army, in intelligence, wealth and skill, and he knew they would be found as they had already, doing their duty when their country's defence and protection required them.

Captain Rogers felt proud also to belong to the Volunteer force of Canada—it was no small honor, and he would only add to the already eloquent responses—that he knew the Volunteers were ready, aye ready, and with their new rifle they would not be far behind the regular army.

"The Mayor and Corporation" was next given.

The Mayor responded in very happy style. He believed the Mayor and Corporation were rising in public estimation, this toast was generally back in the list, now it was up near the Governor General. He really thought that if they would give to every thing (town halls, railroads, gravel roads, and bridges) they would soon get to be placed before the Governor on the list of toasts. He was exceedingly thankful to them for the manner in which they had received the toast. He always enjoyed himself at the Firemen's dinners, and he thought that it would be well to have their annual dinners quarterly. (Laughter."

The vice chair, Mr. Hall, then gave "Ashburnham," which was ably responded to by Councillor Calcutt, remarking that Ashburnham was not behind the town much, indeed in some things he thought she was ahead. She had voted money to the railroad which the town had not yet, but he hoped would ere long.

Song by Mr. Lawson, "When my old hat was new."

"The House of Commons and House of Assembly of Canada," was the next.

Song by Mr. Henderson, "God bless our New Dominion."

Mr. Carnegie, M.P.P., in returning thanks said it was with much pleasure he did so. He had been supposed by the "Governor" and certainly by the patrolling force. This was the first Firemen's banquet he had had the pleasure of attending since his election, and he could say that he had enjoyed it, and would add that it was the fruit of his election he would not regret to be elected forever.

Mr. Hatton then, in a neat speech, gave the "Dominion," remarking that he was glad to see that members from every province were coming in fast, and all were appearing ready to give up their differences for the common good, and if they continued the Dominion would prosper. He would only add the words of the song just sung, "May God bless our New Dominion."

Want of space forbids our giving the remaining speeches and songs, but we may truly say that the evening was a pleasant one. The "cup that cheers not to inebriate" prevailed. The best of good humor characterized the whole proceeding. Messrs. Beall, Henderson, Butler, Ensign Johnson, Kimball and Bates added much to the pleasantness of the evening by their songs. After a little attention to all the interests of our new Dominion, and to the Ladies in particular, the company dispersed wishing that the Firemen may have many more dinners and that they may be invited.

Commission of Synod of the Church of Scotland.

The Commission met again yesterday. No report was ready for presentation from the Temporalities Board; but Dr. Cook reported that the fund had sustained a loss of $142.00 through the suspension of the Commercial Bank, the par value being $124,000. There were from thirty-three to thirty-six ministers for whom there would be no provision at all.—The first question was how to meet the January payments, for which about $7,500 would be required. If the Bank went into liquidation, the stock would be an absolute loss. There were 46 communing ministers on the roll, three of whom had suffered immediately and largely through the failure of the Bank. Excluding these three, and adding the ten who receive £180 a year, let the fifty contribute £10 each, and then let them apply to fifty wealthy laymen to give £10 each also. Should this plan fail, let them seek to provide for the coming semi annual payments. In that case not thirty-three or thirty-six only, but very many more, must give up all expectation of receiving assistance from the fund. He defended the Board in having invested so large an amount in bank stock and stated that there was a definite though not written agreement between them and the cashier of the Bank, that it should be given up at any time it might be demanded, at the price paid for it, which was about two per cent less than the then market value. The holding of nearly one-half the capital of the bank is a permanent way to an American railway had been the great mistake and evil, and he considered that it should go forth as their opinion that money entrusted to a bank should not be invested as had been the case in that of the Commercial Bank. He felt this to be especially desirable, as scarcely one of the public points and endowments to show how the calamity had come about. Mr King had been attacked, as being probably, the one who could be most easily reached; but no blame had been attached to the conduct of Mr. Ross and the Directors of the Commercial Bank, by whom the evil had been wrought.

Principal Snodgrass said, many of the questions which had been raised would have to be over till they had fuller information as to the state and prospects of the Bank. The question now was how to meet the expenditure required in January next.

After considerable discussion,

Principal Snodgrass moved, seconded by Rev. Mr. Hunter, the following resolutions:—

"That the Commission having considered the very great diminution of the revenue of the Temporalities' Fund, caused by the suspension of the Commercial Bank, resolve—

"1 That the Commission refer the consideration of all questions bearing upon the capital of the fund, and its further management, to the Temporalities' Board and the Synod.

"2 That the Commission is of opinion that a special effort should be made to provide for the present emergency, so that the next semi-annual payments to ministers may be secured, and that an appeal to the Churches should be responded to with sufficient liberality to render such an effort successful, therefore respectfully request the Temporalities' Board to adopt, as speedily as possible, such means as may be most effectual in obtaining the money required in the manner suggested."

After striking resolutions, the motion was carried, and the Synod adjourned.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—The London Times in the leading editorial on the Italian situation, criticising in last night's of the Prime Minister threatens, boldly declaring the abolition of the temporal power is necessary to the production of peace, calls it Italy's ultimatum to France.

PARIS, Nov. 14.—Previous to the departure of the French troops from Rome, the Holy Father received the staff officers in a body at the audience chamber of the Vatican, and addressed them in the most feeling manner. He expressed his happiness at having the soldiers of France around him once more, but never had his happiness been so great as it was now, because of the recent peril to which he had been exposed. He returned thanks to the officers, to France, and to the Emperor Napoleon, for the deliverance of the Holy See. He was filled with grief to see that Italy had sent out as a vanguard against Rome, a horde of anarchists, upon whose flags were inscribed rapine and devastation. While the valour of the Pontifical troops had successfully defended the soil of the church, the army of France had come to crown the splendid defence. The Pope concluded by saying that in the midst of his trouble, he had the consolation of receiving sincere expressions of Catholic sympathy from all parts of the world. His Holiness then terminated the interview by giving his apostolic blessing to the army, the people, and the Emperor of France.

LONDON, Nov. 14.—Maguire, one of the five prisoners who were convicted of murder before the Special Commission, at Manchester, and were condemned to death, has been pardoned by the Queen. All through his trial Maguire stoutly maintained his innocence, declaring that he was not even present at the attack on the Police Van when Sergeant Brett was killed.

Rome by parties received from Italy, state that the feeling against the French on the part of the Italians, has reached a perfect fureore. The authorities have taken precautions to prevent another outbreak, which was imminent, and more French troops have been despatched from Reuloe for Civita Vecchia.

King Victor Emmanuel and the Prime Minister, Menebrea, are very unpopular with the people.

Ratazzi, formed Prime Minister, has openly joined the radical party.

King Victor Emmanuel has called out the reserves of the Italian army, and ordered the formation of three large camps.

Garibaldi is closely confined.

It is stated that the Fenian, Kelly, who was rescued from the police at Manchester has appeared in Belgium.

PARIS, Nov 15.—The Bullion in the Bank of France has increased ten million francs.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov 14.—It is reported that Gen. Ignatieff, present Minister of Russia, at Constantinople, will replace Princes Gortschakoff as minister of Foreign Affairs.

NAPLES, Nov. 14.—Mount Vesuvius, on the east side of the Bay of Naples, is in volcanic action and sending forth pillars of fire which have a magnificent effect. New craters have been formed and the usual point of issue is also engaged. Last night red hot stones were ejected in large quantities from the mountain. The surrounding earth is in tremulous motion for a considerable distance. The lava is pouring down the side of the mountain in a volume and with rapid flow, and the general upheaving from the volcano gives warning of an unusual grand eruption from which we may look for very serious consequences as in former years.

The Hurricane at St. Thomas.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11. By the arrival of the steamer Marmion, from St Thomas last night, we have additional particular of the great hurricane there. The surgeon of the steamer reported: We arrived at St. Thomas on the morning of the 30th, and found that the island had been visited the day previous by the most terrific hurricane ever known there, the town being partially destroyed and the loss of life very great. The amount of property destroyed at present is impossible to estimate, and the scene of destruction and devastation impossible to describe.

The wind commenced blowing a pretty stiff breeze about eight o'clock from the northeast, and about eleven o'clock it changed round to the east and blew a perfect hurricane, carrying everything before it. It lasted about four hours, but during that time raged with such violence that trees were torn up, houses lifted from their foundations and dashed to pieces. Ships and steamers of the largest class as well as smaller vessels were hurled together and either dashed to pieces or sunk. Some fifty or sixty vessels are ashore, dismasted or sunk, and part of their crews lost. Thousands are rendered homeless, and the amount of suffering, confusion and excitement it is impossible to describe. There is nothing doing. Everybody seems paralyzed.

NEW YORK, 12th.—The Herald's St. Thomas letter states that the Steamer "Ure" lost 53 souls. Out of 150 on the steamer "Rhone," 21 were saved. The Spanish steamer "Cumangner" lost 17 out of 30.—The American ship "Charles Sprague" had but the captain and one man saved. In fact there is hardly a vessel but can report some of the crew missing. The English steamer "Columbian" had just arrived with 3,000 packages of dry goods, and was sunk in less than one hour after her anchorage. Eight out of nine lives will not pay the loss. Up to this date 350 persons have been buried of those who lost their lives in the hurricane.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The Herald's Havana special says later advices from Porto Rico are received.

The late tempest was more severe than the two terrible gales which visited the ill-fated island previous to 1867. All the towns have been terribly desolated.

One thousand houses have been laid in ruins, and 3,000 have been severely damaged. In some in towns the houses along entire streets have been demolished, and the road-ways entirely blocked up by the ruins.

No news whatever received regarding the effects of the storm in the central position of the island, where on the Savannahs numerous herds are pastured, and elsewhere the cattle have been killed, and the fields swept entirely bare. The loss is incalculable.

The merchants of the island have demanded that flour, corn, provisions, &c., shall be duty free.

During the late gale the little island of Tortola entirely disappeared being completely submerged for eight hours. Every living thing, man or animal, appears perished.

The Montreal Post Office

We have a letter stating (we know not how correctly) that not only is the husband still retained in the post office, of the woman who robbed so many money-letters, but some others of her near relatives. These may, of course, all be wholly innocent of any complicity with her crime; but it is not strange that there should be a general suspicion that they could not all be wholly ignorant of it, seeing that her depredations were long continued and systematic.

However that may be, we have reason to fear that our post-office is far from being in a satisfactory state, for the very obvious reason that the post-master,—who is, or ought to be, held responsible for all introductions,—has no control over the appointment or dismission of his employés.

As long as this most important and responsible branch of the public service is made a convenience for ministers to virtually pension off their electioneering friends and hangers on, the public cannot expect security; and it is rather surprising that there have not been greater peculations in the past. There, however, have, we fear, in one way or another, been considerable,—as employés have been known to accumulate money in a way that could not be accounted for by their legitimate income.

Even now, we believe, there are missing letters to be accounted for which cannot be charged to the old widow and her stove.

The strict accountability of post-masters, and the necessary power on their part to choose and control their subordinates, should imperatively be insisted on by our new House of Commons.

BURGLARIOUS ATTEMPT.—The travelling correspondent of the Toronto Journal points out, under date London, 22d Oct., the humiliating difference between the wealth of the United States Government and that of other nations. Public rents 6 per cent, leaving 6 per cent interest, payable to gold, have fallen (owing to the Democrats and Geo. Bulley promising payment in greenbacks) from 75 to 68. Russia's five per cents, being mortgaged to... Turkey (the sick and nearly dead man), collapsed at the worst European moments, as did a loan in 1864, bearing 6 per cent., which stands at 84. The 6 per cent. bonds of Peru stand at 69, one per cent higher than the United States 6 per cent. Canadian 6 per cents at bonds are 102. Cape of Good Hope, 103 to 107; Ceylon, 112; and New Zealand, 107. Of American bonds, those of Massachusetts stands higher, viz., 80 per cent. Money this writer says, is going a begging in England at 1½ per cent, and yet American six per cent bonds are no temptation at 68,—a rate at which they would yield about nine per cent. This immense discrepancy he attributes to bad feeling borne on Americans in the minds of British capitalists, and recommends the United Government to buy its stocks in the English market. He does not seem to see that the price there and the price in New York must nearly correspond, or otherwise the bonds would rapidly find their way from one market to the other. The distance must, consequently, be as great in the States as in England.—Montreal Witness.

HEAVY FAILURE IN HAMILTON.—We are sure that every citizen of Montreal, who is acquainted with the members of the house of Gates & Co., will deeply sympathize with them in the misfortune which has fallen upon them. The head of the firm is the son of the late Mr. Horatio Gates, long at the very head of the trade of this city, and for many years President of the Montreal Bank. Mr. Gates, of Hamilton, was also once in business in this city, but left it when business prospects were gloomy, to found the large establishment in Hamilton, which he has since conducted with so much credit. Its fall seems to be immediately to the sudden withdrawal of assistance which followed the stoppage of the Commercial Bank.—Herald.

The English Parliament House clock is of such magnitude that the time required to wind it up is two hours. The dials are twenty-two feet in diameter, and the hour bell weighs 15 tons.

If a person faints place him instantly flat on the floor, or bed on his back and let him lay quietly for a minutes or so, it is simply a fainting fit, and the blood flowing on a level will speedily equalize itself through the system. If you are troubled with rheumatism, pleurisy, pain in the side or back, cramps in the stomach, burns, frost-bites, &c., procure at once a bottle of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," which is a certain cure for all such complaints. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers in curing coughs, colds, and all Bronchial affections, and obsoothing the afflicted, has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them has steadily increased for the twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these Wafers. When taken in season the effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

The Rev J. C. Fletcher gave on last evening, a brilliant lecture on the religion, customs and people of Brazil. Seldom have we relished anything more than the picture he had laid before his audiences of that exuberant garden of the tropic laden with its strange variety of fruits and flowers, teeming with perpetual harvest for the hand of man. Surely that country must be the garden of the world, and if its people had the enterprise which moves this Yankee nation, imagination could not set a bound to the results they would produce there. As relevant to this comparison the Reverend gentleman stated that the best Remedies employed there for the diseases to which they are subject, are invented and supplied to them by our own well known countryman, Dr. J. C. Ayer of Lowell, Mass., and, that not the people only but the priesthood and the court of the Emperor down, have contract recourse in sickness to the Remedies of this widely celebrated American Chemist.—Ledger, Boston.

SEWING MACHINES!

GROUT'S

New Twisted Elastic Three Corded Stitch

SEWING MACHINE.

THE undersigned has received the agency for the sale of Rogers, Grout & Co's $15 Family Sewing Machine, which took the first prize and diploma at the last Provincial Fair held at Kingston, against all other Machines exhibited.

This Machine does all kinds of work, from the thickest to the thinest; works on Leather, Beaver and Woolen Cloth, Cotton, Linen and Muslin, using Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, drive it from the spools without the trouble of rewinding. It will hem, fell, stitch, tuck, bind, braid, quilt, seam, gather, sew, or ruffle, or embroider, and do ornamental stitching in the most perfect manner.

The twisted stitch and the means of making it is peculiar, as it is produced by a rotating looper of peculiar construction, with a spur or cast off slide, and is so constructed that it is impossible to miss a stitch, besides being the most simple operation in the world.

All will see the great advantage of the twist given the thread, as each thread has a twist given it while forming the stitch, making it a three cord stitch, having greater strength than any other stitch, at the same time giving it great beauty.

Prices of Grout & Co's Sewing Machines, complete, with hemmer, bruider, extra needles, screw driver, clamp, book of instructions to enable any one to operate it at once, $15; Machines plated and pearled from $18 to $25; table and treadles, $6; extra needles, 75 cents per dozen; full supply of oil, silk thread, &c., for sale.

ALSO,

Raymond's $12 Sewing Machines

Kept on hand. Needles for both Machines kept for sale.

Over A Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen,—I had a horse which was worth $1,200, who could never travel faster than a walk, each step, motion and sense of pain I had tried everything I could hear of to cure him, but all to no effect. I was induced to purchase a pair of your Spavin Cure, and before I had used one bottle of it my horse was entirely cured. I have since used it in my family for Rheumatism, Sprains, Bruises, Cuts, Burns and Wounds. Can recommend it to all who may require it.

Yours truly,

J. W. HEWITT,

Veterinary Surgeon for Awards, Wall-Street and Harpden's Knowers.

Another Spavin case of Dr. Vaughan's Liniment, which shall not be named, was cured in one week, after the veterinary surgeon of your city (name withheld) had given it up.

Ole Peter, Miss., Aug. 1, 1867.

It is an admitted fact that the Veterinary Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on more and worse cases than any other ever discovered. Fistulas, diseased withers and poll evil always have it on hand. Quick action sure it certainly is. All genuine have signed on the outside wrapper, bearing the signature of H. W. Woodcock Gilmore, and the private U. S. stamps of Dennes Hooper & Co. over the top.

No other has been made to counterfeit it with so cheap a stone plate label. Look closely!

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases that affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind in use, to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases, and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It oil cases the breathing apparatus, removing from the air-cells the cause of Heaves, or that secretion which in Heaves or Thick Wind, causing a difficulty in breathing, and a loud action on the diseased part causing the membrane to resume its natural oily state, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, restoring the dilated vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is increased, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Drawing the Enemy's Fire.

Frank was an only child. There is where the trouble commenced, I think. If old Mr. Massey, who was a widower, had half a score of sons and daughters, he would not have made such a move of brightening up Frank. I remember the story of the woman who said that when her first child was an infant, she would run up stairs half-a-dozen times in the course of an evening after she had put it in its crib, 'to see if it breathed right. 'But,' said she, 'after I had three, I was perfectly satisfied if they breathed at all.' So it would have been with Mr. Massey, but so it wasn't with him. He hadn't one other child but Frank, and he continued to watch Frank's breathing until he was one and-twenty—and, indeed, he was about to be married.

He was about to marry me, or that is when he wanted to do. We were distantly related, not by blood, however yet we had never seen each other until my father, who was a near man, bought a small farm adjoining Mr. Massey's large one. Frank kindly rode over to see me and claim relationship, but his father never took that trouble.

Frank looked like his father; they were both handsome men. Mr. Massey was only fifty-four, but no one ever thought he would marry again.

When he found out how often Frank came to our house, there was trouble. He forbid Frank coming to see me, but it was too late to prevent what he dreaded, we were already engaged.

'It's a confounded bore,' said Frank one evening, when I met him in the lane, out of sight of the Massey mansion. 'My dear uncle, Billy, is nothing to father when he gets set. Now supposing, when we are married, that he cuts up and refuses me any money?'

'Well?' said I, interrogatively?

'It isn't well,' replied Frank, impatiently. 'I don't see how on earth I'd take care of you. I don't know how to work.'

My enthusiasm was rather dampened.—Now I was not going to marry Frank on account of his money, but I was by no means indifferent to it. If I had met him as a pauper, I should have loved him all the same and should have planned my future accordingly; but having expected to be rich when I married, it was cortial to disagreeable to be told that I might not be rich—moreover, that my husband did not know how to work, and could not take care of me. I remember to sing at him as he stood there under the trees, and wondering if with three or four children on my hands, perhaps, I should have to take care of him. I recollect that the thought cooled my ardor a little, and I sat on the stone wall and moodily tore rosebuds to pieces as the first reminder of the interview.

'What's the matter?' said he. 'Do you want to give me up?'

With a great sigh. 'Of course I don't.'

'Then what makes you so cold? You jerk away from me every time I touch you as if my hand stung you.'

'I'm sick,' said I, 'and I don't feel affectionate. You can't always expect to find me in the same mood.'

He stood silently looking at me. The sight of my downcast face seemed to irritate him; his blue eyes grew dark and stormy.

'You think I am going to lose my money,' said he. 'If that is what you care for, you had better marry Rube Reynolds and be sure of a fortune. He has as much as I, and no father to shut it off. Don't be discouraged, my dear; if you want to marry money you have plenty of chances. There is old Johnny Wall, the miser, who would, probably marry you tomorrow.'

I was too angry to speak, so I just turned around and walked away

Of course I went to bed very unhappy.

I was working in the garden the next morning when Miss Fox came to at the gate. She was the village school-teacher then, you know. I don't know where she came from; I never knew I was very glad to become acquainted with her, because she threw so much about books, and I was acutely starved for them.

'Can't wait but a moment, dear,' said she, kissing me; 'it's most time for school to take up. Why, what's the matter with your eyes? Have you been crying?'

We sat down on the grass and I told her all my troubles.

'Frank's a dear fellow, but he's very quick-tempered, you know. He's rich and they, and in all [illegible] Frank could marry to [illegible] and I'm perfectly miserable. No girl ever had such a hard time before?'

'My love,' said Miss Fox, 'I'm just on [illegible] above the [illegible] and [illegible] a great brother of Frank's [illegible] and [illegible] but not [illegible] [illegible]

'He [illegible] dear? and [illegible] playing with my curls.

'Pet? I discovered. 'Frank really hasn't anything but what he inherits [illegible] and I'm shocked left by the [illegible] terrible [illegible] I believe. But he's an only child, and it's [illegible] as being master of the [illegible].'

'Yes, of course,' observed Miss Fox.

'Only he can, you know' said I, beginning to cry again, 'if he gets very angry at Frank, leave the estate and everything else [illegible] Frank says he's as stubborn as a mule.'

'It's after o'clock,' said Miss Fox, 'I must hurry to school; but don't you fret about it in matter; I'll come in to-night and help fix it. 'Tis not a hopeless case by any means.'

We kissed each other, and she tripped away up the road to the school-house. When she right that evening we sat down to sew and chat.

'I've been thinking about you all day, dear.'

'As I told you,' she observed, fitting two bits of silk together, 'the trouble lies in the squire's having little to do. He has magnified the affair until it seems perfectly disastrous to Frank to marry you. He's not acquainted with you, is he?'

'No,' said I, 'he's never been near the house, and, of course, I would not go there with-out an invitation, though he is my father's own brother's wife's second husband.'

'Well, my love,' said she, 'our enemy seems like a very hard one; but I think we can manage him if we can only draw off his fire for a time.'

'How?'

'His housekeeper is my aunt, you know.'

'I didn't know it.'

'Well, she is. Now suppose when my school term is finished next week I go and make her a visit, and play the mumble to the squire and intercede for you.'

'Why, do you think it would do any good,' cried I, eagerly.

'Yes,' said she, 'for this reason: I think the old fellow is morbus with living all to-gether over-indulgence. Aunt says the piano is never heard in the house; I play and sing, you know, and I believe that a little music and lively chat would sweeten the old fellow a temper.'

'Oh, you dear! Very likely it would.'

'Then I will seize the favorable moment, and you may trust me to accomplish the reconciliation. I am sure that I could do it.'

'I believe you could.'

'Well,' said she folding up her work, 'if you trust me, go right on and be married. Ain't you a little afraid the squire will discourage the idea in Frank if things go on in this way long?'

'I don't know but he will,' said I. 'For it is very [illegible] now, and it would break my heart to give him up, after all, even tho' he hadn't a cent.'

'Then make up your quarrel and marry him.'

I went down the lane, and waited for Frank that evening in the best of spirits. He came looking a little doubtful how he was going to be received, but I put my arms around his neck and kissed him.

'It's going to come out all right, Frank,' said I; and I told him all the plans.

'Miss Fox is such a charming girl,' said I, 'and such good company! I'm perfectly sure that she'll win your father over. We might be married any time.'

'Let us wait a week or two, and see how she succeeds,' said Frank.

'Don't you think she will succeed?'

'I shouldn't wonder.'

Four days later Miss Fox went to the Glades, to pay her aunt a visit. I helped her to make some pretty dresses. One particular blue silk she looked lovely in. She curled her hair, and it glittered like spirals of gold.

For a day or two I watched and waited anxiously. I listened and heard the sound of the piano played very finely. Then, on the third evening, Frank came right into the garden.

'Why, Frank!' said I; 'aren't you afraid your father will see you?'

'No he has gone to drive with Miss Fox.'

'How is she getting on?' asked I.

'Finely. I never saw father so pleased with a girl before.'

At the end of a week came a note from Miss Fox. 'I have succeeded more rapidly and completely than I had dared to hope. The squire is as merry as the day is long.

Frank brought me the note; then he did not come again for a week.

'Dare he stay at home and flirt with Miss Fox?' thought I, in alarm.

But the next evening he came, and in the best of spirits.

'Father spoke to me about you to-day,' said he, 'and he said that if I thought you would make me a good, capable wife, I might marry you.'

'Isn't Miss Fox a darling?' said I.

At the end of ten years we were quietly married, and went to New York for a day or two.

On our return Frank took me home. I was only my second interview with his father. The squire had made me one civil call after giving his consent to our marriage.

I remember as we rode up the avenue of the Glades of looking from the carriage window and admiring the stately beauty of what I supposed to be my future home.—The squire received us kindly. Miss Fox who was sitting at work in the same room, and looking very pretty, kissed me and congratulated us.

The squire glanced at her with a very

THE AMERICAN WAR.

A recent London paper states that Lord Stanley has obtained an abstract of the Returns of Abyssinia, although this has not formally reached him from the Indian office. This statement and the fact that the first members of the English expedition barely left Zulaa, on the coast of the Red Sea, for the Abyssinian mission, show that the war may be regarded as really [illegible]

[illegible] the subject to the [illegible] week a [illegible] has not [illegible] Parliament was not to [illegible]. The British people have, for some years past, clamored for a determination of what [illegible] King Theodore, but since the Government took the matter up the project has been less favorably regarded, and Lord Derby does not think it best to incur the sanction of Parliament.

There will be great interest felt in this expedition, which England has inaugurated, in all parts of the world, and one effect of it will be the gathering of valuable and reliable information in regard to a country of which but little is now extensively known.—The British Government has collected all available maps and data in regard to Abyssinia for the management of the pending campaign, but the country has never been thoroughly explored by Europeans, and the statements in regard to the size and population of the country are quite indefinite and contradictory.

The war will be an expensive one for England, and there is little probability that the persons held as prisoners by the King will be anything advantaged by the expedition. If Theodore is so obstinate as he has the credit of being, and if the Abyssinians are as barbarious in their habits as they are believed to be, neither the King nor his subjects will hesitate to take the lives of their captives rather than have them pass into the hands of the English.—It is certainly to be hoped that this war will be successful in restoring those persons to liberty, which must be doubly dear to them after four years confinement under Kish Theodore's dominion. In case the prisoners are murdered by the Abyssinians the war will be conducted with all possible vigor by the British forces, and it is quite likely that a part or all of the country will be permanently occupied by them.

Looking at the expedition as a purely military movement, there are fair prospects for success on the part of the British. The war will be substantially such a one as the English have several times successfully carried on against various tribes in India, and the experience gained in these Indian campaigns, together with the assistance of some ten thousand native Indian troops, will be of invaluable service in the conduct of this campaign. Sir Robert Napier, who has command of the expedition, has served many years in India and China, and was in active service during the extensive Indian mutinies in 1857. If Theodore has confidence enough in his forces to risk open fights with the English, the result will not be doubtful, for it will be impossible for the Abyssinians to long contend against the forces and means of war that will be used against them. If, however, he chooses to fight with small parties of men among his mountain regions, he can subject the invaders to a good deal of annoyance and prolong the war until even the completest British victory will have been dearly gained. The war will be fairly commenced before the end of the present year, and we shall soon know in what manner the Abyssinian King means to vindicate his assumed right to imprison Englishmen.

The very newest thing in trades unionism is a threatened strike of curates. Attention is called to the matter by an "Old Incumbent," who comments upon a printed document which was circulated at a recent meeting of discontented curates in London, in St. Martin-in-the-Fields. We perceive from this document that low pay is only one of the grievances requiring redress, for the relief demanded by our agitators comprises the following particulars:—Curacies are to become permanent; curates to have proper independence; to be protected from arbitrary and despotic treatment, whether episcopal or other; curates to be on equal footing in spiritual matters with the incumbent; to be the incumbent's assessor in things spiritual; the equality of priests; the right to celebrate at certain times, a system of promotion, by seniority; the equalization, (according to population,) of the stipends of incumbents; the monies of the various charities to be thrown into a common fund.

How to Relieve Choked Cattle.

—I have fattened many cattle on potatoes, and always feed them whole, and occasionally one gets choked. I then put the animal in the yard, where there are bars, which I let down, so that she can jump over, but as high as she will jump. I then place her about two rods from the bars, with her head towards them, and with a good whip well applied, I run her over the bars on a jump, and when she touches the ground on the opposite side, the potatoe will fly out of her mouth. I have informed my neighbours of this remedy, many of whom have tried it and in no case have I known a failure.—Aaron Lee, in Rural American.

Jenny Lind left many friends and admirers in America, who will be sorry to hear that her latest appearance in public has been a failure. That the freshness of her voice should be gone was inevitable, but it seems to be agreed that its splendour and strength are also gone. "In plain truth," writes one correspondent, "it is now little better than a beautiful wreck, which the frequent ardour of the still aspiring artist only makes the more apparent."

Deficiency in Reading and Spelling.

It is not an uncommon thing to find boys and young men studying Greek, Latin, Algebra, Geometry, and still higher branches, when they cannot spell sufficiently well to enable them to write a brief note to a friend without mistakes rendering it mortification and shame. This deficiency in spelling debars a pupil through the whole course of his study from writing anything he can possibly avoid, while one who is a good speller finds pleasure in writing and composing, the practice of which is indispensable to prepare one for a ready business man. If as a common thing for boys to the usual studying different branches in our high and select schools, [illegible] had to the end will be found unable to spell either the titles of the books they are studying or the subdivisions of their contents. Spelling is said to be like truth; it is no particular honor to be truthful, but it is a great disgrace to be a notorious liar; so it is no special credit to spell well, but it is a great discredit to spell poorly.

Defects in reading are equally prominent in our schools. This has many injurious consequences which cannot appreciated, and perhaps are not thought of. It greatly retards the progress of the pupil in whatever branch he may attempt to study. Take two scholars, give them the same lesson, say in Natural Philosophy, let one be able to read with facility, and the other not, the former will glide through his lesson like a sleigh on snow, while the other will stick and drag and hitch along like one on bare ground; the former will read his lesson with an ease which will enable him to fix his attention upon the subject-matter which he is to learn, while the attention of the other will be absorbed in his laborious effort to spell out the words and read it. The former will be likely to find pleasure and encouragement, while the latter will find nothing but fatigue and discouragement; the latter looks upon the two, three, or more pages which comprise his lesson and sighs over the reality since that what he is to learn is locked up in a casement of print which it will be almost impossible for him to open. this inability to read easily, causes the pupil to avoid reading [illegible] as possible through the whole course of his studies, and in the end to come out as poor a reader as to cause him to blush whenever attempting to read even a newspaper article in the presence of others.

A college diploma is no guarantee that its recipient is a good reader. It is an acknowledged fact that a large proportion of our pulpits are occupied by poor readers, and in the legal profession it is a rare thing to find an accomplished reader.

With such defects in spelling and reading, pupils enter our high and select schools to prepare for college and for the examining-room. The teachers of the schools feel the embarrassment; they realize the necessity of subjecting the pupils to a thorough drilling on these two important branches. But just here a difficulty is encountered. To do this in generally to disappoint the parent. He has sent his boy to the high school to, of course, study high branches, and to have him put back to spelling and reading is contrary to his expectations and and a disappointment to him. Not appreciating these rudiments of an education, he becomes dissatisfied and complains to the teacher. This is a standing difficulty, and ought to be removed. As long as parents are so thoughtless or so ignorant as not to know what is best for their children, teachers of our high and select schools ought to stand up firmly to their sense of duty, and drill their pupils in what they know to be the most important for them to learn.

The question may naturally be asked how proficiency in spelling and reading is to be secured, and especially before a public enters the select or high school? The answer is a plain one. Have the child drilled in the infant or primary school or at home, until he has become expert in these branches. It is well known that this attainment is the result of practice, and practice only, and that if sufficient practice be had, the desirable object will be secured.—Ann Paper.

FROM EUROPE BY TELEGRAPH.

Manchester, 22nd.—The condemned Fenians, Allen, Larkin and Gould, suffered the extreme penalty of the law in the city at 10 o'clock this morning. The precautions taken by the Government to guard against outbreaks were effectual. Notwithstanding the prevalence of a dense fog and dashing rain, the crowd that witnessed the execution was very large. The city is now perfectly quiet.

Manchester, 22nd.—Shore, one of the executed Fenians, has been granted a respite.

A public meeting was held here yesterday by persons opposed to the execution of the Fenians, and resolutions to that effect were passed.

Manchester, 22nd.—The city has the appearance of being in a state of seige.—Most extraordinary precautions are taken by the Government. Barricades have been erected in the streets for the protection of the troops. Regular infantry are stationed at different points in the city, and troops of cavalry, which lately arrived here, are patrolling the streets. Two or three hundred special policemen are disturbed among the police stations. Derbymites have been classed with the condemned prisoners the greater part of the day.—Everything indicates, without doubt, that the Government is determined not to permit the sentence to contempt of the enforcement; and intends to make their execution an imposing demonstration of firmness and vigor, in order to put a stop to Fenian violence and disturbance.

Birmingham, 22nd.—The insultious proceedings at the meeting in favor of the Manchester rioters, last night, produced great excitement, and the agitation is increasing to-day. A bitter anti-Fenian feeling prevails among the larger portion of the people and serious riots are feared.

Birmingham, 22nd.—A large public meeting was held here yesterday to protest against the hanging of the Manchester Fenians. Some disorder occurred, and riotious demonstrations were made at the conclusion of the meeting.

Preparations are being made in London to observe in a peculiar manner, the obsequies of the Fenians, who are to suffer the extreme penalty, to-morrow. On Saturday, a funeral procession, with hearses, and all the usual mourning devices, will be organized and march to Hyde Park, where a solemn meeting will be held.

London, 22nd.—An orderly demonstration against the execution of the Fenians took place here last night. A large number of people assembled at one of the public halls and passed resolutions, urging the Government to grant stay of proceedings. A Committee was appointed to draw up and present a petition for mercy to the Queen.

London, 22nd.—In the House of Commons last night an effort was made to save the lives of the Manchester rioters.

Mr. McGuire, the member for Cork, moved that the House interfere for a stay in the execution of the sentences of the Fenian convicts at Manchester, and that in the meanwhile the points of law upon which he bases his reasons, be referred to the twelve highest judicial authorities of the realm. The motion gave rise to a long and earnest discussion. Mr. McGuire was supported by H. Fawcett, the member for Brighton, and Sir Geo. Bowyer; but Messrs. Hardy, Gladstone and Kinglake made strong speeches against the motion, and it was finally withdrawn. The opinion of the House being manifestly against any further consideration of the subject.

Queenstown, 23rd—The steamer 'Virginia', from New York, has arrived.

London, 22nd, Evening.—To-day the Committee appointed by the meeting of last evening presented to the Queen, at Windsor, a petition for the postponement of the executions at Manchester. Her Majesty, in a most direct manner, declined to grant the petition.

PARLIAMENTARY.

We have very little yet to chronicle concerning what is going on at Ottawa. Ministers have not yet made known their policy. We hear of a Militia Bill, but we have not received details. A Postal Bill is also promised, but like the preceding one, the details are not yet made known.

It is said, however, that it is the intention to reduce postage on letters to three cents and on papers to half a cent, prepayment always necessary. To prepayment on letters we can form no reasonable objection, but we cannot for a moment imagine that the government entertains the slightest idea of making prepayment of postage on newspapers compulsory; no matter how small the rate, to the publisher it would be ruinous, while the plan of leaving it optional so divides the amount into infinitesimals that no one suffers. If the object be to prevent loss of postage on papers that are never called for, to remedy that the department might call on publishers to pay the postage on these papers, but we cannot for a moment imagine that any system will be adopted that would prove ruinous to the business of any portion of our citizens. The Globe thinks that letter postage might be reduced to two cents, but argues against making prepayment on new-papers compulsory. So far the session is barren of any important results. No question likely to divide the House has been introduced, and if the government proceeds for the remaining few days to the holidays as they have been doing, they will be able to return to their homes in peace and quietness, as nothing that has yet occurred makes them afraid. They take to business quite easy.

Mr. Galt is about to resign his seat for a commission to see after the Intercolonial Railway affairs. This will afford a better chance for picking.

The cable news since our last brings intelligence that the Fenians condemned at Manchester for the murder of Brett have suffered the extreme penalty of the law.—The Queen refused to grant a reprieve or even a postponement of the sentence. The course was not an unwise one. England and Scotland as well as their native land have been the scenes of Fenian movements, and the large cities have been in more or less terror for fear of some uprising that might cause injury to property, for there is no fear of their being able to accomplish anything more. In Canada leniency was extended to the raiders, that emboldened others to hang on our borders and threaten to annoy us.—In Ireland there has been too much clemency shown to the disturbers, and it certainly is not a wise policy to be too lenient. The execution of a few of the leaders will tend to discourage the remainder and will do as much to prevent further uprising as a standing army. There was considerable sympathy for the condemned Fenians, but the presence of well organized military force prevented any great manifestation of it.

Some of our contemporaries say, remove the grievances of which the Irish people complain, and which render these complaints almost continual. But give them all they ask; let them have the church rates removed; give them an Irish parliament and then they will ask an Irish king, and having obtained one they would next be seeking for British interference to prevent their own extinction. The people of Ireland will never be contented or happy until they learn that true happiness is found rather in trying to make the best of their circumstances than in trying to overturn a government that has been able to maintain its superiority over them for several hundred years.

BRITISH TEMPLAR'S SOIREE.—A public Soiree under the auspices of Alpha Lodge, B. O. of G. T., will be held in their Hall, over Mr. Landy's store, George street, on Tuesday evening next, 3rd December. Mr. E. Carswell, of Oshawa, Rev. C. Barker, of Cobourg, and other eminent speakers are expected to deliver addresses on the occasion. Tickets 25 cents each, to be had from the members and at the door.

CONCERT TO-NIGHT.—Remember that this evening Mrs. T. H. Rollo favours us with an evening's entertainment. The programme, we believe, is a good one, and several noted amateurs from a distance and of the town will take part in proceedings. There should be a full house.

THE RAILWAY MOVEMENT.

Our readers do not now require to be informed of the movements to extend our Railway communication. The well known fact that a considerable trade now finds its way from the back country to Lindsay, that could be done in Peterborough if there were proper means of communication, has stirred up a number of our citizens to seek to open up southern connection, to Mud Lake at least. The two rival railway interests are each at work—no will not say one opposing and the other advocating extension, but one seeking to give the work to one party, and the other desirous of giving it to another party. Nor will we say that the men who are taking an active part on the different sides are bought to do as they are doing, but we do say that they show their opposition to each other and the place of one another too much. During the discussion in Council, on Monday evening, it was admitted by all that the extension to Mud Lake would benefit this town. Mr. Boswham said that it would double the population in five years and increase the trade of the town tenfold. Certainly if there is a belief that Railway extension would effect that, then it is evidently our interest to get the extension at once. The only beginner is who shall do it?—who shall get the control? that is, if we take the words and arguments used. Of course this is a very important thing, but it is of more importance to get the road—taking their calculations and assertions—as anything that would double our population and increase our trade ten times more, would necessarily be. The question should be—who will give us most for our money? At the present moment we confess ourselves unable to answer the question. The Cobourg Company has made a definite proposal, viz., that they will open the road to Ashburnham and extend that road to Mud Lake for $42,000 The leaders of the Port Hope road have not yet made any formal offer in writing what they will do other than this, that if we build the road they will run it; perhaps we might be asked to put on rolling stock as an inducement. Until we hear the offer of the bearers of the road to Port Hope, we must defer entering into comparisons. The Council, however, deferred discussing the By-laws with the avowed intentention of getting some tangible offer from Mr. Covert. On Monday next we may have something definite.

The direction or route of the road is another obstacle; to go away round by Ashburnham to Mud Lake is a fearful idea, forgetting that the Ashburnham station is as near the centre of the trade of Peterboro, as the present Peterboro Station, such arguments can be only made to be laughed at, let us have some common sense arguments if there are any. Another argument is, to build the extension from Ashburnham will build up Ashburnham, to the detriment of Peterboro, and yet towards we are told the trade will only pass at railroad speed through it on to Cobourg. But we ask why did not the village of Ashburnham rival Peterboro, when the actual terminus of the road was there for years. Yet, during all that time Peterboro steadily and rapidly increased, while the village did no more than attain a small's pace forward. But then we will build up Lakefield if we go there. Why does not the road to Millbrook build up Millbrook and destroy Port Hope? Again we are told that in passing through, we may look at the cars, but we would derive no benefit, real that in passing through Lakefield, what benefit will they get? Of course they may stand and gaze at the trains as they sweep by them.

The fact is, the trade of the county will be done where goods can be bought cheapest, best, and in greatest variety, and until Lakefield or any other place can compete with Peterboro in number of stores, cheapness, variety and quality of goods, we need not be afraid, we do not refer to those flimsy arguments in the way of an advocacy of any route, but we refer to them as evidences of weakness in the arguments of those who oppose extension, unless they get it in their way.

Tea Meeting in School Section No. 1, Otonabee.

On Tuesday the good people of School Section No. 1. in the flourishing old Township of Otonabee, had an excellent tea meeting on the occasion of the opening of a substantial brick school house. Although the day was a little unfavorable, and the roads not so free from mud as one would wish, yet a very large number of people of all ages and classes were there. The parent, no doubt, to see how the little ones would conduct themselves. The ladies, to countenance the good work, and lay before those present, the ample store of the good things they had provided and prepared for the occasion. Several tables were necessary before all were served, yet there was no lack; we did not count the baskets' full of fragments that were left, but we saw several baskets' full that were never touched, or, if touched at all, very little taken out of them, abundant proof that there is abundance in the Township, and that there are hospitable, generous hearts, ready to bestow of that abundance and willing hands to prepare it. After a drive from Peterboro, we had no small desire to have the good things submitted to our criticism, and having our desire gratified, the ladies of the eastern part of Otonabee, we can certify, are not behind the Ladies of any other part in the art of cooking, an accomplishment as much to be sought for, by the sturdy sons of the soil, as the sham accomplishments of bewitching conversation or piano accompaniments; The first being the most pleasing after a days hard toil in the harvest field, or at the plough.

All present having freely discussed the edibles, and the tables being removed, Geo. Read, Esq., M. P. P., was called to the chair and ably presided. Addresses were then made by Mr. Williams, teacher of Keene; Mr. A. B. Kidd, of Peterboro; the Local Superintendent of Common Schools; T. Short, Esq., of Keene; and J. H. Dumble, Esq., of Cobourg. The first four speakers confined themselves to the subject of education and progress, in which Mr. Short was peculiarly happy, in pointing out the progress and present substantial advantages enjoyed by the people of Otonabee. Mr. Dumble who had been particularly invited to speak on railway matters, addressed the meeting last, explaining that the company, owing to the County Council having proposed to aid the railway enterprise to the amount of $20,000, sought only $10,000 from the people of Otonabee and that he had come to say that although the By law stood up to $15,000, the council, under it, could grant only $10,000 all that would be asked of Otonabee. He then went on to show the advantages Otonabee would derive from the road constructed, and very modestly left the matter in the hands of the

THE FENIAN PRISONERS.

Between the addresses a very excellent choir discoursed some very nice music, in which he had presided, to the delight of the "abundance of good things" they had provided. The hour then rang "God save the Queen" after which all dispersed, much pleased with himself and with every body else, we hope. There was a small admission fee charged and both the object and proceeds, we feel assured that the committee realized a handsome sum which is to be used to supply the new school house with maps and apparatus, so that Mr. Shearer, the deservedly popular teacher, may be enabled with greater advantages to impart useful instruction.

FEARFUL RAILWAY ACCIDENT ON THE DAYTON RAILWAY, U. S.—A fearful railway accident occurred lately on the above railway. A freight train was forced to stop to make some repairs to the engine, and the engine-driver of this train thinking he had given the signal to a passenger train that was coming, but a second train coming up before a signal could be given and sufficient time to stop the train, a collision took place in which some of the passenger cars were smashed to pieces, in which four sisters from New Orleans were burned to cinders, and a gentleman named Jackson, from Boston, who entered the burning cars to try to save them, also lost his life.

Railway Meeting in Smith.

A large meeting of the Electors of Ward No. 1, Township of Smith, being held in the School House of Section No. 3, to take into consideration the propriety of the County Council granting pecuniary aid to the Railroad proposed to be constructed from Mud Lake to Chemong, was organized by calling Mr. Geo. Paul to the chair, and appointing Alex. Haggart Secretary.

The chairman briefly explained the object of the meeting, and called upon Jas. Walton, Esq., to address the Electors.

Mr. Walton rejoiced at length to be able to provide some real relief for the burdened ratepayers of the County. The proposition now passed and those proposed to be passed by the County Council, gave his reasons for opposing them, and promised to be guided in his future action by the expressed wish of the majority of the constituency.

Mr. Elliard advocated the construction of the proposed road and the granting of the aid asked. He contended that it was necessary to the prosperity of the Town of Peterboro and the surrounding country. The advantage to be derived from it were the increased facilities given to trade, the increased accommodation to Lumberman, Grain buyers and merchants which was denied them in the existing order of things and consequently there would be a greater inducement for produce do come to the quent our market, the increased competition would produce better markets and in the end, the advantages enjoyed by them would more than counterbalance the loss of the sum of money (now) asked from them.

Mr Dumble produced figures to show that all which would be required from the wealthy Township of Smith, to pay off principal and interest in twenty years would be but $440 per year.

After a good deal of spirited discussion in which Messrs Graham, Tully, the previous speakers and others took part, the following resolutions were submitted and carried unanimously.

Resolved, that we approve of the course pursued by our Reeve Mr. John Walton in the County Council with reference to the $ 0 000 asked in aid of construction of the Cobourg Peterboro and Marmora Railway, And furthermore be it Resolved, that as the advantages to be gained by the proposed railroad will not in any way whatever compensate this Township for the sum of money asked, we request our representatives in the County Council to oppose by every legitimate means the effort made by certain members of that body and others interested to increase our Municipal debt to aid in the construction of the railway which shall be of no benefit to us.

And resolved that a copy of the minutes of the meeting be sent to one of the local papers for publication.

By order of the meeting,

ALEX HAGGART, Secretary. GEO. PAUL, Chairman

Smith Nov. 23rd, 1867

A FINE SCHEME FOR AN ABLE FINANCIER.—The Ottawa Citizen gives the following: The Sherbrooke Gazette of the 23rd inst. says: "A rumor has been current for a week past that the Hon. Mr. Galt was about to resign his office as representative of Sherbrooke, in the Dominion Parliament. He was in town on Saturday last, and we are told had a conference with some of his confidential friends. It was said that the Ministry had determined upon appointing Commissioners to superintend the construction of the Intercolonial Railroad, and that Mr. Shanly and Mr. Galt were to be two of the Board. It it proves true that Commissioners are to be appointed to look after the railway, we should not be surprised if Mr. Galt were to be one of them, and in that case he would resign.

The commission is better than a seat in the Cabinet of the Dominion—no, double."

A MAN KILLED BY A BULL.—The Whitby Chronicle says a farmer named Thomas Hamilton, 5th con. of Scott, was killed by his own bull on Thursday last, while putting the animal in stall for fattening. The enraged brute first turned on the hired man, who had the presence of mind to throw himself flat on the ground, and in the position the bull was unable to injure him by its horns. Leaving the man the bull attacked Mr. Hamilton, goring him frightfully in the bowels, and tossing him on its horns around the barnyard. The injured man expired on Sunday last in great suffering; the last words uttered by him being, "Good-by, all!"

TOWN COUNCIL.

On Monday evening the Council met. All the members of the last meeting being present, the Clerk read the results of the vote on the Town Hall question.

Mr. Arnott's salary, the committee recommended to be $370; Constable McPadlin $7 per week, and $1.20 per day, while he acted as night watchman. The Mayor's salary fixed at last year, $400. Mr. Edwards' salary $600.

They also recommended the remission of fines to several poor persons. The report was adopted.

Mr. Stevenson introduced a By-law to provide for issuing that part of the Market Debentures, the floating amount of the Royal Canadian Bank, for building purposes, a number of 12 feet for the entrance is reserved.

Two By-laws were then introduced: one by Mr. J. H. Dixon to grant $20,000 to the Cobourg Railway, and one by Mr. Stevenson to grant aid to any company that will construct a railway from Peterborough to Mud Lake.

After considerable discussion, motions and amendments, both By-laws were laid over for a week.

EDWARD J. HALL, T. C.

NARROW ESCAPE OF GARIBALDI.—The Florentine Gazette states that on the 21st inst. Gen. Garibaldi narrowly escaped death from the enemy's bullets. He had gone with guide to a house hardly a kilometre from Mezzano. From that point he proposed to examine the position of the Papalini: he was on the steps of the house, preceded by the guide, when two shots were fired, seriously wounding his companion. The Generalissimo not touched, and returned to his headquarters. The two shots had been sent from revolvers by two gendarmes, who being informed of the General's intended visit, had laid an ambush for that purpose.

The True Cause of Mr. Galt's Resignation.

The Montreal Daily News, a Conservative journal, has the following despatch from Ottawa:—

"The Hon. Mr. Rose has accepted, much against his will, the office vacated by Mr Galt. Rumour says he will have to contend with a deficit of five millions of dollars."

The same journal says editorially:—

"We do not profess to be in the confidence of the Ministry, and can only speculate on the arguments which were urged and the motives which finally induced Mr. Rose into accepting office,—more especially one with so numerous powers so suspiciously formless by Mr. Galt to be a stumbling of excuses. We neither accept Mr. Galt's explanation in the House, or the outside rumour that he retires to his first love as a railway contractor, having an eye to the Intercolonial at the real motives which led to his retirement. We dread to think that he abandoned his post rather than confess a disastrous failure. We hope that he sought refuge as a private member, rather than confront the country with a revelation of the disordered state of its finances. Mr. Rose's patriotism must be equal to his courage, otherwise he would be appalled by a deficit outstripping the fears of the most critical and economical.

Mr. E J Chapman of University College, Toronto, publishes the following explanation respecting a report which he had made on the Madoc Company's Mine:—

"The publication of my private report to the Directors of the Madoc Mining Company, has led, I find, to a very general impression that I have pronounced the property of the Company to be altogether worthless. May I be permitted there here, to say, both in justice to the Company and to myself, that a conclusion of the kind is neither maintained in the report, nor warranted in any way by my personal examination of the ground.

"The shaft, after yielding gold in paying quantity as shown by my assays, has become barren at a depth of about 30 or 40 feet from the surface. The probability is, that at an increased depth, this barren streak will be passed through. It would be a most exceptional case if a vein holding an amount of gold as high as that found in my earlier assays, were to become permanently barren. The Madoc shaft is the only one of even moderate depth in that part of the township, but others are projected, if not opened, and I am informed that the working of the Eagle Lake property is contemplated by the Directors who, I hope, therefore, to suspend operations for a time, and let the properties of the region of the barren portions of the vein be worked out by other Companies with large capital at command, more especially as an outlay of about twenty dollars is required for each foot of vertical sinking.

"In conclusion, may I be allowed to express my conscientious opinion that the Madoc district, generally, is an auriferous region of the greatest promise. It is not, of course, to be supposed that every projected mine will remunerative. Failures and disappointment, arising from want of judgment and other causes, will necessarily occur from time to time. Failures of this kind have happened over and over again in California, Colorado and other gold producing countries, in which, be it remembered, for one vein that pays, eight or ten blank veins are always met with. The mineral richness of the Madoc region, viewed generally, however, admits of no possible doubt."

MARSHAL O'DONNELL.—Leopold O'Donnell, Marshal and ex Minister of Spain, and at one time Governor-General of Cuba, died on the 5th inst. The O'Donnells are of Irish extraction, but fled their country in the reign of James I. Marshal O'Donnell was born about the year 1809, and entered the Spanish army at a very early age. He had attained the rank of colonel before he was 25 years of age, and in the struggle which Don Carlos commenced for the recovery of the rights he lost by the auditions of the Salic law of the Bourbons which excluded females from the throne O'Donnell fought courageously for the Young Queen. Became in 1843, chief of the staff, and was subsequently placed in command of the Army of the Centre. At the close of the Carlist war he was made a general of brigade and created Count of Lucena. In 1-46 he embraced the cause of the Queen Mother and with her emigrated to France, but the next year he demanded the right to return to Spain as a friend of the established government, and Espartero, who had been made regent during the minority of the Queen, granted his request. He soon commenced a formidable insurrection, on the failure of which he again escaped to France. In 1854 Espartero fell, and now, O'Donnell was rewarded with the Governor-Generalship of Cuba. He soon removed to Spain, however, and under the Presidency of Narvaez began to warmest his political career. It is impossible to follow him in detail through the tangled web of Spanish politics; but in all the intrigues, plots, and counterplots of the unfortunate court of Spain he bore a conspicuous part. He was a leader in the insurrection of 1854, and called upon the people to unite and restore the constitution of 1837. In 1856 he became Prime Minister, and in 1859 led the Spanish troops in the war with Morocco, bringing the struggle to a successful and speedy close. He at first consented to take a leading part in the affairs of the kingdom, and in 1865, on the resignation of Narvaez, was made President of the Council and Minister of War, a position which he again yielded to Narvaez the following year. Leader

DEATH BY DROWNING.—It is with feeling of the utmost sorrow that we record the death—by drowning—of one of the youth of this locality, George Bittle, aged 14 years. Dr. Jones held an inquest on the body when the following facts were elicited, viz: that on Tuesday, the 19th inst., after taking breakfast he took his skates and told his mother that he intended to go and skate on Scugog Lake. He had skated down to his uncle's place seven miles by noon where he remained an hour and left with the intention of going in search of some ducks which he said were frozen in the ice.—He had not skated very far however when the ice gave way and he got into the water. He struggled hard to save himself but in vain.—There was no one with him, in fact there was no one saw him except his cousin Miss Sarah Pearce, who watched him from the hill at the side of her father's house. She then went and told her mother but the mother was too far distance but unfortunately the men were away from the neighborhood attending their business—so the youth was left to struggle till he became exhausted and sank to rise no more in a depth of 20 feet of water.—Ontario Observer.

Centenary Supervisor.

CENTENARY SUPERVISOR.—We owe to the kindness of Mr. Smith, late Canadian Commissioner of Crown Lands, the following statistics of the Province. In 1777 the population was 113,012 souls; in 1825 it was 427,465; in 1842 it was 725,879; in 1852 it was 952,004; in 1861 it was 1,396,091; and in 1867 it is estimated at 1,500,000. This is a decided advance upon Shakespeare of last year, for on the 13th of last month the same class of casualty was only $4 a $4, or one per cent below the New Brunswick and two per cent below the Nova Scotia Stocks. All these now stand on an equal footing in the London market, the recovery in Canadian being greatest.

MINING GOOD.—Mr. Campbell, the government gold inspector, called at our office yesterday with an ingot of gold valued at $630, which was taken from the Richardson mine near Bon Echo, and a half of rock. The ingot was exhibited for a few hours, late in the afternoon, in one of the windows of J. G. Joseph & Co., and, we believe, it will be on exhibition there to-day also. It caused considerable excitement, and gold was all the talk on King street. Mr. Campbell is very much impressed with the mineral wealth of the Madoc district, and ever since the magnificent piece of gold is enough even to construct the most skeptical.—Leader.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE.—On thursday evening last a most destructive fire took place in Barrie, resulting in a loss of over $30,000, and dreadful suffering and distress to a large number of people. It reads a lesson at this season, and people should be doubly cautious with their stoves and pipes. There is always danger; therefore, we would say, insure first and watch after.

A little girl, daughter of Mr. John Francis, hotel keeper at Prescott junction, accidentally fell into a tub of hot water, a few days ago resulting herself so severely that her recovery is despaired of.

The efficacy of Dr. Spinola's Pulmonic Wafers in curing coughs, colds, and all Bronchial affections, and clearing the asperities, has passed long to a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them has steadily increased for the twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these Wafers. When taken in season the effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

SEWING MACHINES!

GROUT'S

New Twisted Elastic Three Corded Stitch

SEWING MACHINE.

THE undersigned has received the agency for the sale of Messrs. Grout & Co's $15 Family Sewing Machine, which took the first prize and diploma at the last Provincial Fair held at Kingston, over all other Machines exhibited.

This Machine does all kinds of work, from the thickest to the thinest; works on Leather, Beaver and Woollen Cloth, Cotton, Linen and Muslin, using Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, direct from the spools without the trouble of rewinding. It will hem, fell, stitch, tuck, bind, braid, quilt, seam, gather, sew, or ruffle, or embroider, and do ornamental stitching in the most perfect manner.

The twisted stitch and the means of making it is peculiar, as it is produced by a rotating looper of peculiar construction, with a spur or cast off blade, and is so constructed that it is impossible to miss a stitch, besides being the most simple operation in the world.

All will see the great advantage of the twist given the thread, as each thread has a twist given it while forming the stitch, making it a three cord stitch, having greater strength than any other stitch, at the same time giving it great beauty.

Prices of Grout & Co's Sewing Machines complete, with hemmer, broider, extra needles, screw driver, clamp, book of instructions to enable any one to operate it at once, $15; Machines plated and pearled from $16 to $25; table and treadles, $6; extra needles, 75 cents per dozen; full supply of oil, silk thread, &c., for sale.

ALSO,

Over Fifty Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a cancer upon my upper lip, which took about a half dozen bottles of your Plantation Bitters to cure. It was a bad sore when I commenced using your Bitters, and now my lip is entirely well. I have not seen any sign of the cancer since the Bitters healed it, and I feel confident it will not return. I have recommended your Bitters to many persons, and shall continue to do so, as I know they will cure all who use them according to directions."

J. M. DEWBING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 12, 1866.

"I take pleasure in assuring you that the Plantation Bitters (Lightner) on a visit to Mississippi relieved me of Dyspepsia, from which I had suffered severely for years. I have since used them in my family, and find they are the best medicine for Diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Kidneys I have ever used, and cheerfully recommend them to my friends and the public generally."

"The Sprain of my daughter's ankle, accompanied with shaking fever, was cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Plantation Bitters."

It is unquestioned fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Fayetteville, every man and master should always have it on hand. Quick and sure is certainly so. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of O. W. Weatherbee, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Dimon, Hinman & Co. &c., on the top.

All other bitters should be destructively dealt with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

"Jest so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle and they were there "every time." If he fell [illegible] he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or unusually oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to put him on his pins again and fast.

Now persons who may be afflicted with [illegible] as some may, just read the following:

"I was much to [illegible], for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life."

REV. W. H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y.

"I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. The Plantation Bitters cured me."

REV. O. A. HILLWOOD, New York City.

"I had lost all appetite, was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. The Plantation Bitters have set me all right."

"The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm."

Mrs. O. M. DEYOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred testimonials of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come in near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; it is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance

OTTAWA CANCER INFIRMARY,

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured then, when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the head, neck, eyelid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Poetry.

THE CHEERFUL HEART.

[illegible] the world to us is [illegible]
[illegible] are lost [illegible] thrown away
[illegible] can [illegible] it [illegible]
For happiness does not consist
In what the world calls wealth;
Nor in the soul which never complains,
In sickness or in health.

[illegible] scattered here and there,
Upon this dreary earth,
Are those within whose hearts are found
The attributes of worth,
Good, gentle, kind and noble souls,
Who, like the moon light fair,
Shed forth their holy brilliancy
On all things—everywhere.

Oh! cultivate a cheerful heart,
While on this earth of ours;
Why should we tread on thorns grieved
When life is full of flowers;
Why should our souls in sombre clouds
Of pain, and woe, and sadness,
When nature teaches every one
To sport in glee and gladness?

Selections.

HASTY WORDS.

Charlie, come quick and help me carry up some of these things, was the rather impatient demand of a slender young woman who was struggling along with a number of bundles piled on her arms, and tripping over her dress every step she took on the stairs.

But Charlie thus appealed to, either did not like the tone in which his little wife had requested him to help her, or else was so interested in his book that he did not heed what she was saying to him, for he went on reading and rocking himself as calmly as if she was not desperately out of patience with her dress, her bundles, and with him for not jumping up immediately to help her.

When she entered the room, a few minutes afterwards, having managed to get up stairs with no other damage to herself than a number of gathers torn out of her dress, there was an angry frown upon her brow, and she looked by no means amiable.

Now, Charles Thompson, in common with most other Thompsons, Smiths, Jones, &c., disliked above all other things to be reproached in a scolding manner; and to this wife a question, Did you not hear me call you? he duly answered by a cool of course, I did, Lizzie.

Then why did you not come and help me up stairs with those hateful old bundles?

I am not aware of any obligation on my part to run and wait on you whenever you may fancy to demand my services, Charlie again coolly replied.

Nobody said you were obliged to do so, but if you had the least regard for my comfort, you would be glad to help me without my having to ask you.

Ah, well, when it comes to talking about comfort, it strikes me you cared precious little for mine, or you would not have asked me to leave my book merely to help you carry a few trifling bundles.

Lizzie looked still more aggrieved at this speech, and said with considerable spirit: How very quickly some people changed. Two years ago you would willingly have left the most interesting book in the world to help me, and thought not a minute about your comfort.

Two years being the length of time the little woman had borne the name of Thompson.

And please bear in mind, Charlie answered, that two years ago you would not have spoken to me as you have done to-night.

Perhaps I had not quite so much cause to do so then as I have now; and it does seem to me you have little consideration, when you know I hate to carry things up stairs, and how I am always tripping over my dress when I have my hands full; just look at that, and at this point Lizzie gave a decided jerk to the torn gathers and ripped out a few more.

Cut it off, then you will be sure not to tread on it; I would not be so foolish as to wear anything that caused me so much discomfort as your dress does you.

It is very easy for you to turn the subject in that manner, just as if you would go in the street with me if I wore short dresses. Oh! well, put the blame on my dress and get out of it yourself.

You seem to be more than ordinarily persistent in reproaching me to-night, Lizzie, but I am beginning to think I have heard enough, for this time at least. So saying, Charlie arose, put on his hat, and walked down stairs. As he was going out of the door, Lizzie called to him:

I suppose you think yourself very much injured; of course I am wrong, and you, as usual, entirely right.

Charlie returned no answer, but kept on his way. Presently Lizzie heard the street door shut.

There, she said, he has gone out, that is the way he treats me; I just say a few words to him, and he gets mad and goes off. I am sure that he cares nothing about me; oh, if we had never got married!—Little did I think that this would be the end of it all.

Very sad she looked sitting there by the fire, the impatient expression nearly gone, and in its place a sorrowful, unhappy one, that seemed out of place on her fair, almost childlike face.

She looked around their cheerful little sitting room, and somehow, wherever her eyes rested, there was something to remind her of Charlie, and the happy hours they had spent together.

It is all past now, she thought; and her eyes became so dim that she could scarcely see the work table in the corner with its bouquet of early spring flowers.—Why, it was only at dinner time that Charlie had brought that bouquet home, and said as he gave it to her, "there are some violets as blue as your eyes, little wife."—How long ago that seemed! could it only have been a few hours since he said it?

She picked up the dainty vase and inhaled the fragrance of the blossoms.—True, it was only a few hours; they were as fresh and bright looking as if just broken from the stem. She walked to the glass and looked at her face, it did not seem as pleasant to her as usual; and could trace a seam across her brow as if she had been frowning; and the violet eyes that Charlie used to tell her were the first things that made him love her, had a light in them that changed their hue.

If such as I might have been gone, she exclaimed, pressing her hands to her throbbing temples, after all she had been subject, and Charlie was not so much to blame as she was.

Presently she went back to her seat by the fire, and sat there, with her head leaning on her hand, apparently thinking very intently.

Two years ago you would not have spoken to me as you have done to-night, Charlie's words rang in her ear yet.

He was right, she thought, two years ago I would have suffered anything rather than say an unkind word to Charlie.

How good he seemed to her then, and how often she had resolved that no discord should enter their home. But what had become of all these good resolutions?—Little by little she had yielded to her hasty temper, and to-night he had left his home to escape her reproaches.

Bitter tears flowed down her cheeks as these thoughts passed through her mind, and the corner of her little white apron was in danger of getting entirely bitten off, as in her forgetfulness she kept pulling at it.

But I do love him in spite of all that I have said, and do think that I speak more unkindly to him than to anybody else.—The idea of the made Lizzie feel too wretched to cry, and she leaned back in her chair looking the picture of unhappiness.

In the meantime Charlie had gone but a few steps from his own door, and had then turned and re-entered his own house as quietly that his wife did not dream that he was sitting down stairs, at the time all these remorseless thoughts were passing through her mind.

Feeling that Lizzie was not alone in the fault, he was trying to gain courage and go up and have a talk about the evening's disagreement; and he kept wondering all the time how she would receive him.

He had not by any means taken the matter so much to heart as his wife had done he merely felt uneasy for the time being, and had not been conjecturing all manner of evils that were to follow in the train of this quarrel; satisfied, if once things were smooth again, he could decamp of himself with the proceeds.

He finally decided that the sooner he had a talk with his wife the better for both, and accordingly he proceeded to her room, and softly opened the door.

There she was, still sitting back on her chair, looking very serious; Charlie felt more remorseful when he caught a glimpse of her pale face.

Lizzie, he said, I come to have a talk with you.

She gave a slight start when she saw him; but her face brightened up so wonderfully that he could have no doubts as to the kind of reception she would give him. Without waiting for him to tell her what he wished to say, she exclaimed:

Charlie, I am so glad you have come back! I wanted to tell you how sorry I am for those things I said a while ago.

Charlie could not but be touched by this full admission on his wife's part, and he attempted to tell her something about his being sorry too; but she kept on blaming herself more than ever, running into the extreme, as usual with generous minds, of being unjust to her self in her zeal to atone for the wrong she had done.

At last Charlie would be heard, and he said:

Lizzie, you shall not bear all the blame; I was very careless and thoughtless. Say what you will, I am as culpable as you; if you were hasty, I was regardless of your comfort. That was enough to make you get out of patience with me; so let us both agree to be happy again, and resolve that in the future—why what is the matter? he exclaimed, as he saw a shadow come over Lizzie's face.

That what I was thinking of to-night—the future; and I was afraid to make any more resolutions, for all I have made are broken.

Come now, little wife, you must not be unhappy about it; we love one another, and how can we go far astray so long as we do that?

But, Charlie, that did not prevent me from speaking to you as I did to-night, only think how unjust I have been.

He only too happy to feel that all was again bright between them, said:

We both forgot for a little while, but it did not last long, and all that we have to do now is to remember.

Lizzie looked up into the bright, hopeful face bending over her, so full of confidence, and she felt the cloud lift itself from her heart as she said:

We will then, both try to remember.

A German bishop, who was also a temporal prince, being much addicted to swearing, was reproached by his confessor for the practice of a vice so peculiarly disgraceful to an ecclesiastical character. The prelate, however, excused himself by saying that he swore like a prince, and not like a bishop. "That may be very true," replied the confessor, "but when the prince goes to the devil for swearing what will then become of the bishop?"

GUM VEGETABEL HISTRY.

BY JOSH BILLINGS.

The strawberry is one ov nature's sweet pets.

She makes them world bi[illegible]ful, the fust she makes, and never allows them to be sold at a mean price.

The color ov the strawberry is like the setting sun under a thin cloud, with a delicate dash ov rose therin it: their fragrance is like the breath ov a baby when it first begins tew eat wintergreen (the sacred ile ov Venus is like the nectar when an old fashioned Goddess used tew loaf in the bottom ov her tumbler when Jupiter stood treat on smoot ide.

There is many hopes ov this delightful vegetable, but not a mean pun in the whole lot.

I think I have stole them, laying around loose without eny pedigree, in somebody's tall grass, when I was a lazy schoolboy, that eat dradful easy, without any white sugar on them, and even a hog occasionally mixed with them in the hurry ov the moment.

Cherrys are good, but they are too much like sucking marble, with a headed tew it. Peaches are good if you don't git hairy ov the pin-feathers into yure lips. Watermelons will suit enny bodily who is satisfied with half sweetened drink; but the man what duz eat strawberrys besprinkled with crushed sugar, and bespattered with sweet cream (at somebody else's expense,) and not lay his head on his stummick and thank the author of strawberrys and stummicks, and the phellow who pays for the strawberrys, is a man with a wore out conscience—a man that don't kare what goes down it.

Kokernutts grow up in the air, in a hot climate away over the ocean, about eighty feet from the ground—on the top ov a tree.

They are generally picked by the monkeys in that naberhood and who throw them at the natives in exchange for the stones that the natives throw at the monkeys.

They grow as a negro's head duz, with a good deal ov skull tew them.

A kokernutt, after it has his skalp, resembles an old tub-pin hade, only a little more round one way than tuther.

On the end ov the nut towards you is tew eyes fast asleep. The kokernutt is opened by breaking the skull, and this brings 'em tew their sack.

The milk ov the kokernutt has never been explained yet—and the reason is because enough has never been got at tew do it.

Whenever philosophers "give it up," I shall reply to the conundrum.

As an artikle ov diet, the koker is about on a level with the trench raw turnip, and is as hard to digest as one ov Sekretary Seward's letters or State.

Biled koker might be possibly good if it wasn't a great deal better then when it was raw; and raw kokernutts is only good for children and young greyhounds tew eat, whose stummacks are like a nutmeg grater.

The only real good thing about this forin nut is its skull, they can be cut into 2 and made into drinking kups, and I must confess, they do look kind, when laid on a clean, flat stone by the side ov a meadow spring, but I kant drink out ov them myself without thinking that if they hadn't been kut in 2, what a kapital thing they would be tew bild a young darkey in.

But this is only a foolish noshun ov mine, and probably it couldn't be did enny how.

* * * * * *

It is now about 8 or eleven years since folks began to hanker after the tomato. About that time sum doctor or pills discovered one or these stagrant vegetables and discovered sum doctor's stuff in them.

As soon as folks found out they was fixick they began to be very sweet on the tomater.

At that time they was in the inkblit or growing in sly places, where they want afraid over behind stone walls, among broken jugs and rats, and old iron rubber boots, for people wouldn't let them grow in gardens enny more than they would a Kanady thistel.

They were vagabond weed, and, even a woods hog wouldn't eat one ov the berrys that grow on them enny quicker than he would a ball ov red stockin yarn.

But it was decided that there was sum pills in them, and they were put tew sum in pots and vases, and lired on the phat ov the land, in hot houses, along side ov tigar lilies and roses ov Sharon.

It took most folks about eighteen months ov preserrance and sea-sickness tew git the tomatoge to go quickly down, and now, from the vile weed, in re sanctity than a deceased klam, the tomatow has actually got to be more honorable than a buckwheat slapjacks or even a punpkin pi.

This shows what love and effeckshun will do.

I haven't enny doubt but if Professor Ratsbane would say professionally that wasp's nests was good to make a mustash grow black, half the men in the country would get a wasp and go into the nest business.

I don't believe a tomater will keep a man enny more healthy than red clover will, but I am just like everything else, I wanted to get sum better than I was, and I went to skool to the tomater, and have got learnt how tew eat them, if they are soaked in salt and pepper, and eeked with good sider vinigar.

I have seen folks pick them off from the vines in the garden and eat them right down alive, would as soon undertake tew eat a handful ov nettly.

But tomatoge have worked themselfs up into the necessary, and I am the last man to oppose their reputashun for I believe an innocent humbogg has just as much right tew wa (if they can) as any other man.

There is one thing I do hope, and that is that nobody will undertake tew make kaster oil one ov the luxurys until after I am dead, for kaster oil and bed-tugs is 2 things that I solemnly sware I won't har' if they get to be ever so fashionable.

Man is a mister, and a woman a mystery.

"TAKING DISEASE!"

An Montreal fellow delivered with his sweetheart, on the day they were to be married. After the ceremony had begun and he was asked—

'Do you take this woman to be your wedded wife, &c.,' he replied—

'No!'

'What's your reason?' asked the M[illegible]

'Why, I don't like her name—to her, and that's enough,' was the curt reply.

The minister stared—[illegible] but—[illegible] after much persuading, the [illegible] was induced to have the marriage proceed. It was now the lady's turn, and when the Minister asked her the all important question, replied:—

'No!' said she [illegible] a dislike to him.'

The groom admiring her spunk, made the matter up with her as speedily as possible, and a third time they presented themselves before the minister, who began the ceremony by asking the usual questions, which were satisfactorily answered this time. Not to the astonishment of the party, his reverence continued:—

'Well, I am glad to hear that your are willing to take each other for husband and wife for it is good thing to be of forgiving temers. You can go now and get married where you like—I'll not tie the not for I've taken a dislike to both of you!'

A FEW FACTS.

The following are the ways in which people render themselves very impolite, annoying and ridiculous:

Boisterous laughing.

Reading while others are engaged in talking.

Leaving strangers without a seat.

A want of reverence for your superiors.

Receiving a present without some manifestation of gratitude.

Making yourself the topic of conversation.

Laughing at the mistakes of others.

Correcting older persons than yourself, especially parents.

Answering questions which are put to others.

Commencing to eat as soon as you get to the table.

Whispering, talking loudly in church, or leaving before it is out.

Cutting or biting the finger nails in company, or picking the teeth.

Drumming with your fork or fingers, or leaning back in the chair, or putting the feet upon the furniture.

Gazing at strangers, or listening to the conversation of others when not addressed to you.

YOUNG AMERICA.

The following has the merit of being true as well as instructive, and Harper's Monthly says "there is a hint to parents in it worth more than a quarter:"

Johnny, a three-year old, was at dinner with the rest of the family, which included a young lady cousin, on a visit.

"Cousin Eliza," asked the hopeful Johnny, "do you ever say devil?"

"Why, no, Johnny, what makes you ask such a question?" replied the lady.

"'Cause Pa says so. Pa, what made you say devil the other day when you was looking for the hammer and could not find it?"

"Ah," said "Pa," rather cornered, "did I? Well, so as to find it easer, I suppose."

Here the discussion ended, the explanation being considered as good as could be given under the circumstances, but Johnny's retentive memory treasured it up.

A few days afterwards, Johnny's shoes, as little shoes are apt to, were not where he had left them. His mother bade him search until he found them, and off he started, up stairs and down stairs. Soon his treble voice rang through the halls, crying "devil! devil! devil!"

"Johnny, darling!" cried out his frightened mother, "what in the world do you mean by using that dreadful word?"

"So's to find my shoes easy, answered young Hopeful." "Pa says devil when he can't find things, and mayn't I, ma?"

The force of example, thus precociously developed, made the mother smile; but she had to negotiate with Johnny's pa to be more select in his adjurations before the children in future.

A STRANGE SUICIDE.—The French have always been famous for their ingenuity in the invention of novel modes of getting rid of life. Not long since two fools of that nationality went up in balloons to fight a duel. One of them was precipitated to the ground from a fearful height by a shot thro' his balloon, while his antagonist sailed off in triumph through the clouds. More recently another fool committed suicide in a balloon. He invited his friends to witness a novel ascension, and on cutting the ropes horrified his guests by showing a pistol and indicating that he should fire through the silk when high above the earth. The balloon passed out of sight without accident, but next morning the body of the madman was discovered frightfully mangled and not far off the wreck of the balloon. Who can imagine the thoughts that must have flashed through the man's mind in his swift flight to sure destruction! Was there time for repentance in that awful rush through the clouds down to the solid earth? None can tell. But how thoroughly Pagan is the national sentiments which sees in such a suicide nothing but a little eccentricity. The French papers speak of it as a little incident, and rather regard the self murderer as entitled to public gratitude for inventing a new form of suicide.—Methodist.

The English pedestrian, Capt. Barclay, walked one hundred and ten miles in nineteen hours, a performance that has no equal in the annals of pedestrianism.

It is the lot of humanity to err at times, as the drunken man said when he mistook the pig sty for his bedroom.

THE SENATE!

Growling and odium, if grave Senators can be said to be liable to the frailty of a bad temper, the honorable members of this body have recovered from the tantrum into which the appointment of Mr. Cauchon to be their Speaker had thrown them. Who pities them? Have they not brought the indignity upon themselves? Let them suffer. They must "grin and bear it," because they can't do anything else in that respect, and the country will laugh at the foolish contortions which no occasional or accidental reminder of the indignity they suffer produces. Who cares? That's about the extent of the interest the public takes in this little domestic irregularity in the family of old woman who sold their independence for a life lease of office.

We can well conceive it to be unsatisfactory to cause and galling to others of the honorable members of this legislative asylum to have the ex-member for Montmorenci presiding over their deliberations, an office which, of all others, should in all courtesy and all propriety be filled by one of themselves. But, who is to be blamed? Certainly not the Government, for the Speakership of the Senate was a piece of patronage which they had a right to use to their own advantage. We have not so far to go for the fault of such an unfit and obnoxious appointment. When the Confederation Scheme was being worked up, the Legislative Council exceeded the Assembly in their zeal to force, rightly or wrongly, that scheme upon the Provinces now affected by it. On the floor of that House there were a few isolated cases of honest opposition, if not to the principle, at least to the details and the manner of passing, of the Confederation scheme. But the great body of the House gave the weight of their active influence to the furtherance of the scheme. The conduct of the late Legislative Council—the same body, under another name, as the present Senate—provoked much ungenerous comment from those who opposed the adoption of the Confederation Act. That comment, ungenerous as it was, was quite justifiable because the Legislative Council had a greater personal interest in the particular scheme which they supported so ardently than the other Legislature body. They were accused of having been purchased; and there was cause for the accusation in view of the fact that, in supporting that scheme, they were bartering the constitution under which they were elected for a system under which they would have life seats. Had they retrieved their independence, the Government would not to-day be in a position to use that Chamber as a receptacle of the useless and obnoxious lumber accumulated about the House of Commons. They then could have made their own choice of Speakers instead of having to submit at the hands of the Government, to the appointment to the highest position in their Chamber of a man for whom there was not a place elsewhere, who would be a transparent character to the Government if not provided for, and of whom few seem to have a good word to say. It is a pity that the Senate did not adhere to their hasty design of petitioning for the privilege of electing their own Speaker—than begging for a privilege which they had just relinquished on their own part and which is synonymous with that elective principle of which, in the most arbitrary and indecent way, they had deprived the country. Such a step was necessary to complete their own abasement. —Freeholder.

The Destitution in Western Halifax.

We do not recollect for very many years past, says the Halifax Recorder, of hearing from the fishing districts of Western Halifax such a tale of poverty and utter destitution as is now related to the benevolent every day by persons from those localities. Since the appearance of a paragraph in this journal last week, setting forth facts in this connection which had then come to our knowledge, we have been called upon by parties thoroughly cognizant of the condition of the poor people in several outports of Halifax and who assure us that the existing distress necessitates some immediate action on the part of the Government, or through private benevolence.

At Ketch Harbour the destitution is general. At Prospect the people are utterly at a loss to live; and at many other places the inhabitants may be said to be literally starving. The poverty exists mainly among the fishermen; and the Recorder concludes by urging the authorities to call public meetings, so that wealthy citizens and the prosperous, open-handed farmers may have an opportunity to relieve the distress.

The Bill introduced by Mr. Mills "To disqualify members of the Local Legislatures from sitting or voting in the Senate or House of Commons of Canada" makes the following provisions: 1st. No member of the Legislative Council or Legislative Assembly of any Province now in the Union, or which may hereafter be in the Union, shall be capable of sitting or voting in the Senate or House of Commons of Canada; 2nd. Any member of the Senate or House of Commons who shall accept a seat either in the Legislative Council or Legislative Assembly of any Province shall, by so doing, forfeit his seat in the Parliament of Canada; 3rd, The Act intended by this Bill shall not become operative during the continuance of the present Parliament, unless in case of a dissolution of any one or more of the Local Legislatures, or in case of the Legislature of a Province which may in the meantime be admitted to the Union. The Bill, it will be seen, is not intended to disturb dual representatives now elected, but to prevent dual representation hereafter. This has been stoutly opposed by Sir J. A. and his followers.

DR. LIVINGSTONE.—THE FIRST HOPEFUL TIDINGS.—To the Editor of the London Times—Sir I have this day received a letter from Dr. Kirk at Zanzibar, dated the 26th of september, stating that he has seen a native trader who had just returned from the western side of Lake Tanganyika, and who gave him a detailed account of having seen a white man travelling in that remote region. The letter is long and will not bear abridgment, and as I wish to have the subject thoroughly discussed by those most competent to judge of the value of information now given by Dr. Kirk. I have merely to announce that the letter will be read on Monday next at the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society. I remain sir, your obedient servant, Roderick I. Murchison.—Times, Dec. 26.

TRIAL OF JEFFERSON DAVIS.—The trial of Jefferson Davis has been again postponed, this time till the 4th Wednesday in March. The cause of the postponement appears to be this: Mr. Davis and his counsel are particularly desirous that Chief Justice Chase shall preside at the trial. They have very strong objections to a trial before Judge Underwood, who has shown much prejudice against Mr. Davis. The Chief Justice cannot, in consequence of other duties, attend at the present sitting of the court in Richmond, and, therefore, the trial has been postponed till March. That time the United States authorities are not at fault; and the case has been put off to accommodate the counsel for the accused.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1867.

ST. ANDREW'S DINNER.

On Monday evening the sons of auld Scotia celebrated the anniversary of their patron saint by a dinner to which about 80 sons of St. Andrew and guests sat down. The dinner was got up by nine host Castiday, of the Commercial House, and was in the very best style, and being the first of the kind got up by Mr. Castiday in Peterboro, and of such excellent quality and in very nice taste, all who attended the dinner can, we are sure, most cordially recommend the Commercial House to all who wish a comfortable hotel. The Bill of Fare speaks for itself:

Oyster Soup.
Roast.—Wild Ducks, beef—cheese relish, turkey, lamb—mint sauce, Goose—apple Sauce, fowls, venison—cranberry jam.
Boiled.—Turkey—Scotch haggis, chickens—egg sauce, leg mutton—caper sauce, tongues, ham, round of beef.
Vegetables.—Potatoes, tomatoes, cucumber pickles, onions, celery, parsnips, pickles, carrots, beets, turnips.
Second Course.—Cranberry tart, blanc mange, mince pies, jellies, raspberry tart, cheese, apple pie, tartlets, blackberry tart, fruit cake, custards, sponge cake.
Dessert.—Pyramid of macaroons, chantilly trifle cake, almonds, trifles, short bread, raisins, oranges, biscuits, apples.

The room was beautifully decorated with appropriate mottoes; yet in the midst of all our good Queen Victoria and our new Dominion were not forgotten. There were also extensive crosses and festoons of plaid, that added much to the appearance of the room.

A. H. Cambbell, Esq., President of the Society, presided. The vice chairs were occupied by Mr. Carnegie, M. P. P., and T. M. Fairbairn, Esq., Barrister. The Rev. Mr. McDonnell, Dr. Burnham, A. C. Dunlop, Esq., Reeve of Ashburnham, and John Carroll, Esq., Reeve of Burleigh, were arranged on each side of the President; there were numerous other guests at the other end of the room.

After due attention to the feast of fat things, the secretary, Charles Cameron, Esq., read letters of apology for the absence of P. M. Grover, M. P., and C. Perry, M. P., also of Geo. Read, Esq., M. P. P., these all being unavoidably prevented from being present, the two first being at Ottawa.

Mr Cameron then gave a short report of the funds, and of the increase of members, from which it appeared that there were 272 on hand, and it was satisfactory also to hear that 17 new names had been added to the list of members within a day or so. The secretary also referred to the aid granted to sufferers during the past year; but it appeared that they had little to pay out on that score. One or two had applied, but to them no aid had been granted as they did not really appear to be persons for whom the aid was intended. Mr. C. also remarked that happily they had to spend nothing in aid of the poor or needy, but he thought they could aid in one thing, namely, to put a brick in the Wallace monument; (Applause.) and he thought it would not be to the dishonor of this part of the Dominion to have it said that the sons of Scotland had not forgotten the noble man of their beloved country.—(Renewed applause).

The chairman then proposed the usual loyal toast, "The Queen," that noble woman who rules the high destinies of the mightiest empire on the earth, on whom also he past some well-merited encomiums, remarking that she has always been for peace; but although governed by principles of peace, never allowed the British flag to be tarnished for fear; as even now she is fitting out an expedition that is costing millions; this she valued as nothing compared with the liberty of her subjects. This expedition is intended to punish the King of Abyssinia who has dared to detain one of her subjects in bondage. Under such a Queen, therefore, our prayers must always be "God bless our Queen." (Applause).

The Band the gave "God save the Queen."

"The Prince and Princess of Wales, and all the Royal Family" followed.

Band—"My love, she's but a lassie yet."

"The Army, Navy and Volunteers" was responded to by Major Kennedy. He regretted that the task had not fallen into better hands, but it was no small honor to be associated with the army navy and volunteers. They consisted of Englishmen, Scotchmen and Irishmen, and he could assure all that as in the past so they would in the future, like true sons of Britain, do their duty.

Captain Sutherland responded for the Navy. He (Mr. S.) had understood that a genuine seaman from the distant ocean of Sangog would be present to do honor to this toast; in his absence it was a satisfaction to him to be able to say for the navy that it never was more efficient than at present—30,000 volunteers were ready to man the iron walls of Britain, and he was sure that as in the Trent affair, all were ready to spend their life's blood to have the flag of Britain respected on every sea, that glorious old flag that was hailed with delight in every quarter by all honest men. (Cheers). So they would whenever they were required.

"The Governor General" followed from the chair, who said that it was no small benefit to have such an able and reliable politician now guiding our tender steps while we were creeping from childhood to the position of a nation.

Band—"The Last Rose of Summer."

"The day and a' who honor it." was then given, in moving which, Mr Campbell referred to the traditions of the St, coming to the Island and establishing the abbey at St. Andrew's. He further remarked that the day had an object, namely, to bind all in a common Brotherhood, but especially the sons of one common country. The sons of St. Andrew reminded all of the crosses that have to be borne and while the toast was being honored, all should remember they drank the health of every Scot, wherever he is, and hoping in the future meeting of the sons, he would give it,—"The day and a' who honor it."

Song by Mr. Miller,—"Scot wha hae."

The Rev. Mr. McDonnell spoke to this toast, he said:—That whether or not St. Regulus had done all recorded of him he could not say, but he supposed we had better believe it as it is handed down to us. He was not one of those who believed that sootchmen only were perfect, or that all virtue was cooped up in Scotland, there were virtues in other lands, still, it did one good to look back at the noble deeds, the virtue and the talents of the people of the land whence they sprang. He then in a very happy style referred to some of the characteristics of sootchmen, which he illustrated by several amusing anecdotes; the prominent characteristics referred to were "carefulness;" "getting as much as possible, and giving as little as possible in return;" "the hereditary right to fight every one at home on religion or politics, but fight for every son who went abroad and prospered;" "indomitable perseverance," which he illustrated by telling a story of a scotchman, who, it was said, made a bushel of coal do him a year, for when he got cold, he would get them in a bag and put them on his back and run up and down stairs till he was warm enough, and then go to study.

Mr. Telford, the bard of St. Andrew, then read his annual poem, which we give in another column.

Mr. Bowie, of Smith, sang "Allister McAllister," which caused roars of laughter.

Mr. Carnegie then gave Canada our home," he said:—That although the land of cakes may have a great hold on our affections, there was still a corner in our hearts for Canada; we may hear of the great men of Scotland, those she has sent out, and of those she is sending out, we might hear of her heather and her bruses—but Canada was dear to us. He speculated a very neat speech by reciting a piece of poetry on Canada, but we were unable to copy it so as to reproduce it.

Mr. Henderson sang "God bless our new Dominion."

Mayor Scott responded to "Canada our Home." We need merely say that his words if few were well chosen, neatly pointed, and eloquently delivered, and with very good taste.

The toast "The Land o' Cakes," was proposed by Mr. Fairbairn, who agreed with a previous speaker in conceding that Scotchmen do not monopolize all the excellence of the earth. He said, Scotland could, however, claim to be distinguished for everything that makes a country truly great and noble. She was distinguished for the freedom of her institutions, which afforded the fullest political liberty and the most perfect freedom in matters of religion. She was also distinguished for the native independence of her people. "The foot of slave her heather never stained." She was likewise distinguished for the general intelligence of the masses, and the universal diffusion of education; one was seldom denied an intelligent answer to a question when addressing a Scotchman, no matter how humble his station, and the stores of information often possessed by the unpretending cottager was frequently a matter of surprise. She was also distinguished for the brilliant achievements of her sons. In every walk of life where strength of intellect and indomitable perseverance could command position Scotchmen were preeminent. To literature Scotland had contributed largely. In the dark, barbarous, early history of the country Fingal "swept the lyre" and Ossian sung the bards of the clans, transmitted traditionary lore through successive ages in in song, and among the poets of modern times Scotland had a host of great names. The speaker here referred to the valuable contributions to science and literature in the researches and writings of Hugh Millar and the explorations of Dr. Livingston. At the bar, on the bench, in the senate and the pulpit the sons of Scotia had won distinction. But what a Scotchman ever referred to with delight, was the deeds of Scotland's sons upon the field of battle. They had written in characters of blood, time and again, their national motto, 'Nemo me impune lacessit.' No doubt every Scot present had poured in boyhood, with nurse-trained enthusiasm often expressed in tears, over the lives of Wallace and Bruce. Since the days of these heroes Scotland had done her part in defending the national honor. From the field of Waterloo we might resche the the exultant shout uttered in the moment of victory, "Scotland for ever," and from the crest of Alma these memorable words, "We'll hae nane but Ireland bonnets here." Scotland was also distinguished for her fidelity to truth and liberty, sealed with the blood of many a martyr. But want of space compels us to give a mere outline of the speech which was delivered in an easy, happy strain through out.

"The Heroes and Bards of Scotland" was given by Mr. Campbell in an excellent speech, but we must deny our readers the pleasure of reading it, although it would interest many. "The House of Commons and the Houses of Assembly" were responded to by Mr. Carnegie. "The Corporation," "Our Guest," "Commerce," "The Bar," "The Ladies" and "The Press" followed in turn Mr. Hatton then gave "The President and members of the St. Andrew's Society" was next given, which was responded heartily cheered by all. A very pleasantly spent evening was closed by some songs and merry laughter, all wishing that there may be many St. Andrew's nights in Peterboro.

THE CONCERT LAST TUESDAY EVENING.—The concert given by Mrs. T. H. Rodden in the Victoria Hall, was a very successful one. The House was very well filled, and all those who took part fully sustained their parts. The Misses Rossiter did remarkably well, and were deservedly encored. Miss Calnan sang some beautiful pieces. Assuredly, an evening spent in listening to sweet music is pleasant. To establish regularly monthly concerts, would do much to foster a musical spirit, and would lead to the cultivation of musical talent amongst us.

Since writing the above, we have been requested to state that the "Peterboro' Literary Club have made arrangements for a series of readings during the winter months, (the same as were given last season,) consisting of Vocal and Instrumental Music, Readings, Recitations, &c. The first of the series will be given on Tuesday evening next, in the rooms belonging to the club, over the Royal Canadian Bank. The principal Lady and Gentlemen Amateurs will assist at such entertainment, and every effort will be used to make a couple of hours spent each evening pleasant and profitable. We have no doubt the popular entertainments will be well patronized this last season. The price of admission will be as usual, 12½ cents for each performance. Season tickets will also be issued, and can be obtained from the members of the club.

The Protestant Home Committee thank the under mentioned friends for donations in November:—Mr. LePlant, oxhead; Mrs. Millan, carrots, beets, and apples; Mrs. Wallis, turnips and Carrots; A Friend, patent pail and herrings; Mr. White, (Monaghan) 4 beef hearts; Mrs Beck, 2 pieces of beef; Mrs. Hamilton, peas beef, Miss Roger, children's clothes and apples; Mrs. Romaine, Lamp; Mrs. Hall, Crockery; Mrs. Patton, quarter mutton; Mrs. W. G. Thompson, qr. lb. thread; Mrs. Leake Robinson, large parcel of clothing; Mrs. Hamilton children's clothing; Mrs. James Reid, 3 quarters of mutton, 2 skeins yarn; Mr. Taylor 2 pairs slippers; Mr. Romaine, 25 lbs. oatmeal and 100 flour.

ANNIVERSARY SERMON OF THE CELEBRATION OF ST. ANDREW'S DAY.—The Rev. Mr. McDonnell, of St, Andrew's church, preached the Anniversary Sermon for the St. Andrew's Society, on Sunday evening, in the first Presbyterian church, from the words "call no man master, for one is your master, etc., and all ye are brethern." The sermon was well delivered, breathed the spirit of the gospel, good will among men. The collection on the occasion amounted to $17.75.

Earl Derby, in answer to a petition from the Orangemen of Ireland to repeal the "party procession act," refuses to do so, giving as a reason the violent religious and political animosities that prevail, and the virulence and excitableness of parties, as well as the strong desire that prevails to seek occasion to take and cause offence, that too often ends in bloodshed.

TEAS.—We invite attention to Mr. Paull's advertisement in another column, where he offers good Teas cheap; Chinaware for Christmas presents, and fruit in variety. Give him a call.

LITERARY CLUB.—This evening the following subject will be discussed:—"Which is preferable, city or country life?" Leaders—Messrs. Taylor and Kidd. Members only admitted.

Tickets of admission to hear Dickens, in Boston, were sold at $10 to $20 for the first night.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—Would you oblige by inserting in your newspaper the following report of a large and influential meeting, held at Bridgenorth last night, to take into consideration the action of the County Council in regard to $30,000 proposed to be given in aid of the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Railway and Mining Company:—

Resolved,—That Emanuel Mann, Esq., be Chairman. Also, that Geo. Paul be Secretary.

The Chairman, after briefly stating the object of the meeting, called upon Mr. John Walton, who gave a detailed account of the course the County Council had pursued in regard to said money, and that as one of our representatives in Council, he had opposed every attempt to vote our means for what, in his opinion, we should not receive any benefit from.

Resolved,—That this meeting approve of the course pursued by our Reeve, John Walton, Esq., in the County Council in regard to the $30,000 proposed to be given in aid of the Cobourg, Peterborough and Marmora Railway and Mining Company. (Unanimous.)

Resolved,—That a memorial be sent to the County Council, requesting them not to pass the By-law advertised for first reading on the Fourteenth day of January. (Unanimous.)

The meeting then entered into a discussion in regard to what appeared to them the foolish and expensive method of the County Council, in spending their monies in advance of their receipts, and a further determination was expressed to test the legality of By-laws referred to in case they should pass in County Council.

GEO. PAUL, Secretary.

Smith, Nov. 27, 1867.

PROVIDENTIAL ESCAPE.—The Barrie Observer of Friday last says:—During the prevalence of the storm on Sunday night, and about ten o'clock, when it was at its height, a chimney at the south end of the house owned by the G. W. R. Co., on Front street and occupied as the dwelling house of the Station Master, was blown down, falling upon the roof, and crushing it in with a fearful crash. The room immediately under it was occupied as a bedroom, and into this the mass of brick precipitated, the weight of the portion of it lodging on the bed usually occupied by Mr. Lipscombe and lady, and crushing that down to the floor. Mrs Lipscombe had gone up stairs for the purpose of retiring for the night, a few minutes before, but had occasion to return for something she required—an unusual circumstance, and it was plain she was there that the crash took place. Had it occurred a short time later, both Mr. and Mrs. L. would have been in bed, and from the weight of the bricks and the force with which the mass was precipitated through the roof, must our county have been minus, and very soon only regard their escape as most providential.

THE YEAR BOOK FOR 1868.—We have received from the publishers, Messrs. Lovell & Co., Montreal, a copy this invaluable publication. It contains a vast amount of information not easily obtained in the progress of the Dominion. It is replete with statistical information relative to the trade, postal, and telegraph arrangements, corporate bodies and the legislative and public men of the several Provinces. The work is in every way admirably gotten up, and must have been the result of a great deal of hard work on the part of Mr. Harvey, its editor.—Exchange.

LATEST FROM EUROPE.

The Pope's Position—Prussian Postal Arrangements—The Portuguese Expedition to Cork and Kinsale.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—Marquis De Moustier, Minister of Foreign Affairs, addressing the French Senate yesterday, said that the stay of the French troops now remaining in the Papal Territory would be brief and was undertaken to restore the safety of the Pope. The question between the Holy Father and Italy was one of distress, and the object of the General European Conference called by the Emperor was to remove this question.

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The Prussian Government through its Postal Department has signed a new contract with the Hamburg and American Steam Packet Company, and the North German Lloyd's Steamship for regular mail service from Hamburg and Bremen to New York, by reason of the contract many additional facilities are given to thepublic, and especial provision is made for transmission of samples of merchandize by mail.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The mail steamer, from Brazil has arrived. Late news received at Rio Janeiro from the Seat of War on the Paraguay, was exciting. The allied cavalry had made an attack on the Paraguayan forces which the Brazilians claim resulted in a complete victory for the allies. The Brazilian reports of the fight say Lopez lost 2,000 killed and 1,200 prisoners, while the loss of the allies was only 80 killed.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 1.—To-day, the obsequies of Allen, Gould and Larkin, were observed here with much solemnity by the Irish inhabitants. A funeral procession paraded the streets, and a meeting held.—No attempt was made by the authorities to interfere with the proceedings, and no disturbance whatever occured. The demonstration, though considerable in numbers, did not equal the one in Cork to-day.

CORK, Dec. 1.—A great demonstration of sympathy for the Penians executed at Manchester was made here to-day. The ceremonies were similar to those which took place on Sunday last in London. The funeral procession was very long and imposing. It was headed by a lofty catafalque, trimmed with green and black, and drawn by six horses. This was followed by nearly twenty thousand persons, most of whom wore green emblems shrouded in crape. Over 1,500 women took part in the procession and several priests were observed marching in the ranks. Good order prevailed throughout the day.

PARIS Dec. 2.—A small body of French cavalry still occupy Rome, and will probably remain there permanently. All other French troops have evacuated the territory.

ROME, Dec. 2.—The Pope will materially strengthen the Papal army.

LIVERPOOL, Dec. 2.—The weather has been very severe, and many shipwrecks, with loss of life, have occurred. The barque Guardian Angel, bound for New York, is lost, and only seven of the crew saved.

AN ENGLISH EX-PROFESSOR OF THE CANADIAN CONFEDERATION.—Mr. Goldwin Smith has sent to a Manchester paper a lengthy communication on the subject of the Canadian Confederation. At one time, he says, like many others, he used to dream of a union of the British North American Provinces, but that a better knowledge of the facts, aided by a short visit to the country, has dispelled entirely his dream. He considers the imperial guarantee of three millions was given to the Intercolonial Railway without any serious attention to the subject on the part of the House of Commons, and that it was, in fact, a vast fee "given to local politicians for procuring the consent of their legislatures to the union." He declares that the proposed line will run through a country which can hardly, within any calculable time, produce traffic enough to pay the expense of working, much less of construction. It is valuable as a military work, it can only be directed against the United States, and be likely to cause irritation on the part of the Americans. Mr. Smith contends that to insist on uniting the Provinces of Nova Scotia with Canada by railway, began both are British possessions on the North American continent, is almost as irrational as it would be to insist on uniting Gibraltar and Malta by a subterranean tunnel because both are British possessions in the Mediterranean. "The Americans," he says, "cannot suffer the cession of the St. Lawrence to be in hostile, though they may be content that it should be in neutral hands." Mr. Smith holds peculiar views as to our colonies and would prefer their disintegration and withdrawal from British power altogether; but we suspect that there are not many who coincide with him, or who would be prepared to dissolve the connexion existing between the mother country and her transatlantic offspring.—English Paper

Lines for the St. Andrew's Society, Peterborough.

BY WILLIAM TELFORD.

Tho' ye should stand with thistle downfold gaun,
An' glum, an' gaster, an' rank yer jaws,
Ye canna haud the wheel o' time;
It wirkins 'roond wi' every chinge.

We just as weel mak hame gaitor
To tell or gie a single hour,
Toul mon the has swithly passed away,
An' brocht aroond St. Andrew's day.

It gies me pleesure to be here,
(I looks like hame for once a year,
An' brings to mind our youthie days
We scampered o'er auld Scotia's braes.

We're met, but faigs we're no our lane;
Throogh Canada's hale braid domain,
Aye, in auld Scotia, this an' briskit,
They're haudin t'ane St. Andrew's nicht.

Na superstition bringe us here,
Hame an' this day we still revere,
It kin'ds love 'twene leither Scotts,
Provices for them of stankrand lots.

When nordn Scots come to this toon
Your auld Society proves a boon,
Relieves, supports them, if they stay,
Assists an' help them on their way.

Some says the Scotch a clannish race,
Just a' for hale his an' place;
There's as thing I wad like to ken,
Should we not lu our countrymen?

Again, richt in yer teeth they'll fling
No'en, there's some Scotchmen no the thing;
That best is stubborn as the mule,
But no impossible—nae ass'nine.

At last they jump up with a hiller,
The Scotch are hard an' fond o' siller;
There's few, what country men ye please,
But's troubled with the same disease.

There's na a spot where white men be
But ye may simple Sandy see,
Is forest wild, or populous toon,
Weel, there be cotchmen in the moon.

Trace ancient history you will find
That hardn race was ne'er behind,
While carnage raged on battle field
Their bonnet with their blued they sealed.

Napoleon viewed, with wondrous gaze,
The kilted lads an' the Scotch Grays;
He was compelled to say our nicht—
Like d—— la mare than men they ficht.

Yes, Scotia's pluck an' Scotia's steel,
Gared steel-clad Frenchmen staggeren wheel
Brave Scots, aleal and day for you,
Your ranks were thinned on Waterloo.

Through many a hard foucht battle field,
We find them still the last to yield;
Up Alma's heights, still storin' true,
Where bullets thick as hail stanes flew.

At Balaclava—Inkerman—
The Russian blood fra Scotch swords ran;
Brave Coldstream Guards! they let them feel
Eleven times the point o' steel.

Aft Scots have followed life an' drum,
As aft they back victorious come;
Bravery, honour, glory, fame,
Unvarnished stands auld Scotia's name.

The not alone as battle ground
The brave Scots are always found,
In gorgeous hall, or humble cot,
We find the perseverin' Scot.

In pulpit, bench, as fitness calls,
Or in our Legislative halls,
In banks an' counting house, or store,
They're most ha'f Scotch, an' sometimes more.

Some Scots prefer the bachelor's life,
A guid few dinna tak' a wife;
The hill ones often gie's a ban,
But whigs the gallows gets but few.

A cheer for Scotia far awa,
An' for ourse'l's, baith ane an' a';
Strive still to act the Scotchman's part,
With honest, pure, determined heart.

But tush, am makon's far ower lang,
I'll throw ma pen down wi' a bang,
An' wish afore a throwet away,
Lang may ye haud St Andrew's day.

Working-women in New York.

The question of "Woman's work" and "Wages" has been widely discussed in the public prints, and the topic grows in importance and interest of it every effort expended on its solution. During the past summer a leading editorial on the subject, after stating the average amount paid to girls in the city for mechanical employments, closed with the remark: "How are they able from this sum to pay their board, and have anything left for their expenses, God only knows."

Yes, God knows! and he who once was so poor that he had not where to lay his head remembers the necessities and straits of earth, and often gently reminds his followers that the poor are always with them.

Within a month, Christian sympathy with the struggles of such girls and women as have no brother, father, or friend to stand between them and want, has embodied itself in a shape and form which nobly comes forth to claim a welcome and God-speed.

A large edifice, 200 feet by 54, six stories high, [illegible] able of accommodating 400 boarders, has been [illegible] and opened as a "Home for work-ing Women" where [illegible] for the moderate sum of three dollars a week, they may [illegible] comforts of a well-appointed city home. By the application of steam power to the cooking, washing, ironing, and heating arrangements, large results are combined with the utmost economy; as a proof of which it is expected that the sum paid for board will cover all expenses and furnish a mutual savings fund.

The matron and her assistants are Christian ladies, who belong to the family of one who spent his life in noble labors as a foreign missionary; and they desire to make their "Home" not a name only, but a reality, breathing refined Christian influence.

The pleasant parlors of this establishment are simply but comfortably furnished. A piano, parlor-organ, and sewing-machines are free to the boarders, and will provide employment and pleasure for winter evenings.

This is not a charitable institution, but a boarding-house where, upon business principles, the money paid for board will insure its fair and just equivalents. A work like this demands the attention and co-operation of every thoughtful Christian in the city or country. For want of such a home many a country girl seeking employment in the cities has fallen from the ranks of honorable toil, to sink in sin and the burdens, weary and sick, or to look upon temptation, be snared, and taken.

God indeed knows how the honest poor of our cities live; and he justly demands that the more favored of his children should also seek this knowledge, that they may be faithful stewards of their Lord's bounty.—American Messenger.

SEWING MACHINES!

GROUT'S

New Twisted Elastic Three Coated Stitch

SEWING MACHINE.

THE undersigned has received the agency for the sale of Messrs. Grout & Co's. Family Sewing Machine, which took the First Premium at the late Provincial Fair held at Kingston, against all other Machines exhibited.

This Machine does all kinds of work, from the thickest to the thinnest; works on Leather, Harness and Woollen Cloth, Cotton, Linen and Muslin, using Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, direct from the spools without the trouble of rewinding. It will hem, fell, stitch, tuck, bind, braid, quilt, cord, gather, sew or ruffle, or embroider, and do ornamental stitching in the most perfect manner.

The twisted stitch and the means of making it is peculiar, as it is produced by a rotating hooper of peculiar construction, with a spur or knot on it, and is so constructed that it is impossible to make a stitch, besides being the most simple operation in the world.

All will see the great advantage of the twist given the thread, as each thread has a twist given it while sewing the stitch, making it a three cord stitch, having greater strength than any other stitch, at the same time giving it great beauty.

Prices of Grout & Co's Sewing Machines, complete, with hemmer, bridler, extra needles, screw driver, clamp, book of instructions to enable any one to operate it at once, $15; Machines plated and pearled from $18 to $28; table and treadles, $6; extra needles, 75 cents per dozen; full supply of oil, silk thread, &c., for sale.

ALSO,

Raymond's $12 Sewing Machines

kept on hand. Needles for both Machines kept for sale.

We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind. It is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It eliminates the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, loosening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

CARELESSNESS.

Many persons neglect their horse's health and condition until it is too late—often at a trifling expense and no trouble that might have been saved if attended to in time. Those who may have occasion to use a medicine of the kind we would confidently recommend Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine; it is without doubt the best preparation in use, as thousands who have used it testify.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

"ECONOMY IS WEALTH."—FRANKLIN.—Why will people pay $50 or $100 for a Sewing Machine, when $25 will buy a better one for all practical purposes? Notwithstanding we are to be contrary, the subscribers beg to inform their numerous friends that the "FRANKLIN" and "MEDALLION" Machines can be had in any quantity. The machine is a double thread, constructed upon entirely new principles, and does not infringe upon any other in the world. It is emphatically the poor man's Sewing Machine, and is warranted to excell all others, as thousands of patrons will testify.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are now offered to the public, and confidently recommended as the best Purgative Medicine which the Medical skill of the present age has been able to produce. Their superiority over all other cathartics consists in the fact that, while they are more searching in their effects, they are at the same time the mildest that can be employed. They contain no calomel or other mineral substance, and may be taken by any one, at any time, without making the patient sick. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and no one will refuse to do so who knows their virtues. They operate directly on the internal viscera, and cause the secretions to resume healthy action, thereby restoring the disordered organs to vigorous health. They purify the blood, and impart to it the principles of life. They cleanse the system from all impurities, and thus prevent and cure disease. Being purely vegetable, no harm can arise from their use in any quantity. They are the best aperient that can be used where a mild but effectual purgative is required. They produce all the good effects of calomel, without any of its bad ones. Every one is subject to occasional attacks of derangement of the stomach and bowels, requiring the operation of a cathartic medicine, and why will you take nauseous drugs, when you can get by the use of these Pills, the desired effect? They are an excellent remedy for Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Headache, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Erysipelas, Piles, Gravel, Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Worms, Tumors, Ulcers, Skin Diseases, Blotches, Boils, Pimples, Tetter, Scurvy, Scrofula, Ringworm, Erysipelas, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Sore Eyes, Sore Throat, Female Irregularities, Suppressions, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of persons of full habit, who require a sudden and powerful solvent and purgative. Their sugar coating renders them pleasant to take, and they are the best aperient for children that can be used. Prepared by Biliousness Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purposes as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1866.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say that they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease or obstinate dose in which they failed to do them. Fraternally yours, ALEX. H. BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Acts. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in sickness. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I am confident of recommending them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARREN, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 28, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Pile, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the precursor of others that are worse. I believe no disease to originate in the liver, but your Pills effect that organ and cure the disease.

From Drs. B. Short, Physician and Midwife, Exeter, Canada.

I have now in use your Pills, and find them to act on the proper tissue, are exempt from producing any of the unnatural stools when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual in cleansing the stomach and digestive organs. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on neuralgic shooting and aching pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

RENATE CHARLES, Baton Rouge, La., 8 Dec. 1866.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that has afflicted me for years. VINCENT GLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve me enough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lungs, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

Of the Celebrated Indian, Dr. Lewis Josephus, of the Distinguished Tribe of Shoshonees, British Columbia, is now for sale in Canada.

THIS all-possessing Great Indian Remedy is wanted, and in broad and emphatic language, we can safely say may be replied upon to make a permanent cure of all Diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c., as well as Scrofula, the various Skin Diseases, Humors, and all diseases arising from impurity of the blood, excepting the third stage of Consumption. Funny and free are bachelor's reveries,
Oberon merrily names his Fay;
Nothing knows he of connubial deviltries,
Troublesome children and ill-tempered wife.
Free from matters, care and anxiety
Charms to variety fall to his share;
Rarebees blisses and Venus's kisses—
This, boys, 'tis this, is the bachelor's fare.

A wife like a canister, clattering, stuttering,
Will to a dog for your torment and doom;
All over chuntering, humming and hurr ring
Harries and worries you till you are dead.
Old coats are true devils haunted with blue devils,
Young sons are blue devils raising despair
Doctors and nurses combining their curses,
Adieu to all purses and bachelor's fare.

Tho' now folly days were once sweet holidays
Embittered at present with wrangling and strife,
Wives turn folly days to melancholy days,
Always perplexing and vexing one's life;
Children are riotous, maid servants fly at us,
Mamma, to quiet us, growls like a bear;
Jenny is squalling, and Polly is bawling,
And dad is recalling his bachelor's fare.

When they are older grown then they are bolder grown.
Turning your temper and spurning your rule;
Girls through their foolishness, passion and mulishness
Parry your wishes and marry a fool.
Boys will astronomize, lavish and dissipate,
All that your industry hoarded with care;
Then tell me when jollity, fun or frivolity,
Equals in quality bachelor's fare!

BEHIND THE SCENES.

"A pack of trouble—a pack? Measure it rather by the bushel for children!" exclaimed Kate Wooster impatiently. "I don't see for my part," she went on, "how people ever came to measure trouble by the peck as if eight quarts were the maximum quantity allowed to man. Why, the world is full of it! You wouldn't think of bailing out the ocean by the thimbleful, and there is less water than trouble; for the geographers say the earth is only three-fourths water. A peck of trouble forsooth! As far as I can see, and as deep as I can feel, there is nothing but trouble, trouble, trouble!"

"What are you going to do about it?" asked Rachel Thorne, meekly responsive.

"There is Tom Lancaster; he is just the dearest duck of a fellow ever was.—He has splendid eyes, and curling hair, and the loveliest moustache! Then he is always so lively and full of fun. He sings divinely too; and as for dancing, there is not a fellow in our set who can dance so gracefully. He is very fine hearted, and spends his money generously. The gentlemen say he is a monstrous good fellow, and the girls are all in love with him. I confess to the same weakness, only I have this advantage over the rest—Tom is very much in love with me. You see how I stand; now here's pa's platform. He says Tom has nothing to begin life with as a married man, and moreover he is inclined to be a spendthrift. He says there are very few lovers that can stand the wear and tear of every-day life, superadded to troublesome calculations concerning the questions of bread and butter. He says Tom is not the man for me and I am blind to my best interests if I encourage him further. That's Tom Lancaster from a financial point of view. Ma takes another ground. She says there is nothing in Tom; that founding on a character like his is a folly similar to building a house on the sand, and that no man builds wisely who builds not on the rock of respect. Ma is figurative you know, and her speech abounds in metaphor. She says, moreover, that I have higher capabilities than Tom Lancaster, as that his shallow nature would never satisfy the best and highest aspirations of my being. That is complimentary to me, I admit, but I doubt if it is just to Tom.

"Anything else," asked Rachel Thorne, in her importunately grave way.

"Yes" answered Kate, "much else. You have heard of—

"A man in our town,
Who was so wood-ous wise,
He jumped into a briar bush
And scratched out both his eyes.

And when he found his eyes were out.
With all his might and main,
He jump'd into another bush,
And scratched them in again."

"That man's name save is Eury, and the briar-bush he jumped into was matrimony. The selection of his first wife showed him to be no judge of a woman. The choice of his possible successor does honor to his judgement. His first acquaintance was not a happy one, but he proposed to repair that first error by a master stroke of policy. Mr. Eury certainly designs to offer me his hand if I give him a chance. Now in the first place I abominate ur owers. In the next place, he is so old as the everlasting hills. To a his wisdom and learning are immense, and I always feel like making him a reverence, and going over to Tom Lancaster's nonsence. He can't sing a bit; at least I never heard him; and as for dancing, you will as soon expect to see one of the columns of St. Peter's executing a waltz. That is my view of Mr. Eury. Now pa looks at him from a Wall street point of view; and says he, Katie, there's a man with remarkable energy and foresight. I know no better man, and no more thoroughly gentlemanly. You cannot expect that man's advances will not injustice to yourself and seriously displease me. Then ma'am chimes in with her European theories.—Says she "Katie my child, Mr. Eury is a man of noble mind, of deep feelings, of thorough refinement and cultivated intellect. There is that in the man to command respect and inspire love, when a mere fancy like that you have for Tom Lancaster would lie in a crumbled ruins." Now, do you call this entanglement of affairs only a peck of trouble? If I were sure that pa and ma were not right, I would marry Tom without further ado; but one can't be certain about men. I declare Rachel, it's awful to decide, as we women must, on so little data. If we could only see men out of society, as their sisters and mothers know them, and as their wives must certainly find them out, we should make fewer mistakes in marriage."

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" asks Rachel Thorne, returning to her practical question again.

Kate Wooster remained silent a long time, absorbed in deep thought.

"I have it!" she exclaimed at length starting up; "I'll see behind the scenes, and judge for myself. You must help me, Rachel Thorne, and be secret."

That night two beggar women, poorly clad, stood at a street door and read the name of Lancaster

"This is it," whispered one with a low, chuckling laugh. "Now you ask for Tom, and tell your woeful tale of a sick husband and half a dozen children, and I will keep my top eye lash open. I vow I will not marry him if he treats us suitably. No don't, go to that door! We are not vagrants. I don't want any parlor work about this business. Now get your Irish brogue on your tongue's end.

The beggar women waited in Mrs. Lancaster's kitchen. Another woman almost as ill clad, waited too. From the dining room came the sound of voices.

"I wish you wouldn't Tom."

"But I say I must," was the impatient reply. "What's the use of your going on that way, mother?" I believe women are all alike, crying and scolding, and finding fault if a man don't walk a bee-line right straight up Zion's hill."

"I'd like to know what you'll do when you get married," said a younger, girlish voice.

"I'll do as I please, sir," was the answer. "my wife had better not cause any of her woman's ways over me. I'll be master in my own house, and she'll find it out right soon. Such coffee! I could beat that myself. Got a headache, Sis? Seems to me women always have the headache. What's this—the grocery bill? Zounds, you gave me a grocer's bill not three days ago. Three weeks! Now I know better. Sugar, coffee, butter, flour—seems to me we use as much as two families ought to. Want the money of me? I ain't got any money. Women think men are made of money. Let the grocer whistle for his money—I don't care. I've got a bill to-day to settle at the florist's, are just silly enough to adore them, and they are nice to say soft things over. Who wants me in the kitchen? My washerwoman? Tell her I'm not at home. Won't go, eh? Well I will see."

"Yer owin' me for a good many months shure; and I can't get my bread for the children, and I wants money," said the washerwoman, as Tom Lancaster entered.

"I haven't got it, Biddy. You'll have to wait a month or two," answered the young man carelessly.

"But I have waited and waited, and my children will starve," pleaded the woman, crying.

"Oh, no; the little brats are tough.—They'll stand it. I'll pay you one of these days, Biddy." And the young man moved towards the door.

The washerwoman was desperate.

"I've waited for you weeks and months, Mr. Tom Lancaster," she said, fiercely.—"And, now I'll not wait any longer until I tell you my opinion of you. You are a bad, selfish man; and you eat your dinners and dance with your fine ladies; and if they know you as I do, they'd spurn you like a dog. I hope your own children will lack for food as mine do, and your own wife will work her fingers to the bone, and indeed she's likely to."

Tom Lancaster's face was dark with passion, as he ordered the woman to leave the house.

"And you two," he added, turning to the beggars, "had better tramp, also."

Silently the women rose. At the door, the servant thrust into their hands some slices of bread.

"Take these," she said; "and God bless you! Mr. Tom's in an awful pet this evening."

Out in the street, the beggars threw the bread away.

"I gained some crumbs of information that are worth more to me," said one, in a musing way. "Goodness, Rachel!—Are not men dreadful? Just think of a fuss over groceries! And my flowers have robbed little children of bread! How that curse on his wife and children made shudder!"

The women walked on in silence until they reached a handsome house with spacious grounds. The name of Eury was at the door.

"This is it," whispered the light, girlish voice again. "It is dishonorable to spy, but the end justifies the means."

"I ain't got nothin' for you. Go to work, and don't bother me with your everlastin' beggin'," was the ungracious reception the beggars got from the cook.

They were turning away, when a tidy girl stepped forward.

"Come in," she said, "and I'll get you something to eat. I'll tell the master, Norah, if you send any one away again.—You know he said no beggar should go away empty."

"An' its a pretty mouth master makes with an everlastin' stream of beggars runnin' after him," said the cook.

The master was away.

"You'll find him at Wm. Worrell's," volunteered the tidy girl. "The poor man is dying, and they sent for him.—Master is very kind hearted; and if you want he'p, you had better go there. He was just sick himself to-night; but he never thinks of his own comfort."

"Let's go past Wm Worrell's house," said the same girlish voice that had spoken before under the tattered hood. "I want to be fully convinced in my own mind."

At the small, half-curtained window of a laborer's cottage, two crones looked in.

It was a touching scene. On the low couch lay a dying man; by his side there took a weeping wife, and holding one child while another clung to his knee in terrified wonder, sat Gilbert Eury, reading from the volume which to the dying is earths only book.

The scenes moved away.

Are they not "all ministering spirits," echoed a girl's voice, grown solemn by that scene. "Pa and ma are right."

"I thought you said Mr. Eury was old as the everlasting hills;" remarked the other.

"I meant that he was about thirty-five," answered the first speaker. "I have been horribly prejudiced"

Kate Wooster is engaged to marry Eury. Tom Lancaster and public gossip says that Mr. Eury's money and fine house have bought him such a beautiful young wife; but Rachel Thorn retains that opinion with a very decided shake of her head, and the enigmatical remark that beggars have a better opportunity of judging of character in one hour than ladies have in a parlor acquaintance of years standing.

An Arab's Idea of Matrimony.

Now, it was always a common practice among the Arab women, when they called upon my wife, to request her to show her hands; they would then feel the soft palms, and exclaim in astonishment, "Ah, she has never ground corn!" that being the duty of a wife, unless she is rich enough to possess slaves. Sheik Achmet requested me to give him some account of our domestic arrangements in England; I did this as briefly as possible, explaining how ladies received our devoted attentions, extolling their beauty and virtue, and in fact, giving him an idea that England was paradise, and that the ladies were angels. I described the variety of colors, that instead of all being dark, some were exceedingly fair; that our hair had red hair; that we had many bright black eyes, and some irresistable dark blue; and, at the close of my description, I believe the sheik and his party felt disposed to emigrate immediately to the chilly shores of Great Britain. They asked, "How far off is your country?" "Well," said the sheik, with a sigh, "that must be a very charming country; how could you possibly come away from all your beautiful wives? True, you have brought one with you; she is, of course, the youngest and most lovely; perhaps those you have left at home are the old ones!" I was obliged to explain that we were prepared to marry two or more they would be punished with imprisonment. The announcement was received with a general expression of indignation; the sheik and his party, who a few minutes ago were disposed to emigrate and settle upon our shores, would now at the most have ventured upon a return ticket. After some murmurs of disapprobation, there was a decided expression of unbelief in my last statement. "Why," said the sheik, "the fact is simply impossible. How can a man be contented with one wife? It is ridiculous, absurd! What is he to do when she becomes old? When she is young, if very lovely, perhaps he might be satisfied with her, but even the young must some day grow old, and the beauty must fade. The man does not fade like the woman; therefore, as he remains the same for many years. Nature has arranged that men shall have young wives to replace the old; does not the Prophet allow it? Had not our forefathers many wives? and shall we have but one? Look at yourself. Your wife is young, and" (here the sheik indulged in compliments,) "but in ten years she will not be the same as now; will you not then let her have a nice house all to herself, when she grows old, while you take a fresh young wife?" I was obliged to explain to the sheik that, first, our ladies never looked old; secondly, they improved with age; and, thirdly, that we were supposed to love our wives with greater ardour as they advance in years. This was received with an ominous shake of the head, coupled with the exclamation, "Mashalloh!" repeated by the whole party. "But was the moment for a few remarks on polygamy; I continued, "You men are selfish; you expect from the woman that which you will not give in return, constancy and love; if your wife demanded a multiplicity of husbands would it not be impossible to love her? How can she love you if you insist upon other wives?" "Ah," he replied, "our women are different to yours; they would not love anybody. Look at your wife, she has travelled with you far away from her own country, and her heart is stronger than a man's; she is afraid of nothing, because you are with her; but our women prefer to be far away from their husbands, and are only happy when they have nothing whatever to do. You don't understand our women; they are ignorant creatures, and when their youth is past are good for nothing but to work. You have explained your customs; your women are adored by the men, and you are satisfied with one wife, either young or old; now I will explain our customs. I have four wives; as one has become old, I have replaced her with a young one; here they all are. (He now marked four strokes upon the sand with his stick). Then one carries water; that grinds the corn; this makes the bread; the last does not do much as she is the youngest, and my favorite; and if they neglect their work, they get a taste of this—(shaking a long and tolerably thick stick). Now, that's the difference between our establishments; yours is well adapted for your country and ours is the best plan for our own." —The Nile Tributaries of Abyssinia. By Sir Samuel W. Baker, M. A., F. R. G. S.

GOOD ADVICE.—Keep a smile on your countenance. Smiles breed dimples, which are far more ornamental than seventy-five cent vest chains. It is dangerous to sleep in the same town with the proprietor of a perpetual frown. Don't walk around looking as dismal as a sick undertaker, or as if you were going to your own wedding or funeral. If you feel downhearted, avoid looking-glasses. Take to clean linen and victuals, and you will come out all right.

THE LIVE MAN.

The live man is like a little pig, he is weaned young and begins raw root early.

He is the pepper sass of Creation—the allspice or the world.

A man who has drawn New Orleans molasses in the month of January thro a half inch auger hole, and sing "Home sweet home!" while the molassis is running, may be strictly honest, but he ain't sudder enough for this climate.

The live man is as full of business as the conductor of a street car—he is often like a hornet, very busy, but about what the Lord only knows.

He is like a runaway hoss, he gets the whole of the road.

He trots when he walks, and lies down at night only between everybody else hoss.

The live man is not always a deep thinker; he jumps at conclusions just as the frog does, and don't always land at the spot he is looking at.

He is the American pet, a perfect mistery two foreigners; but hes don more (with charcoal) to work out the greatness ov this country than enny other man in it.

He don't always die rich, but always dies bizzy, and meets death a good deal as an oyster duz, without enny fuss.

He is just as necessary as the grease on an axletree. JOSH BILLINGS.

PREVAILING FASHION.—The Hamilton Times 'local' thus deals tardy justice to a frightful and disfiguring fashion:—

"Taken as a class, women can contribute more outlandish and ugly styles of hair dressing than one would think possible without the gift of inspiration. The waterfall, for instance, is now on the fifth change since the introduction of the ludicrous appurtenance. First it represented a bladder of Scotch snuff; secondly it hung down the back like a canvas-covered ham, the appearance of the wearer being not unlike that of a Nigger squaw with a papoose; thirdly it contradicted and counterfeited a turnip on the back of the head, that vegetable probably being employed to some extent in the formation of the excrescence; fourthly it was projected straight out behind like a wire muzzle on a long-nosed dog; and the latest style in vogue is an elevation of the protuberance to the summit of the occiput, bearing it an angle of about forty-five degrees, like a mountain howitzer charged with the seeds of destruction. Nestling in the midst of this stretch of head and hair reposes a little buttercake of a bonnet, in the manner of a jockey saddle on a long-backed race horse."

THE FIRST TWENTY YEARS.—Live as long as you may, the first twenty years form the greater part of your life. They appear so when they are passing; they seem to have been so when we look back to them; and they take up more room in our memory than all the years that succeed them. If this be so, how important that they should be passed in planting good principles, cultivating good tastes, strengthening good habits, flowing from all those pleasures which lay up bitterness and sorrow for time to come! Take good care of the first twenty years.

PLEASURE OF READING.—Of all amusements that can possibly be imagined for a workingman, after a day's toil, or in the intervals, there is nothing like reading a newspaper or book. It calls for no bodily exertion, of which the man has had enough—perhaps too much. It relieves his home of dullness and sameness. Nay, it accompanies him to his next day's work, and gives him something to think of besides the mere mechanical drudgery of his every day occupation—and look forward to with pleasure.

Mark Twain, lecturing on the Sandwich Islands offered to show how the cannibals eat their food if some lady would lend him a baby. The lecture was not illustrated.

Josh Billings says first class virtue is always anxious to avoid temptation.

Indiscriminate eulogy and indiscriminate invectives are equally good—good for nothing.

The New Prospects of the Pope—The Forthcoming Conference.

(From the New York Times.)

The extraordinary change which has taken place in the policy of the principal parties interested in the settlement of the Roman question cannot be understood until the December Conference has met and adjourned, and its history and results reveal themselves to the world

When the French Emperor first made his proposition for a general conference to consider some means of terminating a dispute which constantly threatens the peace of Europe, which has twice compelled French intervention, and which confessedly belongs to the very highest range of grand politics, he was vigorously opposed by the Italian Government on the one hand, and by the Pope's Government on the other. There seemed no possible ground of compromise between these parties; for while Italy was determined not to give up her claims upon Rome, the Pope was equally determined not to surrender his. Even a war between the two elements promised no settlement, and offered nothing but distraction to each. They would not be permitted to fight it out by themselves. Other powers were involved or interested in the business quite as much as were the principals, and it needed but the signal of hostilities to bring them to the field prepared to range themselves, if not at first against either party, yet between both, in such a way as immediately to paralyze each, and ultimately imperil the existence of one as well as the other. It is enough for those who are accustomed to take an account of anything but his own high-flying fancies, to derive sheep and easy plans for settling the question of the Papacy and the question of Italian unity; but those who know anything of the religious and political complications of the matter, its relations to great interests, fixed associations, deep convictions, conflicting ambitions, and the schemes of men who control the armies of the world, are compelled to admit that nothing more difficult has ever presented in European diplomacy.

It appears now, however, that in some way or other, altogether inconceivable to us, the French Emperor has induced both the Pope and the King of Italy—those irreconcilable and uncompromising antagonists—to participate in a Conference with himself and other powers, with a view to reaching a pacific and satisfactory settlement by some means that we confess ourselves utterly unable to conjecture. From what the Pope has said and sworn, in reiterated and impassioned language, it is incredible that he would give his assent to a conference that would imperil the Temporal Power he holds from God and defends against the devil and all the fraternity of them, with spiritual weapons Chassepot rifles; and he must neither have received a guarantee of safety of this fundamental point, or must feel, since the defeat of the red-shirts, at Monte Rotondo, that in the last resort he is able to defy and overthrow all his enemies in the open field. On the other hand, it is inconceivable that the Italian Government, considering its necessities, its determination, its recent proclamations and manifestoes, and its pledges to the Italian people, should enter a Conference under conditions that would completely prevent its accomplishing anything whatever, that would hinder its freedom of action in the future, and would signify for it only renewed discomfiture and disgrace. If inducements of some sort must have been held out to the Pope, there must also have been some other sort of inducements held out to Victor Emmanuel to lead him to enter a Conference to which he had proclaimed his hostility. As for the French Emperor, again, who has labored so strenuously to bring about this Conference and to whom its success is of such vital consequence, both in his relations to France and to Europe at large, it may be taken as a matter of positive assurance that he would not commit himself in the way he has done, unless he had wrought out some scheme of uncommon power for the settlement of this grand question.—Some scheme feasible as well as splendid, and likely to be acceptable to the Pope as well as to the devils who oppose him.

But, however all things may be, and by whatever means the result has been attained, we are disposed to regard the Conference in the most favorable light, and to look for great advantage to Italy through it. The Pope may enter it determined as ever to assert all his temporal claims; but if he finds that the strength of Catholic Europe has fixed upon some means [illegible] will soon see that resistance and anathemas are ridiculous, and will meekly surrender himself to the inscrutable will of Heaven.

When the Fenian prisoners convicted at Manchester of the murder of Police Sergeant Brett were sentenced to be hanged, and when it was found that ordinary means were unequal to alter the determination of the government to allow the sentence to be carried into effect, threats were indulged in that have proved equally unavailing as the pressing efforts made in the House of Commons and by petition of the Queen. In Ireland these threats took the form of incendiary fires which were to burst forth in different places In New York threats of burning the British shipping in port were indulged in; and fresh talk of an incursion into Canada sprung up, followed, as if to give effect to the threat, by a movement of Fenian arms along the frontier.

So far, however, these threats have been empty. There has been no British shipping burnt in New York, no attack on Canada, and no widespread conflagration by incendiarism in England or Ireland to mark the avenging power of the organization.

An effort has, however, been produced in America. There is a very general clamor among Irish Americans that the government of the United States has not sufficiently protected those claiming the rights of American citizenship. This is a grievance which is likely only to trouble the local politics of that country Attacks upon Mr. Seward and Minister Adams will be met by plenty of defenders in the United States. As point of fact, the American legation in London has already put forward a very satisfactory defence on this head. In the case of Michael O'Brien alias Gould, and doubtless also in the case of other prisoners, Mr. Adams took notice of the claim of protection. In Gould's case the Minister directed a letter to the prisoner to the following effect:—

"From information derived from a reliable source, he finds that you are the same Michael O'Brien who was tried and claimed American protection at Liverpool in 1865. You then received sufficient warning from the United States consul at that place not to put yourself again in any danger, and Mr. Adams regrets to learn that you have failed to follow that prudent advice." The United States Government could not become the apologist or defender of murder; and it has left the persons convicted at Manchester to bear the consequence of the violation of the laws of the country in which they lived.

The English government has acted with a full knowledge of the circumstances and with a thorough understanding of the necessity and the danger of taking the course it has done. The American government also has been acquainted with the circumstances of the crime and the merits of the claim to American citizenship by these disturbers of the peace. The English government was undeterred by threats; it had its duty to perform, and it resolutely performed it. The American government likewise found it had its path of duty. It had arrived at a point in which interference would have brought upon the nation a stigma as the apologist of crime, and it has acted in accordance with ideas of national honor, instead of resorting to the low ground of a temporary political expediency.

It cannot be thought that any serious estrangement between the American and British peoples can ensue out of the case of the Manchester murder.—News

The Montreal Transcript expresses the hope that every member of Parliament who appropriates to himself "a wedge of silver, Babylonian garment, will be mercifully stoned and that without pity." We have heard all kinds of charges brought against our public men, but never before heard them accused of a desire to purloin old clothes A "wedge of silver" probably means half a dollar, and if any of our politicians or any other man is found imprudently appropriating any of those coins, we hope, that instead of being "mercifully stoned," a doubtful kind of punishment, he will be sent to the Penitentiary.—Carleton Place Herald.

The Peterborough Examiner

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1867.

The County Court and Court of Quarter Sessions

Opened on Tuesday before his Honor, Judge Boucher.

The roll of Grand Jurors being called, the following gentlemen answered to their names:

Robert Bell, Esq., foreman; Robt. Brown, Wm. Dufresne, Wm. Devell, Wm. Duffin, Samuel Elliot, Robert Fife, Timothy Fitzpatrick, William Fitzgerald, Andrew Grant, James Middleton, Hamilton Spence, Alex. Smith.

The following not being present a fine of $5.00 was imposed on each of them:—

John C. Harrison. —— Cannon, David Anderson, Franklin Austin, J. A. Buck, E. C. Hill, S. Dickson.

The Jury being sworn in, the Judge remarked in addressing them, that the docket was of the usual character. There were few crimes on the docket that had not been before them before, with the exception of one, namely, horse stealing. This was one very unusual in the county. He further remarked that they should not go with their judgment formed, or with any preconceived ideas. It was their duty to try according to evidence and from the evidence alone should they draw their conclusion whether there is enough to send any prisoner up for trial before another jury. In regard to the crime of larceny, it was too often before the courts. It consisted in taking the goods of another with felonious intent. Even the removal of goods from one place to another to conceal them with intent of afterwards taking them with felonious intent was larceny. A person, too, may obtain an article legally, as for instance, a horse at a livery stable, but afterwards takes the horse to himself or disposes of him, this also was larceny. The Judge further remarked that it would be their duty to examine the jail and the way the prisoners therein were treated. The jail, however, was well kept, as preceding reports of Grand Jurors always testified. He referred also to two insane persons who are at present in the jail, and regretted that they were under necessity to place them there, there being no other place for them at present for want of accommodation for such individuals at an asylum.

The first case was a case of appeal against the decision of a magistrate, but owing to some informality it was ruled out of order.

TROTTER vs. TROTTER.—This was a trial between a father and son about property or chattels that the son had taken possession of and the father afterwards taking them was taken up for stealing. The son sued the father for $150, but the jury gave a verdict for the father for $150. Fairbairn for deft. R. Burnham for plf.

R. S. Corrigan was arraigned for the crime of stealing a horse and buggy from John Archer. He pleaded guilty.

WEDNESDAY.

HUNTER vs. LEE.—This was a case brought by John Hunter, Esq., of Galway, against one Lee, for taking logs off his limits. Verdict for plt., Hunter, $196. W. H. Scott for plf.

Richard S. Corrigan was again placed in the dock to answer to the charge of obtaining money under false pretences. He entered the court room in tears and trembling greatly, and while he was being tried he would tremble and cry alternately; at intervals he would brighten up and get composed. His tears produced but little impression in his favor.

Mr. Hatton, from whom he obtained the money, gave evidence as to the manner of obtaining it. The prisoner Corrigan sought to raise money on land which he represented as his own, and in order to satisfy Mr. Hatton of its value, it was suggested that Mr. Chesire's certificate of its value should be produced. Mr. Cheshe gave a paper representing John Clyndale and Paul Jenkins as men of curiosity and as knowing the property, and taking part of it for a lot represented by Corrigan. said he believed it to be worth $700. Mr. Hatton desired, however, to obtain Messrs. Clyndale and Jenkins' certificate as referred to by Mr. Cheate. Corrigan agreed to obtain it and left with that intent. He, however, only went as far as Morgan's hotel, and, according to his own showing, got one O'Brien, a ratisman, to sign the names of Messrs. Clyndale and Jenkins, and presented it to Mr. Hatton so soon after taking it away that he had no suspicions, but he gave five dollars on it. Mr. Clyndale testified to not having signed it, so did Mr. Jenkins. Corrigan had no counsel; he, however, asked several questions to the witness, and also addressed the jury on his own behalf, laying the blame on Mr. Cheate as the prompter of Mr. Hatton, and representing himself as persecuted. The verdict returned was guilty.

When Corrigan was brought up for sentence, the noise of his crying was hideous, and he almost appeared as if likely to go into fits. Calm being restored, the sentence was pronounced—Penitentiary for 7 years, 5 years for the horse stealing and 2 years for the crime of obtaining money under false pretences. Let us hope that he may return to the Great Being whom he says has forsaken him, and did forsake him in his career; and may he learn that God will not forsake him if he does not first forsake God. Seven years will afford time for reflection.

The Grand Jury brought in true bills against B. S. Jerrow, Owen Curren and M. Barbineau, for Larceny.

FIRES.

We regret to learn, that the barn of Mr. Wm. Trennum, Smith, was consumed, and its contents, on the morning of the 9th instant, we learn also that there was considerable grain and other stuff in the barn at the time We are informed that Mr. Trennum's loss is over $800. He was insured in the Agricultural Mutual for $300 on the whole, his loss will therefore be $400, above his insurance. Mr. J. A. Hartley we believe is agent for the above company. and he no doubt will promptly have the claims settled, prompt settlements of such claims is the best test of a good Company; we trust therefore that Mr. Trennum's loss will be speedily awarded.

On Friday evening the stable of Mr. Geo. Rickie, Ashburnham, was consumed by fire. Mr. Rickie had taken a horse out of the stable about 20 minutes previous to the alarm being given, and driven away to see a friend who was unwell. He however had no light in the stable, and therefore cannot account for the fire. Reports have it that it was set on fire from the back part, adjoining a pig pen, where were some pigs, and which it is supposed some one had been feeding, accidently and unnoticed, but 6 6 from which originated the whole mischief. Mr. Rickey says his loss is about $100.

NOTICE TO PAY UP.—Some person or persons, not over friendly to the increase of knowledge, entered the school house on the Stewart Property, known as the Auburn School in Douro, on Saturday night, the 30th instant, and destroyed the whole, book, paper, and ink that happened to be there at the time. What a mean, contemptible act. The perpetrator or perpetrators must be noble-minded souls. The Trustees offer a reward. We hope the guilty party will be found out and punished.

PARLIAMENTARY.—We had intended to lay before our readers a synopsis of the business of the present session of the Parliament of the Commons of Canada to this date, but owing to other business demanding our attention for three or more days, we have been unable to give the subject that attention that it required, and consequently we have deferred it to another issue.

Priest O'Connell, of Douro, has written a long letter to the Canadian Freeman on certain grievances in connection with one of the schools in that Township, viz., the terrible sin of having anatomical charts hung up in it. We will try and give it a place next week, and in the meantime withhold comment.

STEAMER COBOURGIAN.—We learn that the steamer Cobourgian, lately running between Port Hope and Charlotte, has safely arrived at Montreal, where she is to undergo a few minor alterations, prior to her being placed upon the Through Line from Montreal to Chicago next season.

We invite attention to the new advertisement of the Montreal House. Mr. Dunnet offers great inducements to purchase now, during the holidays, says he will sell clothing at cost price. Intending purchasers should try the Montreal House.

LITERARY CLUB.—The debate for this evening will be an extempore one and chosen by the Chairman; he will also choose the leaders. Mr. W. H. Scott, Chairman. Members only admitted.

The Canada Farmer offers to send the November and December numbers free to all subscribers who will send in their subscription for 1868, before the commencement of next year. Price one dollar per year.

The School House in Section No. 1, in the township of Chandos, was consumed by fire on Saturday night. It is supposed to have been accidental.

NOTICE.—Attention to the notice of dissolution in connection with the former proprietors of this paper is invited.

On the 5th inst, Hon. Stephen Richards was nominated by Mayor Pedlar, and seconded by Mr. Stephens, and Capt. Grain was nominated by Mr. Thomas N. Ballard, seconded by Mr. Counsel. A poll was demanded by Mayor Pedlar on behalf of Mr. Richards, SIXTY-THREE PERSONS DROWNED.—A terrible accident recently occurred in Russia, at Kieschenez, government district of Kostroma. About a hundred persons of both sexes were returning from the fair at the village, and entered a ferry-boat to cross the Volga. The vessel was unusually crowded, and when near the opposite shore the ferryman demanded payment of the fares. The crowd of passengers was in consequence thrown into a state of motion, and the boat capsized. Sixty-three persons were drowned.

TOWN COUNCIL.

The Town Council met on Monday evening. All the members present.

The Committee on Finance made a report.

Mr. Chamberlain introduced a By law to amend a By law that prevents the obstruction of the streets and sidewalks. This amendment would have allowed merchants to encroach about 18 inches of the sidewalk for displaying their goods. It, however, was defeated after two readings, and the old By-law so amended as to prevent the display of any goods on the sidewalk.

The celebrated railway By-law then came up, and for a time the greatest amusement prevailed. Messrs. Clinton, Burnham and Stevenson made long speeches in favor of the Port Hope road and against any road that would not start from Peterboro. Mr. Stevenson's speech was the speech of the evening. It left nothing untouched from Emmerson chickens all the way to Cobourg One most remarkable part of his speech is the high estimate he puts on the morality of the citizens of Peterboro'. One would imagine that Catiline was again looking back on Rome, and that he was heard receiving through Mr Stevenson.

This great effort was made to prevent the By-law being submitted to the people. No, they are too easily bought. Perhaps this is so. Mr. Stevenson would not have feared results if he did not know the party of whom he was talking. But it comes with bad grace from him to talk about buying the people of Emsbemore He who forked out his own money by the hundred dollars to stay votes, and who declared in meeting of committee that all was lost unless money could be raised, and $1,000 were raised and spent, we suppose, in buying votes, for that was the object for which it was contributed. And, then, what has the By-law to do with the last election? The people of the town may be bought up by the Dumbbell Property holders of Peterboro, are you so saleable that for a few dollars you would tax yourselves to your own disadvantage for twenty years? We don't believe a bit of it. The people of Peterboro know the value of a dollar bill too well to give it away unless they receive its full equivalent. But why deny the people the right to decide the matter? They pay the taxes, and should have a voice in the matter of putting taxes on themselves. If bribery then were resorted to, the Council could checkmate it by refusing to pass the By-law.

Mr. Burnham next accused members of the Council of having their interest in Lakefield in case of it in Peterboro, and asked how they could act according to the oath they had taken as councillors for Peterborough, while they had property in Lakefield. Mr. Burnham has property in North Monaghan; how can he take an oath to act for the interest of Peterboro? He was very anxious to clear himself of the charge of being in the pay of the Port Hope Railway Company, and yet he turns round and accuses every opponent almost of perjury. He must be a Simon Pure.

The view taken by Mr. Clinton was a reasonable one, viz., to let it be settled and be done of it. This was reasonable, and it would have done much to allay the feelings that must be engendered during months of strife. It lies over, however, to be a bone of contention for the new Council; but we trust that they will have more good sense the difficulty themselves let them send it to the people, their decision should be final.

The examination of Teachers, before the Senior Board of Public Instruction for the western portion of this County, was held on Thursday and Friday last. There were 31 applicants for certificates, but 5 were considered ineligible, being under 17 years of age. It was also found after the examination was over that two others were under that age, and in consequence these two have not obtained certificates, although qualified in the opinion of the Board if they had been of the required age. The following is the list of successful candidates:—

J. B. Reynolds, 2nd B.
John Armstrong, do.
J. J. Middleton, do.
Andrew Shearer, do.
Francis W. Trail, do.
William Darling, do.
C. Armstrong, 2nd C.
W. Kidd, do.
Miss C. Beeman, 2nd A.
Miss A. Costello, do.
Miss A. Bissett, 2nd B.
Miss M. Dexter, do.
Miss M. Britton, do.
Miss Sarah Donel, do.
Miss Margaret Forsyth, do.
Daniel Cummings, 3rd.
Thos. McDougal, do.
John Mullmoyl, do.
T. R. Rook do.
Miss Jemison, 3rd.
Miss J. Beckitt, do.

Miss Mary Edmunds and Miss Mary Bird would have received certificates, grade 2nd B, had they been of age. One was unable to obtain a certificate of any grade, and one was dismissed for using a text book during examination hours. The Board very reluctantly exercised this power, but felt that if they did not do so they would be wasting in their duty to the public, to the other candidates and teachers, and even to the individual who was found with the text book open before him.

COUNTERFEITS AT OTTAWA.

It appears that a gang of counterfeiters have been at work at the Seat of Government. We presume they thought they had as good a right to make a demonstration in that city as bogus statesmen, who counterfeit principles and believing that "birds of a feather might flock together," they took up their quarters in Ottawa But the bogus statesmen,

"Like the Turk, will bear no brother Near the Throne."

And the gang of interlopers were arrested yesterday by Detective O'Neil taken before the Police Magistrate, and committed for trial. They are all of one family, by the name of Tierney, residing in the Township of Nepean, about fifteen miles from Ottawa The machinery found on the premises was very perfect, and consisted of a lathe, English and American moulds, galvanic battery, and other tools. About $480 in actual counterfeit was found on the premises, as well as about $200 worth of counterfeit metal. Miss Turner attempted to pass the base coin in Ottawa which gave a clue leading to the arrest.—Hamilton Times.

CHANCE FOR INVESTMENT.—We learn that the President of the Cobourg, Peterboro and Marmora Railway and Mining Company is offering for sale Bonds of the Company to the extent of $100,000. The e Bonds are for $1,000 each, bearing 8 per cent per annum interest, and can be issued for any time not exceeding five years, from the 24th October last. These bonds are amply secured and no doubt offer a good opportunity to persons desiring a safe investment for their money. Offers for Bonds to be addressed to Thos. S. Blair, Esq., Pittsburg, Pa.—Cobourg Star.

PRESENTATION AND ADDRESS.

(From the Globe)

SIR,—John Carroll, Esq., Crown Land Agent, during a recent visit to the Bobcaygeon Road, was met at the Sandy Hook by a number of the settlers and presented with an address and a silver tea service as a testimonial of their respect and esteem for him.

Enclosed is a copy of the address together with Mr. Carroll's reply, which you will oblige by inserting in a early issue of the Globe.

I am, dear Sir,
Your obedient servant,
EDWARD S. HALL, T. C.

Apsley, Dec 5.

JOHN CARROLL, Esq., Crown Land Agent, Peterborough.

DEAR SIR,—We, the undersigned inhabitants of the Burleigh Road Settlement, wish to present you with a small token of the esteem in which you are held by us, and of our high appreciation of your valuable services rendered us during the past four years, by the constant desire you have always shown to promote the welfare of the settlement, and your readiness and promptness to render any assistance in your power to the settlers without reference to class or creed. The harmony and good will existing amongst us and the absence of litigation, is a great measure to the good advice which you have always given, and through your successful efforts, we have now the advantage of communicating good roads and the means of acquiring an education for children, having four schools in full operation, and at most points that is necessarily felt by the settlers. You have always given encouragement to the cause of religion by liberal subscriptions to places of public worship of whatever denomination, and in fact whether in your capacity as Crown Land Agent or Steve of this municipality you have always acted with one object in view viz.; the welfare and prosperity of the entire settlement.

We therefore beg your acceptance of this silver tea service, while will we trust please sently remind you of our affectionate regard.

REPLY

GENTLEMEN,—Although well aware of the feelings of cordial good will entertained towards me by a large number of the people of this settlement, yet I did not anticipate so agreeable a surprise on the occasion of my visit, as that of being presented by you with a flattering address accompanied by a beautiful and costly present.

You allude in kindly terms to my desire to promote the welfare of the settlement. In this I have merely endeavored to perform what I conceive to be my duty. And-est assured that it always affords me very great pleasure to be able to discharge this duty to your advantage. Difficulties and hardships have always been the common lot of the pioneers of settlements, and certainly the experiences of the first settlers on the Burleigh Road, forms no one pleasing exception to this rule. Five or six years ago the road and the neighboring township was a mackinaw, yet, some of those whom I see before me, as well as others not present, found their way here, carrying on their backs for a distance of forty miles, supplies of provisions, and by courageous perseverance succeeded in bring out homes for themselves and families, thereby laying the nucleus of what has now become a thriving settlement. As a lover of our common country, therefore, your prosperity it is to me a source of patriotic pleasure Your lively a proclamation of the advantages of education have rendered it a pleasure to me to second your efforts in that direction, and it is certainly a subject of congratulation that owing to our united and harmonious action, provision has been made for educating the children of the settlement.

It is believed to be in contemplation by the Government of Ontario to adopt a policy still more favorable to the interests of settlement, in which event there can be no doubt that these town-ships will rapidly fill up, and it is to be hoped, by a class of settlers equally orderly and industrious as those here at present, whose, by continuing to practice that golden rule of "do unto others as we would wish them to do unto us," and by always keeping in mind that to the needy and poor-does of our Heavenly Father of one kind, we may render them no settlement.

In conclusion I can assure you I appreciate the kind and generous feelings by which you are influenced in making it, and that it shall be my constant endeavour to merit the good opinions you have formed of me as expressed in your too flattering address.

RECLAIMING PEATBOG.—The Guelph Advertiser says a practice has been introduced amongst us that, we believe, is the boldest and most telling yet made for the attainment of union—the occasional exchanging of pulpits by the pastors of different congregations. Thus, last Sabbath morning, Rev. Mr. Ball (Knox's) gave a sermon in the Wesleyan chapel, and Rev. Mr. Griffin held service in Knox's. This will have a good effect, and should be carried out more frequently. It is a pity that so much envy and distrust should exist—that so many have yet to learn that the disciples of Christ may approach His throne with a little toleration and respect for each other—that the essentials, and not the form, of prayer is the touchstone of power; that the precise pathway matters not so long as it leads to His footstool.—Ayr Herald

Several amendments have been made to the Post Office Bill in its passage through the Senate. The most important is the striking out the clause which provided for the prepayment of postage on newspapers sent from offices of publication Although we had very grave doubts as to the advisability of imposing such a tax upon new-paper proprietors, and had reason to believe that it would prove injurious to newspaper enterprise, we were disposed to see the regulation fairly tried The Senate have taken a course in striking out the provision which will give great satisfaction to the fourth estate.—Citizen.

Intelligence w e received in Sydney, Australia, recently, that a savage tribe of cannibals, living in the interior of the principal of the fifties group of Islands, had dined of the body of the Rev. S. Baker togeter with six native teachers who had accompanied the missionary into the interior of the country The details of the affair are sickening. The bodies of the seven murdered Christians were divided between the different villages of the tribe, the principal chief reserving three for himself, and with all the fiendishness of the race, those people made a horrible repast from the dead. The news was brought to the white settlements by two native Christians who escaped the general slaughter and the intelligence was despatched to this place as quickly as possible

Within twenty four hours after its receipt the British man-of-war Brisk was en route for Fiji, for the purpose of punishing the murderers.

A movement is on foot in the United States for the repeal of the cotton tax, and the newspapers publish a letter from Mr. Spaulding, of Erie, in which he says:—"I believe the cloth tax ought to be and will be repealed. When it was levied I thought that the high price of cotton was then commanding would render the tax less burdensome than it has since proved: But as we do not tax other agricultural products, and as cotton is no vain but as an equalizer of exchanges, and is an article of such prime necessity to so many millions and as its culture in our country could be encouraged I am decidedly in favor of abolishing the present direct tax on it; and the depressed condition of the staple will, I think, incline Congress to repeal it early in the session."

SETTLEMENT OF THE ESTATE OF THE LATE ABRAHAM LINCOLN.—Hon. David Davidson, administrator of the estate of the late President Lincoln, made a final settlement of the estate with the Hon. William Prescott, Judge of the County Court of Sangamon County on Wednesday last. After paying all debts and expenses, there remains to be divided among the heirs the sum of $110,29: 80 Of this amount Mrs. Lincoln receive s $34,766 20, Robert T. Lincoln and Thomas Lincoln each the same amount. It is remarkable fact that the total amount of Mr. Lincoln's indebtedness at the time of his death, as per schedule filed in the County Clerk's office, was only $83.31. Since the death of the President, Mrs. Lincoln has had $7,302 18, and Thomas Lincoln $1,50:.54. We learn that Judge Davis, who was a warm personal friend of the lamented President, made no charge for his services in the settlement of the estate.—Springfield (Ill.) Journal Nov. 15.

A GENEROUS OFFER.

Ed Robinson, the Boston boy who some time ago gave another of his boy-like performances in the American Congress, has written the United States Congressional Globe enough for the ignorant nonsensicalities of double British blood that the United States is ready to purchase Ireland at a fair price, and if Queen Victoria will not make the sale, then the United States will forcibly right and annex the Emerald Isle to the Great Western Republic. He should have further divorced that half a dozen monitors should be sent to sow Jordan across the ocean and fish it to the southern of America. This task would be just about as easy as it would be for the American to conquer Ireland. Mr. Robinson further thinks he can see his way clear to impeach the United States Consul at Dublin because that gentleman had not thought proper to interfere in the late Fenian trials. He said that this was a question of far greater importance than any other which was before Congress, and that the Presidential impeachment and the government of the south were matters of trifling consideration compared with it.

Robinson of Boston is a decided acquisition to the House of representatives, among all the loud fellows who have gone before him and moved the House to laughter by their absurdities, he stands pre-eminent.

The sensation that he has been rather dull so far as the House of Representatives is concerned and if it has not been for Robinson the members would have been consumed with ennui.—Spectator.

RARE INSTANCE OF DEVOTED FILIAL LOVE.—The four motherless Misses Morgan, who were so cruelly deprived by the death, accidental or the result, near Cincinnati on Thursday morning last, were ladies of education, refinement, grace and respectability. And, as we have already stated, daughters of the late Mr. Benjamin Morgan, formerly of Buffalo at Prince and Morgan, as coevals to Vanderbilt, and afterwards President of the Bank of Lo isiana, at New Orleans, and interested in large sugar estates. At the time Messrs. Price and Morgan dissolved partnership they each possessed a handsome fortune, and they mutually agreed that in case of [illegible] misfortune or loss befalling either, of them, the other, if it be even sixpence, was to share his property with the unfortunate one. Many years afterward, Mr Chandler Price failed in Philadelphia, and Mr Benjamin Morgan transferred to him a fine row of buildings on Pennsylvania street, New Orleans. Some years after, and about the time of Mr. Morgan's death, the latter been e much embarrassed by endorsements of his speculations. Mr Price, having, in the meantime, accumulated another fortune, after the death of his old partner recovered the same valuable property on Pennsylvania street to Mr. Morgan's children This is one of the rare instances in this life of filial, honorable and unyielding friendship, and quite as extraordinary as that all four of the daughters should be killed at one fell swoop, a thousand miles from home. —Louisville Courier.

THE FULL DRESS SCANDAL.—The Editor of the Brockville Recorder, writing from Ottawa on the opening of the House, hits off the full-dress humbug thusly:—

"The benches encircling the floor of the chamber were attired to ladies in full dress, and many of them appeared in the most gaudy costume. Had any unwearied be been within sight, there must have been a storm from their little lungs, as the sight of one of the beauty and fashion would have been a temptation for their slender philosophy, but some of the youthful class alluded to were present, as quietness and order prevailed, and the "common herd" contented themselves by going at the slightly exposed busts of the female "statuary." It may be that we are such creatures to exclude all who are not in "full dress" from the floor of the House, but we do not think the rule suited to Canada In the first place it is pandering to the aristocratic feeling of "mashed ones," and in the second place the last cold winter weather of the county is rather cold for ladies to sit in full dress. Another might add a third reason—the idea of the great mass of the people are too simple and democratic for such exhibitions to cause anything but a feeling of pity and a commiseration for all who indulge in the, to them, foolish practice."

The New Act of Assignments of Policies.—Policies of assurance have become to a large extent valuable, so long a common and easily [illegible] But shall, [illegible] provide that no one shall their policies free me from the hands of a bona fide assignee In order to make the assignment of a policy effectual under this Act, so that the assignee shall have power to sue upon it, a notice in writing of the date and purport of the assignment must be given to the company at one of its principal places of business, which are for this purpose to be specified on the policy. The assignment must be by endorsement in the policy or otherwise, and a short form of assignment is given in the schedule to the Act. When notice of the assignment of a policy is given, the company is required to acknowledge it, and claims upon the policy are to have priority in order of date of notice. This Act, which is already in operation, will be found of great service in a very large class of legal possessions and will add to the value of policies of assurance as security.—Solicitors' Journal.

The Journal des Debats thus expresses itself upon Italian affairs:—"The partisans of Italy cannot say that they have any foresight ought to be profoundly alarmed by the result of the victory which they celebrate with so much savage triumph. Never at at any period of its history has the political throne of the Papacy been so irretrievably condemned. That the power of the Vicar of Jesus Christ, of the peace and charity, should be only a temporal sub-Prefect of the civil fisc of the Minister of the Gods of mere for wars between different nations, and for cruel and domestic discord, and should be able to be sustained only at the price of an incessant effusion of blood, is a contrast which at once upsets every judgment and revolts every conscience."

FATAL SHOOTING CASE AT SARNIA.—On Sunday afternoon, about four o'clock, a melancholy case of death to the accidental discharge of a pistol, took place at Sarnia. A man named Finch, a county constable, was endeavoring in the street to arrest a man named Carrol, who resisted the capture. A struggle ensued when Finch drew his revolver for the purpose of intimidating Carroll While this scene was going on, a man named Holbrook came up and stood a witness of the struggle, who accidentally Finch's revolver went off, and Holbrook was seen to fall Blood instantly covered his face and head, and on the poor fellow been lifted it was discovered that the ball had entered the cheek and passed out at the back of the head. Of course death was instantaneous. Constable Finch was lodged in jail to await the inquest which was to be held on Monday The deceased who worked at Russell's brewery, had only been married old months.

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers in curing coughs, colds, and all Bronchial affections, and relieving the afflicted, has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous cures are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them has steadily increased for the twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these Wafers. When taken in season the effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

The Rev J. C. Fletcher gave us last evening, a brilliant lecture on the religion, customs and people of Brazil. Seldom have we relished anything more than the picture he had laid before his audience of that exuberant garden of the tropic laden with its strange variety of fruits and flowers, teeming with material harvest for the hand of man. Surely that country must be the garden of the world, and if its people had the enterprise which moved this Yankee nation, imagination could not set a bound to the results they would produce there. As relevant to the comparison the Reverend gentleman stated that the best Remedies employed there for the diseases to which they are subject, are invented and supplied to them by our own well known countryman, Dr J. C. Ayer of Lowell, Mass., and, that not the people only but the priesthood and the court of the Emperor desire, have contract recourse in sickness to the Remedies of this widely celebrated American Chemist.—(Lodger, Boston.

CANADIAN INDUSTRIOUS.—The progress to-day of Canada is between 30 and 40 million dollars, a year added. Ride cars certainly, but also dogs not only this without having progressing to [illegible] Hudson's Canal, the Grand Trunk Railway and [illegible] upon Bell telephone, a thousand miles from one.—Louisville Courier.

SEWING MACHINES!

GROUT'S

New Twisted Elastic Three Corded Stitch

SEWING MACHINE.

THE undersigned has received the agency for the sale of Messrs. Grout & Co's $10 Family Sewing Machine, which took the first prize and diploma at the last Provincial Fair held at Kingston, against all other Machines exhibited.

This Machine does all kinds of work, from the thickest to the thinest; works on Leather, Beaver and Woollen Cloth, Cotton, Linen and Muslin, using Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, does it from the spools without the trouble of rewinding. It will hem, fell, stitch, tuck, bind, braid, quilt, seam, gather, sew, or ruffle, or embroider, and do ornamental stitching in the most perfect manner.

The twisted stitch and the means of making it is peculiar, as it is produced by a rotating looper of peculiar construction, with a spear at each side, and is so constructed that it is impossible to make a stitch, broken being the most simple operation in the world.

All will see the great advantage of the twist given the thread, as each thread has a twist given it while forming the stitch, making it a three cord stitch, having greater strength than any other stitch, at the same time giving it great beauty.

Prices of Grout & Co's Sewing Machines complete, with hemmer, bronder, extra needles, screw driver, thread, book of instructions to enable any one to operate it at once, $15; Machines plated and pearled from $18 to $25; table and treadles, $6; extra needles, 75 c per dozen; full supply of oil, silk thread, &c., for sale.

ALSO,

Raymond's $12 Sewing Machines

kept on hand. Needles for both Machines kept for sale.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Raccoon Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the World, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Racoon, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada skins more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad bath in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had tried everything I could hear of without effect, till I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure.

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 11, 1866.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Families, Farms, Steamboats or Gallic or Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Adams, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating here winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY.

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment produces more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, Every-one and Painter, should always have it on hand. Quack and cure is certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of O. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

"Jos' so!"—"Exactly so"—Solon Shingle said: they were there "every time." If he felt "seedy" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, one week, himself or wife usually experienced, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins once or twice and free.

For persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life."

REV. W. H. WAGGNER, Madrid, N. Y."

"I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. The Plantation Elixir, have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"I had lost all appetite—was so weak and emaciated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES MEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to counterfeit our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Helmstreet's Indestructible Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes 50 cents and $1 by all dealers.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance so observable upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the consumable lymph or that portion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and in its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural thickness, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is increased, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving a sleek and shining appearance.

CABELLISHNESS.

Many persons neglect their horses and condition until it is too late, when a trifling expense and no trouble to them would have saved if attended to in time. Those who may have occasion to use an article of this kind we would confidently recommend Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" it is without doubt the best medicine in use, as thousands who have used it will testify.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

[illegible] Lowell, Mass., August 20th, 1867.

Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. I was troubled for years with a humor in my blood, which would break out in blotches over my face and body, and at times my limbs would swell to a great size. I was also afflicted with a cough, which I had had for years. I have taken many bottles of your Sarsaparilla, and am now entirely free from all complaints. The blotches have left my face, my limbs have resumed their natural size, and my cough has entirely ceased. I am now in the enjoyment of perfect health, and I attribute it entirely to the use of your Sarsaparilla. Yours, with respect,

[illegible]

Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.

Dear Sir: I have been afflicted with a painful chronic complaint for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and resisted for me the influence of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me to two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I can better than believe I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. FRIAM.

John V. Gerlach, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from an other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Kopp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and say what you made your words by. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to restore me once more to health. I feel young again. The past that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Scirrhous Cancer Tumors, Enlargements, Ulcerations, Caries and Exfoliations of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where some of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of these may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Pile, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and the consequence is, that whatever is wrong is made right. Such a remedy has long been required by the necessities of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidences of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary diseases, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among the few who have not some personal experience of its efficacy—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the wonderful healthy of these disorders, and as they know, too, the efficacy of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & Co., Lowell, Mass.

[illegible] Wheeler, Wheelabrator, Female Physician.

Dr. J. R. R. Chandler, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the treatment of many of the diseases of which I have had occasion to treat. Its tonic properties, combined with its alterative virtues, render it a most valuable remedy in the cure of chronic diseases of the blood, and I have frequently found it necessary to prescribe it in the practice of my profession."

Edward S. Hanover, of Newberry, Ala., writes: "A dangerous ulcerous tumor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physicians had nothing but extirpation—this could relieve—but he admitted the total of your Sarsaparilla on the last resort before resorting, and it proved efficacious. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptoms of the disease remained."

Poetry.

SONG FOR THINKERS.

Take the Spade of Perseverance,
Dig the field of Progress wide;
Every rotten root of Sorrow
Hurry out and cast aside;
Every stubborn weed of Error,
Every seed that hurts the soil;
Turns whose very growth is terror—
Dig them out, whatever the toil!

Give the steam of Education
Broader channel, bolder force;
Hurl the stones of Ferocity on
Rust, wherever they block its course;
Seek for strength in self-assertion;
Work and still have faith to win;
Clear the crooked road to fortune;
Make the road to honor straight.

Men are agents for the Future!
As they work, so ages will
Either harvest of advancement,
Or the produce of their toil!
Follow out true Spiritual fashion,
Widen education's plan;
From the Majesty of Nature
Teach the majesty of Man!

Take the Spade of Perseverance,
Dig the field of Progress wide,
Every bar to true instruction
Carry out and cast aside;
Feed the Plant whose fruit is wisdom;
Cleanse from error the common sod;
So that from the Throne of Heaven
It may bear the glance of God.

Mrs. Houghton's Cat or Who was the Burglar.

Mr. Jones was on his way home from a small party, at a late hour in the evening. It was a very dark night—darkness solid enough to cut, as somebody has expressed it. Under the circumstances it was perhaps not strange that Mr. Jones found considerable difficulty in finding the way home, familiar as it was.

At length with a feeling of relief, he turned into the street on which he lived.—The fact was that he mistook the street, and urged into one running parallel to it.

'Now, where is my house?' thought Jones.

It was rather hard to tell. He tried with his eyes to peer through the darkness, but not very successfully. At last he discerned an outline that looked like the front of No. 62, which he occupied.

'Yes' said he confidently, and with a feeling of decided relief, 'that's it.'

But he was mistaken.

It was the residence of Mr. Houghton, dry goods merchant.

But how should Jones know? He couldn't read the name on the door-plate.—However he felt so confident he was right that he probably wouldn't have done so if he could.

He took out his latch key, and inserted it in the proper place.

By a very curious coincidence and unfortunately for Jones, as it proved, his latch-key fitted Mr. Houghton's door.—The door flew open, as if its lawful proprietor, and Jones, afraid unconscious that he was committing a grave offence in the eye of the law stepped tranquilly inside.

It was about twelve o'clock. Every soul was in bed and asleep. I ought to except Mrs. Houghton, who had been kept awake by a severe toothache.

Jones groped his way along until he came to the hat stand, which happened to occupy a position similar to that in his own hall, and quietly took off his coat and hung it up. He hat ditto. He then thought he would make his way out into the dining-room opening out of the hall at the end, and light the gas.

'I already think Mrs. Jones might have kept the hall-burner lighted,' he said to himself. 'She knew I was going to stay out late. Confound it.'

The last ejaculation was elicited by a stumble over an article of furniture in the dining-room which he had already entered Jones fell over it with considerable violence producing a trifling pain in that bone sometimes denominated the crazy bone.

'It's a regular man-trap,' picking himself up somewhat irritably.

'What is it I have stumbled over?'

He had about thinking it might be a chair, but his astonishment may be conceived when he discovered by his sense of feeling, the offending article was a cradle.

'A cradle in my house!' he exclaimed. 'What can it mean?'

Mr. Jones' youngest child was ten years old, so that he had some ground for his surprise.

'A cradle!' he repeated. 'Good Heavens! Has Mrs. Jones been entertaining babies during my absence! Even if she has, she might have put away the cradle so that I needn't break my shins over it.'

He made a stride forward—an unfortunate step it proved. The table was tool for breakfast—the custom in that household but not in that of Mr Jones. Coming into a violent collision with it, the table was thrown over, and he was a tremendous smashing of crockery, making a hideous racket.

'Good gracious!' thought Jones, 'what on earth induced Mrs. Jones to set the table over night on the particular occasion. She never has done so before. I suppose I have destroyed ten or fifteen dollar's worth of crockery. It is Mrs. Jones' fault, I shall deduct it out of her pin money.

Meanwhile, in the chamber above, Mrs. Houghton had striven in vain to find relief from her toothache. She tried cloves, she tried toothache drops, and various other remedies, but all to no purpose. The disagreeable pain would not be exorcised. She envied Mr. Houghton, who lay in tranquil slumber unbreaking her repose.

All at once she thought she heard the outer door open. Still she could hardly believe it. It must be her imagination, she thought, however, she would listen again.

No, she was not mistaken. She certainly did hear a step in the hall.

Mrs. Houghton began to be frightened.

'Could it be burglars!'

She waited.

Next came the sound of Jones stumbling over the cradle.

'It must be somebody,' thought Mrs. Houghton, nervously. 'Shall I wake Mr. Houghton? If I do, and he goes down and if burglars, they will very likely shoot him. I'll wait a minute.'

She did wait a minute.

Then came the fearful crash of crockery, a sound which Mrs. Houghton heard with a degree of terror which quite cured the toothache. She felt she could no longer stand it alone, so she gave her husband a vigorous shake.

'What's wanted?' demanded he drowsily, more than half asleep.

'Wake up!'

'Is it morning?'

'No, but you must wake up at once!'

'What for? What's the matter?'

'There's matter enough!' cried Mrs. Houghton, in an energetic whisper. 'There's a burglar in the house!'

'A what!'

'A burglar! I heard him come in. He is making a tremendous noise below, I think they may be two or three of them.'

'What's to be done?' said Houghton, now fairly awake.

'They'll carry off my silver. I forget to bring it up to-night.'

'I've got a pistol,' said Mr. Houghton, 'and I believe it is loaded.'

'Then you had better go down stairs and see it,' said his wife, her mind fly about the silver getting the better of her anxiety for her husband's safety.

There was another crash, and a louder exclamation from Jones as he stepped on a dish which had thus far lay undisjured and demolished it.

'He's swearing,' said Mr. Houghton. 'Oh do go down quick, before he gets at the silver.'

Mr. Houghton didn't seem to be much in a hurry. In fact he was rather awe-struck by nature, and didn't at all relish a conflict with a burglar However, he put on his pants in a leisurely manner, greatly to Mrs. Houghton's deterrence.

'Oh do be quick,' she said.

'I suppose you want him to shoot me,' he muttered. 'Why don't you go down yourself?'

'That's a pretty question for a man to ask his wife. There isn't any danger. He's in the dark, and you can open the door at the foot of the stairs and fire.'

'But perhaps he's got a lantern.'

'O, do go down Mr. Houghton, who did not relish this imputation, more especially as he had a decided conviction that it was over the truth.

'Here's your pistol.'

Mr. Houghton took the pistol with no great alacrity, and opened the door, began to descend the stairs. He heard sounds as of some one groping about, and that gave him courage. It seemed to indicate that the burglar had no light.

'I hope he won't catch hold of me,' thought he, and his blood ran cold at the thought. 'He is probably some desperate ruffian.'

He slipped quietly to the foot of the stairs, pulled the trigger, and fired.

There was a piercing scream such as it was hard to think could proceed from any human being's lungs.

Mr. Houghton, his soul stricken with fear, bounded up stairs, four steps at a bound

Jones heard the report, and he too was astonished.

'Who has got into the house?' he thought. 'Somebody has fired a pistol at me. Who screamed, I wonder?'

Just then he stumbled across a card of matches, and struck one against the wall The light revealed to him the startling information that he was in the wrong house.

'Good gracious!' he exclaimed, the light flashing on him, 'I've been fired at as a burglar. I must get out of this.'

He lost no time in making his way to the front door and hurried down the steps fearing lest an alarm might be raised. He soon reached his own house, and entered, saying nothing of his adventure.

The Houghton's did not sleep much. Mr. Houghton was convinced that he had shot a burglar, and that he was probably stretched out on the dining room. But he didn't like to go down and look at him.

'Better wait till morning,' he said he may still be alive, and might shoot me.'

He bolted the chamber door, but it is need not to say that neither he nor his wife slept much that night.

With the first glimmering of dawn everything below being quiet, his courage returned, and supported by Mrs. Houghton, he descended to the dining room.

He opened the door nervously, but instead of seeing the dead burglar, only saw an overturned table demolished crockery, and on a chair, cold in death, the body of Mrs. Houghton's favorite cat, who had received the bullet intended for the midnight marauder.

'Could it be possible that Tom upset the table?' ejaculated Mrs. Houghton.

'I think it must be,' said her husband bewildered.

'And you shot him!'

'You told me to.'

'I don't understand it, I distinctly heard somebody swear.'

'Probably it was the cat,' said Mr. Houghton sarcastically.

'Mrs. Houghton was not sure. It seemed as if puss were the only burglar, yet she had never heard that cats were in the habit of swearing. To the day that night' adventure is a mystery to the bewildered pair. Of course Mr. Jones never revealed his complicity, and the cat still bears the blame of the nocturnal uproar, and the destruction of crockery.

Winona, Minnesota, boasts that the greatest lumber sawing feat on record has been performed there. A single mill has sawed over 270,000 feet of timber in twelve hours, with four gangs, one circular, and one upright saw.

Somebody who writes more truthfully than poetically says:—An angel without money in it thought as much of seven days as a devil with a pile of greenbacks.

Obey without Hesitation.

It is the great thing of life to learn, always without hesitation, to obey the word of command, whether from friends, from our own sense, or the Bible, wherever they to the of conscience. Sometimes our life depends upon obedience.

A boatswain whose business it was to attend to the two ends near the station, on an important railroad line, once heard the shriek of an engineer strain of the same thundering sleep. He hurried to the broken fellow, whom he saw up on the track running towards him! It was but a little boy, about four years of age, exactly between the rails over which the terrible train was coming! He had only a moment for consideration. The train could not be stopped soon enough by the engineer, even if he saw the child. If he rushed to save his child the whole train would run off the track and God only knew how many lives might be lost. It was his duty to alter the brakes. There was but one thing to be done.

"Lie right down, my son!" he shouted at the top of his voice. He unlocked his bar; he changed the track for the train, and hurled upon the earth almost unconscious, as with an awful roar the immense engine with its long train swept by.

What if that little boy had hesitated to obey? What if he continued to run toward his father? What if he had first asked the question, why he should do so?

But it was not so. Down went the little fellow, at the word of command, flat upon his face. Down upon his face remained the little boy, until, when the train was passed, the father hurried to him as rapidly as his fainting limbs would permit, and raised him up unharmed.

How beautiful and noble is obedience to duty in the hour of danger! We never weary of reading Mrs. Hemans touching poems upon "Casabianca," or of admiring the noble boy, standing at his post upon the burning ship where his father had stationed him, waiting for the order to retire, from the lips that were then silent in death, although he knew it not.

There was a cry of fire near a large school-house in the city. The children in the school were very much affrighted; and in spite of the efforts of their teachers, began to rush to the door and stairs, thus pushing their limbs and lives.

But there was one little girl who remained quietly in her seat. She looked very pale and troubled, and the tear stood in her eyes. Very much struck by her appearance, and by her remaining at her desk, her teacher asked her why she did not do as the other girls did. "My father is a fireman," she said, "and he told me whenever there was a cry of fire, while I was in school, to remain quiet in my seat; for that was the safest way. I was dreadfully frighted, but I knew that my father had told me what was best so I sat still, when they ran to the doors."

Certainly it is always best to obey those that are older and wiser than ourselves; and especially to obey promptly, cheerfully, and faithfully every command that God has written in his Word. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path."—Zion's Herald.

WHY DON'T HE DO IT.

When the farmer knows that the winter season is the time to prepare bar-posts and repair all kinds of farming tools—Why don't he do it?

When a farmer knows that waggons and sleighs and other carriages, will last a great deal longer when properly housed—Why don't he do it?

When a farmer knows that cows will do better on a less quantity of feed if properly housed through the winter—Why don't he do it?

When a farmer sees the boards dropping from his stable, barns, and outbuildings, and knows that it would take but a few minutes to nail them on again—Why don't he do it?

When a farmer knows that a good part of his farm would be much improved by ploughing it in narrow lands—thus giving the water a chance to drain off—Why don't he do it?

When a farmer knows that most of his plow-land would be greatly improved by sowing clover—Why don't he do it?—Genesee Farmer.

ADVERTISING.—Forney's Press, one of the shrewdest and ablest newspapers, has the following sensible idea on advertising:—"We have for many years studied the art of advertising, and still it remains to us a marvel that there is not one hundred times more of it. We never yet knew a man to advertise his wares liberally and steadily, that it did not pay. Yet there are thousands of manufacturers and tens of thousands of men having articles which they declare ought to be in every household in the country,' who advertise as gingerly and cleverly as though they had at heart no faith in it at all. How can they expect to get their goods everywhere, unless some knowledge of the articles gets into the family first, through the family paper? If we waited till people learned from their neighbours, we might wait for years before the most wonderful and useful invention became known.'

It is stated that a youth of thirteen, named Franklin, has invented a machine which will reduce the quantity of coal required to work a steam engine one-half.—The machine was tried in London before a number of scientific and practical men, and found to be a grand success.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1867.

GREETING.

Before another issue, Christmas Day with all its merry cheer and hallowed associations will have come and gone. Many friends that have not met perhaps during the past year will meet on that day to assist in making the old homestead more cheerful, and reawaken the fond remembrances, perhaps, of days that were spent together and to bring to mind the reminiscences of youthful frolic and merriment. Some, it may be, will meet to spend a day together and to talk of the home away in the far east among Scotia's heath clad hills, Erin's emerald vales, or the beautiful vales of old England. An abundant return for the farmer's labor will enable the Canadian farmer to enjoy himself as well as he could do in any country; and we hope that while many may look back to the land whence they sprung with pleasure, that all will be ready to admit that the Dominion of Canada is as fine a country as any from which they came, and only requires industry and temperance among the inhabitants, and wisdom and retrenchment in the governors and legislators to make it the finest country under the sun. Hoping that its affairs may be so directed, and nothing doubting but the people of the New Dominion will do their share to make our homes happy, we wish the people of the Dominion, but especially our readers, all the compliments of the season—"A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

FENIANISM.

According to late telegraph reports, the spirit of Fenianism is as infernal as ever, and is as inclined to destruction of property and life. Monday's Cable news informs us that on the 13th instant, a daring attempt was made to release a Fenian, one Col. Burke, who was imprisoned in London, England. Powder was exploded under the wall; the whole wall was blown into the air, the adjoining buildings were destroyed, many persons injured, and it is feared some lives lost, another despatch says: twenty houses were almost entirely demolished, forty persons were wounded, and four have already died. A house opposite to where the breach was made in the wall, has been suspected for some time as a Fenian resort. The street highway was torn up by the explosion, and the jail wall thrown down so as to reveal the interior to view. There is considerable alarm too, as no one knows what scene of treachery and blood may follow.

There were arrangements made for funeral processions in Ireland, in reference to those Fenians who have been executed in England. The Government is taking active steps to prevent them, and stringent measures are about to be adopted. On the 17th instant a terrible explosion took place at Newcastle on Tyne. The authorities had received information of some movements, the Sheriff and several police proceeded to the spot, dissected oil packed, and gave chase, an explosion took place while the men were examining it, several of the policemen were instantly killed, and few escaped injury. The Sheriff and Town Surveyor are seriously injured.

These are some of the fruits of the infernal association, but they will arouse the authorities to take decisive and severe steps against it, which they find guilty of aiding, abetting or fostering the Fenian movement, and the sooner they do it the better.

MUNICIPAL.

The Nomination for Mayor, Reeves, Deputy Reeves and Councillors will have taken place before another issue. On Monday, according to law, the candidates will be proposed. As he stands, changes are proposed, but with what chances of obtaining them we cannot divulge. Mr. Scott still be elected by a new man stand opp se him; several we hear of now wishing to do so. In the East ward it appears that Mr. Kennedy is the retiring councillor instead of Mr. Clarke, as was generally believed. It appears that some mistake was made at the balloting, this was not detected till next day; notice was given of it to the parties concerned, but it was allowed to pass off. It now. The clerk, however, contrary to the minutes of the first meeting, now issue notice to the people to meet and name a candidate in Mr. Kennedy's place, for the ensuing year. Mr. Kennedy, however, still claims his seat for the three years, the easiest way to solve the difficulty is for Mr. Kennedy to be a candidate and get re-elected.

In Asphodel, there will be very little change, if the old councillors accept the office again.

In Otonabee, the old Reeve, it is said, will be a candidate, without opposition; but there will be changes in the council. Mr. Nelson, we are informed does not seek re-election. The other members intend trying their chances again; in addition, Mr Dawson Kennedy is out, and Mr. Thos. Blezard. Mr. John Millar and Mr. Matchett is spoken of.

In Asphodel, Mr. W. E Roxburgh will oppose Mr. Coughlin, for Reeve, and Mr. J. A. Buck and Mr. John Breckenridge are candidates for Deputy Reeve; other changes are also spoken of.

Belmont will send Mr. Pearce no doubt. He is their man.

Dummer will send Mr. Choat again.

We have not heard from the other Township yet, but it is not likely that there will be any great change in any of them beyond a new man or perhaps two.

Grammar School Intelligence.

Mr. Dixon who has just resigned the Grammar School at Colborne, of which he has been Principal for about 12 or 13 years, to take charge of the Peterborough Grammar School, commences his labors immediately after the holidays. He is in town at present, and attends the present examinations. We feel confident that we can recommend the Peterborough Grammar School Under Mr. Dixon's care, to all who wish to select a good school to which to send their children or to attend themselves. To those desirous of preparing for teaching, the Peterborough Grammar School will afford ever facility. The new Principal is a warm friend to Teachers, and we feel certain, will render all possible aid to those who attend for the purpose of preparing for teaching.

Norwood Grammar School—Mr. Wright, who has had charge of this School for some time, has resigned his situation, and is going to St. Mary's, where a larger school and a larger salary offers a wider field for usefulness. Mr. Thom, (brother to the Rev. Mr. Thom, of Lakefield), will take charge of the Norwood Grammar School after the holidays, Mr. Thom is highly spoken of as a Teacher, on the occasion of Mr. Wright's resignation, the matter was referred to a committee, who reported as below. The Board also passed a resolution that Mr. Wright's salary for 1867 should be $800. He takes with him the best wishes of the people of Norwood.

Norwood Board of School Trustees.

The following Resolutions were adopted at a meeting of the joint Board of Grammar and Common School Trustees, held in the school room, Norwood, on Friday, December 15th, 1867, in reply to Mr. Wright's resignation of the head Mastership.

Resolved—That this Board learns with extreme regret that it is the intention of the esteemed Principal of our Grammar and Common School (Mr. Wright,) to remove from our midst at the termination of his engagement, to another and more extended field of labor.

Resolved—That this Board cannot part with Mr. Wright, without testifying to the almost unexampled success which has attended his labors in our school, during the three years he has been among us. To his aptitude for imparting instruction, his tact for classifying and governing children, his pre-eminent and unremitting efforts to further to every way the interests of the School both at home and abroad, and to the courtesy and dignity which has ever characterized all his dealings with this Board.

Resolved—That this Board while parting with Mr. Wright with great sorrow, cannot but congratulate him upon attaining to the important and responsible position, which he now goes to assume, that we wish him well and family well in all the circumstances of life through which they may be called to pass, and trust that long years may yet be vouchsafed him, in which to prosecute the arduous and responsible duties which he has so successfully prosecuted in our midst.

NORWOOD BOARD—EXAMINATION OF TEACHERS.

On the evening of Thursday, Dr. Foel, of Norwood, delivered a very instructive and interesting Lecture, in the school room, to a very full house,—Subject:—Chemistry. After which a vote of thanks was unanimously and cordially given to the Doctor for his excellent lecture. The Doctor after returning thanks, informed those present, that the lecture was the first of a series of Lectures intended to be given during the winter.

LITERARY CLUB.—The following subject will be discussed this evening:—"Should the right of Suffrage be extended to women?" Leaders: Messrs. Dunnet and J. A. Hall. Members only admitted.

SCHOOL EXAMINATION.

The examination of the school taught by Miss Marm Dowling, in Otonabee, was held on Tuesday. The trustees and several parents and visitors were present. The child ren acquitted themselves very well and showed that they had been carefully taught by Miss Dowling. Some very neat copy work and also worsted work done by the girls was shown and was much praised by all. At the close of the examination the pupils presented a very nice Bible and Pen Case to Miss Dowling, for which she thanked them, remarking that she did not expect any such thing and consequently could do no more than return thanks for their remembrance of her, and said she would retain them as a memento of her happy labors among them.

Two of the children, Miss E. Devell and Miss Bennett, presented a very neatly wrought watch pocket and a book marker to the Local Superintendent who was present during the examination.

Miss Dowling, we believe, goes to the Auburn School after the holidays.

CONCERT BY THE BAND.—The first quarterly concert by the Band, will be given on Friday evening, the 27th instant, in the Victoria Hall. The object is, we believe, to aid the officers of the Volunteers in defraying the expenses necessary in keeping up the Band. It will be easily understood that the officers can not afford to bear the whole expense of salary, &c., and several of the citizens felt this from the beginning and subscribed to aid them. The members of the Band in turn volunteered to give quarterly concerts, to which subscribers are to be admitted free. Many of our citizens, have not had an opportunity of subscribing, and it is proposed therefore to sell tickets to them, so that they also may aid the volunteers in keeping up the Band. We have no doubt but that there will be a full house. The whole will be under the auspices of the officers and patrons of the Band.

BIBLE CHRISTIAN SABBATH SCHOOL.—The anniversary meeting of the above school will be held to-morrow evening, 20th inst., in the vestry of the Bible Christian Church, at half-past 6 o'clock. After the Tea, Mr. Johnston, agent of the Bible Society, and other ministers, will deliver addresses. These Sabbath School anniversaries are looked forward to with pleasure; they afford a pleasant way of spending an evening and an easy way of aiding the teachers in their good work. Let all go to them.

CHRISTMAS DAY AT SPRINGVILLE.—The Springville Presbyterian Church will have their annual Soiree on Christmas Day in the new drill shed. This will afford a fine opportunity for a nice sleigh ride. The Tea will be served at 4 o'clock. Alex. McKenzie, M. P., for Lambton; Rev. Mr. Thom, Lakefield; John Moffat, the great temperance lecturer, and Mr Ogilvie, of Millbrook, will deliver addresses on the occasion. They will have a pleasant time.

NEW YEAR'S DAY IN NORTH MONAGHAN.—The North Monaghan Intellectual Improvement Society will give a Conversazione on New Year's day in the Town Hall. Tea at 4 to 6 o'clock, and then will follow addresses, readings and recitations. And a drive there and back again—no small inducement—and a number will avail themselves of the opportunity.

ASHBURNHAM SABBATH SCHOOL.—The friends of the Ashburnham Sabbath School intend having an anniversary tea, on Monday evening, in the Ashburnham Town Hall, in aid of getting a library for the school. We hope that the people of the village and other friends of Sabbath Schools will render what aid they can to make the anniversary successful. Tea at half past six o'clock, p. m.

THE WESLEYAN SABBATH SCHOOL ANNIVERSARY will take place on Monday evening, in the Sabbath School Room. Tea at seven o'clock. Addresses, recitations, and singing will follow. On Sunday the Anniversary Services will be held in the Wesleyan Church, at 10 o'clock and half past six.—The Rev. Mr. McDonnell will address the children at 2 o'clock.

R. S. Corrigan, lately convicted of horse stealing and obtaining money under false pretences, after a vain effort to escape on Monday evening, was removed to Kingston, on Sunday evening, we hope to learn to be a better man.

Mexico has declared war against the neighboring Republic of Guatemala. Whatever the result of the contest may be war is probably regarded as a fortunate event by Juarez and the Mexican leaders. War either civil or foreign is necessary to Mexico, and of the two the government probably prefer the latter. Mexico is larger and more populous than Guatemala, but the people of the latter country are united, while the Mexicans of course are not. The Guatemalans are not as a nation much to boast of, but they are as quiet such a miserable set as are the people of Mexico.—Spectator.

It may surprise many to learn, what is nevertheless a fact, that fully one-third of the whole amount of sugar consumed in the world is manufactured from beets; and not only so but immense quantities of raw beet-sugar are imported into England by their refineries, competing very successfully with the cane sugar from their own colonies.

A terrible railway accident occurred on the Vermont Central Railroad on Wednesday last near a place called Northfield. It appears that a bridge was burned down on Sunday last, and by some unaccountable carelessness a train with some 50 or 100 workmen on board was backed on to the edge of the abutment and into the river below. Twenty persons were killed on the spot and thirty-four injured, some of whom it is feared have received what will prove to be fatal wounds.

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers in curing coughs, colds, and all Bronchial affections, and cheering the afflicted, has passed into a proverb. In the United States where these marvellous wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry: the demand for them has steadily increased for the twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these Wafers. When taken in season the effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

A NEW AND GRAND EPOCH IN MEDICINE!—Dr Maggiel is the founder of a new Medical System! The quaint curiosities, whose vast internal doses enfeeble the stomach and paralyze the bowels, must give precedence to the man who restores health and appetite with from one to two of his extraordinary Pills, and cures the most virulent cases with a box or so of his wonderful and all-healing salve.

These two great jewelries of the Doctor are fast superseding all the old-worn-out nostrums of the day. Extraordinary cures by Maggiel's Pills and Salve have opened the eyes of the public to the inefficiency of the so-called) remedies of others, and upon which people have so long blindly depended. Maggiel's Pills are not of the class that are swallowed by the dozen, and of which every a full-taken creates an ahsolute necessity for another. One or two of Maggiel's Pills suffices to place the bowels in perfect order, tone the stomach, create an appetite, and render the spirits light and buoyant! There is no griping, and no relation in the wake of delicate females. Ulcerous and eruptive diseases are literally extinguished by the disinfectant power of Maggiel's Salve. In fact, it is here announced that Maggiel's Blood, Dyspeptic and Diarrhœa Pills cure where all others fail. While for Burns, Scalds, Chilblains, Cuts, and all Assertions of the skin, Maggiel's Salve is infallible. Sold by J. HAYDOCK, 11 Pine street, New York, and all Druggists, at 25 cents per box.

"COUNTERFEITS.—Beware Magical Pills or Salve with a little pamphlet inside the box. They are bogus. The genuine have the name of J. Haydock on the box with name of J. Maggiel, M. D. The genuine have the Pills surrounded with white powder."

Cheapside, April 18th, 1865.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Musk for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. My has induced red wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware lest they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full price. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

RD. RELLY"

Glenester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and teamsters should always have it on hand. Call and see it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signatures of G. W. Weatherbee, Chemist, and the private U. S. Stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jen'so!" "Exactly so—Solon Shingle said they were there "every time." If he felt "owley" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or in gnatly oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him of his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"• • • I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"• • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • • the Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"• • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right. • • •

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"• • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DYKE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet, among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some apology from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by Demas Barnes & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents,

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes 50 cents and $1 by all dealers.

C. HELMSTREET, Chemist.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 5 cts per bottle.

What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere or small wart or a re on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system encumbered, and every function of life oppressed? Then you need a cathartic. Some of all diseases is nothing upon you, that should be removed by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fresh rushes on exuberant health. Such is the effect these Pills produce. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous action, purify the system from the morbific matter which makes disease, and restore the health. Being sugar-coated, they are pleasant to take, and are the cheapest cathartic medicine you can employ. While in this condition, opposed by the forces of disease, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the dangerous and dangerous disorders. The same properties which cure these, will cure the others. Coated by similar processes and commensurate of the natural functions of the body, they are equally and surely thereby cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons,

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Mo. 4, 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the purgative of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ABA HOSKINSON.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them an excellent we can use for the treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Ashmead, Bost, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR, AYER: I cannot answer your kind complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that can be said with a purgative medicine. I have great confidence in their effectual cathartic in my daily practice with diseases, and I believe as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 1, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache and body pain by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, REV. W. PETERS,
Chief of Bloomer Cherokee.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1866.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALDEN BALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colic, Worms.

From Rev. J. A. Brown, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their decisive effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating make them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Mann, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in sickness. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. MANN.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1866.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Medical, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. We believe costiveness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Sweet, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent preparatives of the natural secretions when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other in my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkins, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga. Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be unthankful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians the disease grew severe and severe, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 3 Dec. 1863.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT BLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands is dangerous in a public pills from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. Those contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY
IN CANADA.

MESSRS Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel angled to let you know what the Great Shoshonee Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once which I felt through my whole system: at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please,

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for the worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and unanswerable fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children, by so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms:

Deranged appetite, occasional convulsions, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, sunken eyes, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, fearful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and a life-destroyer to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other confinement on parties.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

When I Mean to Get Married.

When do I mean to marry?—Well—
'Tis idle to dispute with fate;
But if you choose to hear me tell,
Pray listen till I fix the date:—

When daughters haste with eager feet,
A mother's daily toil to share;
Can make the pudding which they eat,
And mend the stockings which they wear.

When maidens look upon a man
As in himself what they would marry,
And not as army soldiers scan
A sutler or a commissary.

When gentle ladies who have got,
The offer of a I very hand,
Consent to share his "earthly lot,"
And do not mean his lot of land.

When young mechanics are allowed
To find and wed the farmer's girls,
Who don't expect to be endowed
With rubies, diamonds and with pearls.

When wives in short, shall freely give
Their hearts and hands to and their sponsors,
And live as they were wont to live
Within their sires' one-story houses.

Then, madam—If I'm not too old,—
Rejoiced to quit this lonely life,
I'll brush my beaver, cease to scold,
And look about me for a wife!

BULLET MARKS.

A WIMBLEDON STORY.

From Dickens' "Once a Week."

We were sitting round our tent one evening last year, at Wimbledon—the "we" being our major, the captain and sub of our company, his covering sergeant, corporal Williams, and a certain sapper, to wit, myself. We were drinking pale ale and smoking as was every one else in the hundred tents around us.

"Here's my last bull's eye," and the sergeant produced from his cap-pouch a flattened bullet, turned inside out as neatly as possible.

"What's the cause of that I wonder?" said the corporal.

"You see," said the captain—being an engineer he was bound to know—"when the point of the bullet strikes the target, part of the lead is melted by the development of heat caused by the sudden arrest of the bullet's motion, and goes off in the spumah, the rest of the bullet is softened by the heat; and inasmuch as the parts must stop in their order of successi on, the edge of the cup of the bullet is driven in level with the base of the cup. Is that so, Major?"

"Yes, quite right; but, if you like, I can spin you a yarn about these said bullets, that may just last out these weeds."

"Well, let's have it."

I had a sort of second cousin, Gerald Ashton, who had been brought up with myself and my sister, my father being his guardian.

We had all been like brothers and sister, when one day we woke up to find he could not live without a nearer relation to her. He spoke to the old gentleman, and there was a little family fracas

He had only a hundred a year, and my father did not think that was enough, though Gerald did; there was no objection at all in other respects—let him earn more and they would see—wait a little—you know the kind of thing an old man would say. Well, it was of no use. He said he felt himself a burden; there was no escape for his energies, and he would go—and go he did.

I urged upon him that he should get something to do. He had been well educated, and a clerkship, or something of the kind could be got for him if he still resolved not to go on at the hospital.

No; he would go. There was only one thing he did do well, that was shoot; and he would carry his abilities to a market where they would be appreciated. And so at the mature age of twenty-two, he left us, his profession, his home, and his prospects.

He disappeared, and about six months after we heard he was with, say the 40th Dragoons, in India.

We wrote and offered to buy his discharge, but he would "have none of us." He lived it very well; was already corporal; expected the three stripes soon, and was "Gentleman Jack" with his comrades.

Some six months after this I was sent out to India with a company; and as my sister was getting thin, and showing other signs of the desirability of a sea voyage, and that of a warm climate, it was agreed, I should take her over.

We reached Calcutta, and in a few weeks settled down.

There was war going on, and I was placed in charge of one of the chief depots for small arms and ammunition, besides having my regular duties to perform.

One day I was down at the store, when my sister arrived, pale and breathless.

Look, Charles, poor Gerald's in dreadful trouble.

I put her into an office chair, and took the newspaper and read:

"Yesterday evening as an officer of the 40th Dragoon Guards was returning to camp he was shot at from behind a clump of bushes; the bullet struck him in the thigh and lodged in the saddle. Although wounded so severely, he had sufficient presence of mind to ride straight to the bushes, and there found one of his own men, a corporal of the troop, nick-named 'Gentleman Jack' by his comrades, whose rifle was still smoking from the discharge.—Fortunately at this moment, the guard arrived, and the man was at once arrested. A court martial will of course be held at once, and, although the man has previously borne a good character, and is reported to be respectably connected, it is to be hoped he will receive the proper reward for so abominable a crime."

"Oh," I said, "this is all nonsense, and Gerald's as murderous or else he's very much changed. I'll see what they say at headquarters."

"Do, for God's sake go. If anything happened to Gerald I should never forgive myself, for if I had run away with him when papa was so cross, he never would have enlisted at all."

"Don't talk such nonsense, Maggie, but go home, and I'll come with the telegraph news."

I went to headquarters; they gave me permission to use the telegraph for a question or two. The report was not encouraging.

It was our Gerald—the officer had seen the flash and heard the report—an extremely loud report, as if there had been two charges of powder in the carbine.

The bullet was found in the saddle, and one cartridge was missing from his 20 rounds. Court martial had declared him guilty, and the general's confirmation of the sentence had just arrived. Fifty lashes in the camp square, and four years' imprisonment in the civil jail. Sentence to be carried out on the 12th. Everybody was sorry, but quite convinced he had tried to murder his superior officer. No one could understand with what motive.

I did not know what to think; there was more evidence forthcoming in a day or two, when we had the papers.

His statement in defence was, that he had just been returning from guard when he remembered that he had forgotten to bring in a book one of the officers had asked him to bring in from the town, some three miles distant. Without stopping to think he was led off at once, got the book, when he fancied he saw a tiger. He got behind the bushes to watch, and saw one making for the distant camp. Anxious to secure the prize, he incautiously broke open one of his packages and loaded to have a shot at it. He had covered the beast, and was firing at the tiger when he heard another report simultaneously with his own carbine. He saw the tiger roll right over as if shot, and then bound away. In another instant the officer came around the tope, bleeding, and ordered him into arrest. He was quite sure that he hit the tiger, and equally sure that another rifle was fired at the same moment that he pulled the trigger of his own.

Of course such a lame statement had no effect, and he was sentenced.

I could not help thinking that there was a flaw in the evidence. How was it if there was as agreed, a loud report—which meant a full charge of powder—that the bullet stopped at the saddle instead of going through both saddle and horse. That was a great discrepancy—a full charge would have made a loud report, and sent it right through anything at a distance of 200 yards. I felt there was something wrong and made up my mind to go on the spot. I had but six days to go in, but much might be done, Margaret insisted on going with me in spite of all I could do to keep her away.

"Have I not done all you wished me to do since we have been out here? Do, for heaven's sake, let me have my way in this."

So we went up the country in post haste.

I was, of course, as one of the staff, admitted to see poor Gerald, whom I found terribly cut up.

"I dont mind the imprisonment, its the disgrace! The ladies! I shall kill myself directly I get loose after, I know I shall."

"No, no," said Maggie; "don't for my sake. Oh, Gerald! If you know how I have suffered for weeks past, you would live for my sake. I do not care about the braid or the lashes. I know that you are innocent, and that there has been some horrible blunder committed in this matter. Oh, Willie, dear, do think of something to save him."

"Oh, do there's a good feller, get me some stuff that will make an end of me."

"Don't talk like that, Gerald; there's some infernal mistake in it. Don't despair yet. Let's go over the ground again step by step," and I made him tell me the whole story over again.

"It seems to me, Gerald, we want not a few things to show you are not guilty. We want the tiger you shot at, and that we shan't get; and we want the clue to the mystery of the other rifle."

"Oh, I've thought of it all till I'm sick. I don't care what happens now. I'll wait till the day before it's to come off, and then break my head against the walls."

"Don't be a fool, Gerald. I'm sure you are innocent. So is Margaret."

"Yes, so are a hundred others; but its all no use. In three days I am disgraced for life, if I live."

"Well I must leave you now, and see what I can do."

"Let me have five minutes with Maggie, will you?"

I left them alone for some ten minutes, and then told Maggie that she must go home with me.

I was beaten; I could not see how I could get any fresh evidence, and without that a reprieve—a postponement—was utterly impossible.

I went to the wounded officer, the captain of his own company, and got him to tell his own story; it was just the same thing over again—the exceedingly loud report, and the fouled and still smoking carbine.

"I would," said the captain, "have given the price of my commission rather than have had it happen. He's as fine a fellow as ever sat a horse, brave, kind, and as thorough a gentleman as the colonel himself; I always made him my orderly when I could so as to have company. I declare to you that I did my best at the court martial for him, and got into disgrace with the general presiding for coloring my statements—that was his expression—so as to favor the prisoner. I almost cut-called when I heard the sentence, as if he had been my own brother. The men are mad about it; there has not been a lash or public punishment in the regiment for the last 25 years."

I hardly knew how to pass the time; I tried to think, but my ideas only travelled in the same old grooves again.

I invited the assistant surgeon to come up to my quarters, and introduced him to my sister. He was quite a young fellow, and seemed quite flattered by simple attention, for in the army they have not quite made up their minds whether a medical officer should be treated as a gentleman; but the strangest thing I ever saw in my life was my sister's conduct. Of course, speaking to you fellows I shan't be misunderstood, and some of you have seen her. She laid herself out to please him to an extent I never should have thought my dear Maggie capable of; sang to him, played to him, and made all eyes at him till I thought her brain was turned. She said she should like to see his quarters, asked him to ask us to lunch, and almost made up like a rat trap when I ventured to hint that it might not be convenient.

Next day we went to his quarters, and nothing would satisfy her but that he should mix up some medicine for her out of the bottles of his little travelling case. There she was handling, and smelling, and tasting everything, like a child often rather than a girl of eighteen. She sent him about the room; made him bring books from the opposite side of it so that she might read about the properties of the drugs; and, in short, behaved more like a lunatic that I thought the trouble about Gerald must have affected her mind. I got her away at last, and intended to insist on her remaining in the house and putting some ice to her head. It was quite unnecessary; the minute we left the surgery she was calm and silent as a nun.

Well, the days passed in some sort of dreary fashion till the evening of the 11th. I had been asked during the day to go down with the officers to see some target practice, at some temporary marks, and I went down.

It was rather late when I rode up to the firing point, and they were just leaving off; and one of them came up and said:

"I say, captain, tell us the cause of these new bullets turning inside out," and he handed me a bullet reversed; just such another as William's has in his hand.

I took it just to explain the matter to him, when a thought struck through my mind like a flash of lightning.

"Saved!" I exclaimed. "Who's got that bullet out of the saddle?"

"What bullet?"

"Gerald's—my cousin's."

"Oh, 'Gentleman Jack's affair; the doctor's got it."

"Where is he?"

"Don't know—quarters I think."

"No, he's come into town; I saw him on the road as we came by.

I sped quickly on into the town, leaving them to think what they pleased; and spent more than two hours finding the doctor. At last I caught him.

In another minute we were riding full gallop to his quarters.

He had the bullet—a little bruised and very singularly flattened, and blunted at the point—it must have been just spent when it struck.

I then went to the sergeant who had charge of the nineteen rounds of ammunition found in Gerald's pouch. About midnight I contrived to find him, and after some little delay I got possession of them.

I then immediately returned to the doctor, and we compared the nineteen bullets with the one found in the saddle. I then ran to the telegraph clerk, roused him out of bed, and told him to telegraph to the headquarters in Calcutta, to my lieutenant in charge of the magazines.

After an hour's waiting, ringing at the bell, and answer came that the night watchman would fetch the lieutenant. I then sent message No. 1.

"Examine the books and see the date on which the last ammunition was sent for the use of the 40th Dragoons; find the same parcel, and carefully remove one cartridge from each of twenty packages, selected at random, take out bullets, and remove plugs; and send No. in base of cup bullets."

The answer came back that he understood, and would rouse up the people to do it.

After an hour and a half, the answer came back:

"All the bullets are numbered 5, with a dot on the right."

I then sent message No. 2:

"Examine what cartridges bear the No. 2 with a dot on the left, and report to whom issued, and when—report quickly—a man's life depends on speed."

Again I waited another hour. No answer came.

It was getting late—half-past two; at four the parade would take place. I urged more speed.

The reply came:

"We have ten men at work breaking open barrels, and searching. No No. 2 yet found."

At last it came:

"One barrel No. 2 in store; the rest of the same shipment was damaged and useless, and sold in bulk to native dealers for value as old metal at one of the clearance sales some time ago."

I had learnt all I could. I spurred back to camp with the bullets, from which I had never parted, in my pouch. I shall never forget the scene.

In the middle of the camp the men were drawn up in three sides of a square; in the centre of the square were the triangles, with Gerald lashed to them. I saw them as I came down the hill take off his jacket and lash his wrists, I sped on. I could see the old colonel, with the paper in his hand, standing alone, and then I saw nothing more, for a dip in the road concealed them; as I rose again to the crest, at less than a quarter of a mile, I saw a woman rush in from between the ranks towards the triangles holding something in her hand. I darted on and rushed into the square, but just in time to seize the farrier's arm, as the lash was about descending, and to see that the woman was my sister, and that she was being led away between the two sergeants.

"Stop, colonel, for the love of God," I cried, with my hand still grasping the farrier's arm; "I have evidence to prove the man not guilty."

I then showed the colonel the bullet that had come from the saddle and the others from the pouch, and pointed out to him that one was marked No. 5, with a dot. I assured him on my honor as an officer and a gentleman, that it was almost impossible that a No. 5 bullet could by any chance get into a pouch of Nos. 2 bullets. He was only too glad to hear me, and agreed to postpone the execution of the sentence till further orders from the general of his division.

I've heard some shouts, and I've seen some displays of enthusiasm in my time, but I never shall forget the shout that rose the minute the colonel had pronounced that the execution of the sentence on Corporal Ashton would be postponed until further orders.

The men had been standing at "attention," many of them with the tears rolling down their cheeks, but when they heard postponed," they broke ranks, rushed up to the triangles, cut the lashings, broke the cat, screamed, shouted like madmen.

"Three cheers for "Gentleman Jack" and his wife. Again, again, boys."

Officers and all joined in for a few minutes. There stood the old grey-haired colonel in the midst of a scene that outbedlamed Bedlam.

As for me, I was like a man in a dream; I felt a hundred hands grasping mine. I had my sister sobbing on my breast, and then I heard the colonel say to the bugler, "Sound the assembly."

What a change, in less than a minute it stood by the fallen triangles in the centre of three lines of living statues. Not a sound; not a movement.

"Major Jackson, return your colors and break off the men," said the colonel; and then walked away with myself and my sister.

"But what did your sister do there?"

Well, she had promised Gerald that he should not suffer the disgrace of the lash; and had, during the hour I thought she was fooling with the doctor, managed to get hold of his bottle of prussic acid, and had rushed me with half of it for him and half for herself; and her appearance had so thoroughly surprised every one that she had reached the triangles, and almost raised it to his lips, when the doctor, recognizing his own blue bottle, struck her hand a violent blow, and dashed it into the ground, besides disabling her from getting her own share.

"And how did the affair end? was the general of the division satisfied?"

I don't think he would have been with that evidence alone, and so we went about to hunt for more. I begged that, as we had found so much, Gerald might be permitted to accompany a party of search, under a guard, to find the missing tiger.

We went there, Maggie insisted on joining us. All the officers off duty went, and about half the men.

Gerald then pointed out the spot where he had stood, and where he shot the tiger; and from that point we started, crossing and recrossing, till there could not have been anything as large as a half crown that could be hidden.

Maggie and I were riding in front of the line, when Maggie exclaimed:

"What a horrible smell comes from that copse."

"Don't smell anything Meg."

"You've lived here so long, that you're no sense of smell left."

Of course, as Maggie was with us, Blinkers was there too. Blinkers advanced to the copse—paused—and rushed underneath the grass, barking as if infuriated.

"There's something in there, Willie."

Some of the others coming up, we pushed our way into the depths, guided by the frantic bark of the dog Blinkers, and, after being much scratched and torn, found ourselves in the centre of a trampled circle of jungle grass, with the half devoured remains of a large tiger.

The doctor was sent for, and the wound discovered; the beast had evidently been lamed, the bullet breaking the fore-leg. It was also evident that, wounded as it was, it had lingered on till it was mere skin and bone, and had died only within the last few days. Assisted by some natives the doctor commenced the horrible task of searching for the bullet, and after half an hour's labor the most disgusting he had ever undergone, it was found flattened against the large bone of the hind leg, and handed to me.

Never oh! I forget the pleasure I felt when I saw on the secured bullet, the No. 5, with a dot as fresh and clear as if it had just come from the pressing machine.

Great was the rejoicing that night in the camp of the 40th. Blue fires were burnt, the band came and serenaded Maggie. The whole of the officers, including the old colonel, came as to a levee; but still I felt there was one more thing to be found out. How did No. 2 bullet get into the saddle?

At length, I inquired whether any of the officers missed any of their arms. Curiously enough, the only missing arm was a gun belonging to the wounded captain. I asked, did he remember the size. He did. It was just a shade smaller than the bore of the regimental carbines. You could get a government bullet down by a good deal of hammering.

I now propounded my theory, that the bullet No. 2, had been fired from the captain's missing rifle, for the point of the bullet was marked with rings, and considerably flattened. Now, there was nothing in the flesh, and nothing in the saddle to produce these marks, and they must therefore, have been made before firing.

I then proposed that a full search should be made with dogs, for at least two miles round, from were the shot was fired, to see if any traces could be found of either the man or the gun.

We made the most careful search; presently I came to a stone on the road itself, marked in a most peculiar manner.

"What's the cause of these marks?" said I to the farrier of the troop, who had volunteered to help, and who said he never felt more grateful to any one in all his life than he did to me for squelching his wrists so hard that day.

"What's the cause? It's been used a hammer for something—a nail or a shoe."

"Nail heads are square."

"True for you—these are round."

"Do you think a reamed would make three marks?"

"It just would. Somebody's been driving down a hard bullet with it."

"So I think. Now take this stone and throw it straight over that gap into the middle of the copse, and I'll mark where it's prone to fall.

He threw it, and marking the spot, we found our way into the jungle; and there, within a few yards of the stone, under the long leaves, we found what we sought—the remains of a native, stripped entirely of flesh and clothes, except on the hands and feet and with a great gaping wound in the skull; and on the inside, which the ants had perforate clean out, was a large piece of the breech of the burst gun that he had by his side.

The whole evidence was there; two empty cartridge cases; another No. 2 bullet; eight untouched cartridges. It was clear enough that the man, whoever he was, had taken the captain's gun, and putting in his own charges of powder, rammed down the muzzle a large bullet with the blows of the stone on the new bruised end of the ramrod; and the loud report that all the witnesses spoke to was as loud as the simultaneous report of the discharge of three charges of powder could make it. While the want of force in the bullet was accounted for by the bursting of the gun.

"We took home the skull, and the burst rifle, and the cartridge cases, together with some remnants of clothing; and we found that the intended murderer to have been made of the spoils, or grooms of the captain, had left and horsewhipped a month before. He'll using a horse of which he had the charge.

Of course there was a new trial ordered, and as the evidence was unquestionable, Gerald was discharged.

"Did he leave the regiment?

"Not a bit—why should he? The men horsewhipped him, and the officer who was wounded was installed; and he and his comrades managed matters among them so well, that at the first parade of the regiment at Calcutta, some six months afterwards, the old colonel presented to the men a new officer, Capt. Ashton, adding, "I'll be makes half as good an officer as he did a soldier there will not be a better in Her Majesty's service."

"And your sister Margaret."

"Oh, I've just seen a little case, lined with velvet, and something inside engraved, from Gen. Id Au too, from his affectionate

LONDON, Dec. 23.—Fenianism still engrosses a fair share of public attention though the excitement caused by the recent outrages has pretty much died out. There is a wide spread and ever increasing feeling favourable to the amelioration of the condition of the Irish as the most effective means of suppressing Fenianism. The Times this morning strongly favours this idea, and hopes and believes that the next session of Parliament will be occupied with the consideration of Irish affairs.

In Mexico there is great excitement over the withdrawal of the British Embassy, which, it is supposed, will be followed by the withdrawal of the representatives of all European Powers, and the American Minister will be left alone in his glory. The British Government will hold the Mexicans responsible for the protection of all British subjects who are still foolish enough to live in the Heaven forsaken land. Insurrection and murder prevail throughout Mexico.

ONTARIO.

The parliament of Ontario will meet on Friday, the 27th inst., in Toronto—just 27 years since Upper Canada had a parliament of its own. There is abundance of business for the new assembly; let us hope they will do it well, and for the general weal. The parliament of the Dominion has been sitting until the 21st inst., with very little to show for it. We give a list of acts passed during the part of the session already past, and assuredly they have taken matters easily. We may guess how matters will continue to be if they continue in the same hands; the past is a fair criterion of the future. The postal bill was nearly the last one passed, and from what we can learn of it it passed very unjustly, so far as newspapers are concerned. In towns and cities almost every one receives his newspapers free of postage, by news dealers or paper carriers. Hence the few cents of postage on newspapers does not effect town or city. But a farmer who gets his paper by mail must pay a postage of 20 cents a year. True the sum is light, but the principle is wrong. Why not grant the same privilege to all classes of her Majesty's subjects, and grant papers postage free to all. We must rest satisfied, however, for the present. The postal bill is only a trial; another session may effect something better.

Who Can Vote at the Approaching Election.

The question has been raised that no person can vote who did not pay his taxes for 1867, before the 16th day of December. The Act provides that an Elector must be a natural born or naturalized subject of Her Majesty, 21 years of age, rated on the assessment Roll, in Town $400, in villages $300, in Townships $100, &c. The Clerk supplies the Returning officer with a voter's list. How is he to know who paid their taxes before the sixteenth? Perhaps the list was made out before the 16th? But independent of this list, the only oath the Returning officer can administer.

"At any election, or at any public vote in respect of a By-law which requires the assent of the electors, the only oaths or affirmations to be required of any person claiming to vote, are, that he is of the full age of twenty-one years, and is a natural born subject of Her Majesty, or has obtained a certificate of naturalization from the Quarter Sessions, or was a resident of Canada before the eighteenth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and forty-nine; that he has been, if a householder, a resident within the municipality for which the election is held, or vote taken, for one month next before the election, and that he has not before voted at the election or on the By-law in the township or ward in which he is voting (as the case may be); and that he is the person named or purporting to be named in the list of voters (or, in case of a new municipality, in which there has not yet been any assessment roll), and that he is a freeholder or resident householder in (naming the property entitling him to vote at the election); and he has not directly or indirectly received any reward or gift, nor does he expect to receive any, for the vote which he tenders at the election; and such oaths shall be administered at the request of any candidate or his authorized agent, and no inquiries shall be made of any such person except with respect to the facts specified in such oaths or affirmations."

Now what is to hinder any Elector to take the above oath and vote, and his taxes not paid? Simply nothing, the clause is a dead letter, and will be until amended. Hence every Elector otherwise qualified may vote and none can hinder him. Of course the election may be contested; so may any election; but we venture to say that no returning officer will refuse the vote of any one on his list, taxes paid or not paid, nor has he the right to do so.

The concert by the Band on Thursday evening was, as far as performance is concerned, a success. Under Mr. Rackett we will soon be able to boast of one of the best bands in the country. The audience was not as large as it should have been, still it was respectable. The officers of the 57th Battalion deserve the greatest praise and encouragement in their efforts to keep up the band.

MUNICIPAL.

On Monday, the nomination for Municipal Officers took place at the regular hours, 10 and 12 o'clock.

W. H. Scott, Esq., was re elected by acclamation; no one had courage to oppose him, and few might try it. At the expiration of the hour that is allotted for nomination, Mr. Scott explained the course he had taken on the Railway By-Laws, and vindicated his position by showing that all he voted for was to get the By-Laws, or any one of them into committee, where they might discuss them on their merits.

IN THE NORTH WARD, Mr. Toole was re-elected by acclamation.

IN THE EAST WARD, W. N. Kennedy and Wm. Hall, Esqs., were nominated. Mr. Kennedy served last year and, as was supposed, expected to remain in office 3 years, but some error in the ballott was discovered and he now seeks re election. Mr. Hall, who is also a candidate for this ward, will make a safe Councillor. Perhaps no other man in the town has so much at stake—a large property holder and the highest assessed ratepayer in the town. Any question of taxation may safely be left in his hands, for any increase of taxation must be borne heavily by himself. He would also make a good Councillor—a successful merchant, a good business man, versed in all kinds of accounts, there could scarcely be a more fitting person chosen. Of course we do not wish it to be understood that we depreciate Mr. Kennedy's labours, but Mr. Hall, as a heavy taxpayer, has claims that few others have.

IN THE CENTRE WARD, Mr. Patterson is again in the field. Mr. Patterson has been a very consistent Councillor, and is a reliable, honest man. In sending him back again the people have nothing to fear. Mr. Patterson's conduct on the Market By-Law is a guarantee of his future course if elected.—He voted for a second reading of that By-Law, as a Councillor, but as a citizen and a ratepayer voted against it. Mr. Helm, who is also nominated, was in the Council before, and has a very favorable history. The people will have to decide which of the two they desire to represent them. We trust those very pure Councillors will not interfere unduly with the people.

IN THE SOUTH WARD there are a host of candidates—Mr. Leonard, Mr. Lundy, Mr. English, Mr. W. A. Scott and Mr. Beavis. The contest will, no doubt, be between Messrs. Lundy, English and Scott, all respectable men and would make good Councillors.

ASHBURNHAM.—In this village Mr. A. C. Dunlop and Mr. R. D. Rogers are proposed for the Reeveship, and Messrs. Ludgate, Bennett, Sutherland, J. Z. Rogers, H. Calcutt and W. McGregor, for Councillors. Whether Messrs. Dunlop and Rogers will both run or not is doubtful. Mr. Sutherland declines to run. The others will appeal to the people.

OTONABEE.—Mr. Laing is re-elected, by acclamation, for Reeve, and Mr. Jas. Miller for Deputy Reeve. The Candidates for Councillors are Messrs. Houson, T. Mesnal, Learmouth, John Millar, D. Kennedy, W. Matchett and Duffie. The West has again made a mistake; they have three men in the field—Kennedy, Matchett and Duffie. We venture to predict the defeat of the three, just the same as last year.

SMITH.—Mr. Walton is reelected for Reeve; Isaac Garbutt is opposed for Deputy Reeve, by M. S. Dean; Messrs. Galvin, Stothart, Fitzgerald, Sanderson, Graham, Mann, Paull and Montgomery are candidates for councillors.

MONAGHAN.—Mr. Young and the whole council are elected without opposition.

HARVEY.—Mr. Scott is re-elected, but a number of candidates are to contest the matter of who will be councillors.

GALWAY.—Mr. Probert is re-elected; there will be a contest for councillors.

BELMONT.—Mr. Pearse is opposed by Mr. Wm. Burgess; there will be a contest also for the council.

BURLEIGH.—Mr. Carroll is opposed by Mr. Golborne; Mr. Carroll will be returned, however.

DUMMER.—Mr. R. Morrison, proposed by Mr. Choate and seconded by Mr. D. Rose, is opposed by Mr. John Ferrier, for the Reeveship. There are five Councillors proposed.

DOURO.—We have heard that there is a contest in this Township but we did not get particulars.

A SURPRISE.—The people of Blairton, Belmont, lately paid a visit to the Rev. Mr. Halstead, Wesleyan Minister, and presented him with a purse containing $50, they also took him some other articles for house keeping, as they understood tha the was about to take to himself a help meet, finding that it was not good to be alone. Mr. Halstead, we are informed, is exceedingly useful in his present sphere, and is doing much good. He has been the means of getting a neat little church erected at Blairton. It is just finished the seats having been taken from Peterboro for it, to-day.

In addition to Mr. Halstead's labours of love, we learn that he has really taken to Belmont a young and beautiful partner, daughter of the late M. Knowlson, Esq. of Millbrook, and that they passed through on their way yesterday, having been at the Hymeneal Altar the same day. Belmont will no doubt have a strange appearance compared with the fine Township of Cavan. But there are enough warm hearts and pleasant faces in Belmont to enable them to be happy and comfortable. May they have many festive seasons, as happy as the present one must be to them.

PRESENTATION.—The Pupils of school section No. 3, Douro, presented Mr. John Wood, their late Teacher, on the occasion of his removal to Ashburnham, with a very nice writing desk, a toilet set and some valuable books, worth in all over $12.00. Mr. Wood has been their Teacher for about 16 years and a mutual good will exists between him and those that have been under his charge during that time. It must be gratifying to Mr. Wood to find his labours so appreciated. It would be invidious to particularize, as all the boys were earnest in getting up the articles for presentation but we learn that Master's Brown and McIntyre were the representatives of the others. There was also an address to which Mr. Wood made a suitable reply.

UNION SCHOOL LITERARY CLUB.—We learn that the boys of the Grammar and Union School have established a literary club for their own benefit. Col. Hamlin is President, Mr. O'Beirne, Vice-President. They have had several debates, and we are informed are improving in the art of speaking, every debate.

MONAGHAN, Dec. 23rd.—The Nomination of Reeve and Councillors took place at the Town Hall, to-day, at noon, when the greatest harmony prevailed. Gen. Young, Esq., Reeve, and Messrs. Rubeon, Laing, Geo. Tully and Geo. Birney, Councillors, were duly elected for 1868. The Reeve wished to have an expression from the electors in relation to the By-Laws of the County Council, purposing to grant $30,000 to the Cobourg, Peterboro and Chemong Railway company. Mr. Collins spoke at considerable length against the scheme, when the following motion was carried unanimously:—Moved by Mr. Collins, seconded by Mr. Geo. Birney,—"That the Ratepayers of the Township of North Monaghan are entirely opposed to the passing of the two By-Laws of the County Council granting aid to the Cobourg, Peterboro and Chemong Railways, and our Reeve is hereby requested to vote against said By-Laws."—Com.

A NEW MUSICAL HALL:—Mr. E. C. Hill has leased the old Town Hall, and is refitting it in an excellent style for a musical Hall and Concert Room. He has removed the old partitions and erected a gallery in the east end. He is also fitting a stage and retiring rooms, and intends making the Hall a first class one. He calculates that it will seat about 700 people. At present it is just in preparation, but as he intends opening it on Monday week, with a concert we will not anticipate by giving a description until finished. Mr. Hill is satisfied that it will answer the wants of the Town for several years. We think so too.

LITERARY CLUB.—The following subject will be discussed this evening:—"Should national societies be encouraged in the Dominion of Canada?" Leaders—Messrs. J. A. Hall and Eastwood. Members only admitted.

We are requested to state that the Club have made arrangements for a course of lectures to be delivered during the winter months. The first will be given by the Rev. M. Burnham, on Monday, the 6th of January. Subject—"The History of Alphabetical Writing." The Lectures will be given on the first Monday of every month, price of admission 12½ cents.

We claim the indulgence of our readers this week for a day's delay. The Holiday, and some of our hands being unwell for a week, is the cause of our being behind, but as Christmas comes but once a year, we know that all will bear with us.

The pupils of School Section No. 2, Smith, presented their teacher Mr. Haggart, with the following address and a writing desk, on Tuesday last, on the occasion of his leaving them to pursue his studies at Victoria College:—

To MR. ALEX. HAGGART,
Teacher of School Section No. 2, Smith.

DEAR TEACHER,—We your pupils, who have enjoyed your careful labours during some years desire on the occasion of your removing from us to express our esteem and regard for you.—As a teacher, we respect you very highly, and as a gentleman ever so, you have always exhibited a due regard to our advancement in learning and moral principles. We regret that you are about to leave us but we hope that the change will be for your advancement and prosperity, we beg to present you also with a token of our regard, which we hope you will accept as it is given with good will. It is but small, but it will serve to express the good will of little folks and will, we trust, be the means of our remembrance by you. We therefore bid you an affectionate good by as teacher, and hope that in your new position you will be as you have always been by us, deservedly respected; and when you have ended your career among men may your end be happy and your change for eternal bliss.

We are, Sir, truly yours.

REPLY.

DEAR PUPILS,—To receive such a kind address, accompanied by such a beautiful present on the occasion of my leaving this neighbourhood is more than I could reasonable expect.—It is true for the last few years I have been labouring amongst you, but during that time I have done no more than my duty, the responsible nature of which I have been aware, at times feeling its responsibilities to great, that with the moderate qualifications I possessed it seemed almost impossible to discharge them aright. Still I hope that I have at least in a small measure succeeded, and that our intercourse has been mutually beneficial.

Looking back upon the last four years, during which I have been your teacher, and you, my pupils, we find we have been highly favoured, for which favour we should be thankful to him from whom we receive all our blessings we can congratulate ourselves that nothing of a serious nature has happened to mar our happiness, or cause any estrangement between any of us. You have been allowed steadily to pursue your way in the pursuit of knowledge, and if you have not made the advancement you might have done, in future by your deligence strive to improve all your opportunities, so that by the satisfaction your kind and affectionate parents will receive, their benevolence may be rewarded, and you may obtain what will make you virtuous men and women and useful members of society.

In regard to my future welfare you allude in kindly terms, for your kind wishes I feel deeply grateful, I prize them because they come from you, above all things, whose esteem and good will I feel proud to possess.

We are about to part, but let us be severed ever so distant, the only introduction on our meeting again you will need, will be the intimation that you have been pupils of mine while teaching in this school. We live in the world where the separation of relations however dear, and friends however intimate are the common lot of all, but by virtuous lives let us strive to earn an inheritance in that land where all friendships shall be enduring, and where the sorrows of parting shall be unknown.

Your useful and valuable present I accept with the feelings that I have received more than I have merited, I accept it not merely because it is beautiful and valuable, but because it is a token of your esteem, and one that shall pleasantly remind me of your affectionate regard.

And dear friends, not only to you who are present, but to all the residents of the place, I owe a debt of gratitude, for the upright, kind and generous treatment which has ever been accorded to me, and upon resigning the charge with which you have entrusted me, I shall carry away a deep respect for the intelligent people of this neighborhood, and grateful remembrances of the pleasant sojourn I have had amongst you shall be cherished while I live.

ALEX. HAGGART.

The Bible Society in sixty years has distributed some fifty-three millions copies of the Scriptures. An ingenious person has calculated that at the foregoing rate it will be 1,440 years before every member of the human race will have received a Bible, and that it will cost £120,000,000.

OUR "INCORRUPTIBLES."

We have in our community about a baker's half dozen of citizens who imagine that they ought to be like Cæsar's wife—"beyond suspicion"—but for fear that the public may not put the same high estimate on their honesty of purpose as they do themselves, they are continually reminding us of their disinterested and unswerving integrity.—Some take up the time of the Council in proving that their business are the fountains of honor. Others proclaim their virtue at the corners of our streets, while others cry it broad cast to the public through the columns of their newspaper. The prospect of the County Council voting a sum of money to assist in the re-opening of the Cobourg railway has brought our "Incorruptibles" out in their "highest key." The Review, in its last issue, is almost frantic at the very idea of the County giving assistance to obtain additional railway communication to our town, and furnishes us with an awful array of figures, on purpose to prove its disinterested editor's views correct, and as regards the idea of its being bribed to prevent railway opposition, it again and again has disclaimed in the most emphatic manner. The last effusion from "injured innocence" is as follows:—

"Instead of replying to the facts we present and discussing the matter upon its merits, our opponents resort to the stale cry that we are "bought," "bribed," &c. We have already denied in the most positive terms that any one connected with this office has ever received or expects to receive any remuneration whatever, directly or indirectly from any source for the course we advocate, and we now repeat that denial and challenge the production of a single fact in substantiation of the charge. Let those who make these unfounded assertions show just cause for them, or hereafter hold their peace."

Hear that, O ye host of "unbelievers," and hereafter hold your peace." Why, the very "Devil" in the Review office is as immaculate as his royal namesake before he made his summersault. We almost fancy we hear the "scribe" of the Review exclaim in the language of Shakspeare:—

"He that steals my purse steals trash.
'Tis mine, 'tis his, and has been slave to thousands.
But he that filches from me my good name,
Takes that which not enricheth him,
And leaves me poor indeed."

Comparisons are said to be "odious," still we cannot help bringing to mind an old and we believe very true adage, viz., that when a woman exclaims loudly about her virtue, she is generally "no better than she should be."

We would just ask the Review why Editor and Proprietor became the mouthpiece of Mr. Covert, even when he was present to speak for himself. Surely the citizens cannot forget the meeting at Caisse's, when the Review would hardly let Mr. Covert speak for fear he would commit himself, and when he did speak Mr. Review TOUCHED up his words for him. We have never yet taken any very active part in this railroad controversy, as we are of opinion that the people, if left to themselves, will do what is right in the premises, irrespective of what we might say pro or con. We cannot, however, help observing that the man who has any interest in our county and does not see the necessity of further railway extension, is not a man to be a guide for the people. Mr. Covert, Mr. Cuzner, Mr. Burnham, Mr. Stevenson, the bitterest enemies of the extension, all admit its unbounded necessity. Then we exclaim, if all admit its necessity, why this opposition? With our present one line of railway to Port Hope, the growing trade of our county cannot be accommodated. On average we have as good a quantity of grain to send to market as any county in the province, yet our prices of grain in this town, throughout the year, averages full 10 cents per bushel below the markets of either Port Hope or Cobourg.—Now, suppose we send to the frontier 200,000 bushels of grain, and our farmers loose on that at the rate of five cents per bushel, that alone would produce the nice sum of $10,000 lost every year to our farming community. In proof of what we assert, let any person examine the grain market reports of Port Hope and Cobourg for the last twelve months and compare them with that of our town and they will see we are correct. Our grain merchants assert that they cannot afford to give within 10 cents per bushel of frontier prices, from the fact that they have no certainty of getting their grain removed to the front when wanted, and therefore that they require a margin for contingencies. No "outsider" ever thinks of coming to our town to invest in grain, simply because he cannot rely on getting it to market when desired. These are facts which even our "Incorruptibles" cannot satisfactorily deny. Nor is grain alone the only article of our farmers products which we might exemplify our statements with. However, that article alone will be sufficient for our purpose.

We trust that before long our farmers will be so circumstanced that on coming to town with a load of grain or any other products of their farms, if prices do not suit their views here they can have the choice of shipping to the front by rail, either to Port Hope or Cobourg, as markets or inclination may suit. Men may be "penny wise and pound foolish" in withholding what is comparatively "throwing away a sprat to catch a mackerel." For ourselves, we lived in the county in the "good old times" of ox-carts and crutch sticks, and managed then to get three meals per day and a sound sleep at night. However, now as men, we cannot conscientiously withhold our opinion on a matter that so seriously must effect the future prosperity of this town and county; and as we cannot expect any great advantage without some outlay, it behooves our town and county councillors to take fully into consideration what amount of outlay that should be. If they decide that amount shall be nil, and that no funds shall be provided either for re constructing the Cobourg railway or extending a line to Mud Lake, then we may quietly fold our arms and see the town of Lindsay take the commercial position that nature has intended that Peterborough should control. We presume our "Incorruptibles" will then be fully satisfied.

A RATE-PAYER.

Peterborough, December 24, 1867.

THE DUTY OF JOURNALISTS.—The following, from the Cobourg World, is worth remembering, especially at a time when some journalists seem to delight in everything that may tend to destroy either the character or influence of an opponent in any matter:—

"Our neighbor of the Review seems to forget that in preparing a report of public proceedings it is preferable to draw the veil over what is coarse and common in debate. It is just as much the duty of a journalist to protect private character by hiding unjust attacks from view, as it is of refined and upright gentlemen of a town council to obstain from ignorant and insulting remarks,—remarks which are none the less cowardly from the fact of the absence of the parties upon whom they are made."

In Washington, on Wednesday last, there was quite an excitement, caused in consequence of Secretary Seward's residence taking fire. The sentinels at Gen. Augur's headquarters, supposing that another assassination plot had commenced, and becoming terribly alarmed, began firing indiscriminately at everybody who came in sight. Fortunately these impulsive warriors were disarmed before they managed to hit any one.

A Detroit paper draws attention to the growing scarcity of barley in the American market, and the unusually high prices which it commands in consequence. The crop of barley throughout Canada and the United States seems to have been considerably lighter than in former years, and the greater part of the barley in the West has already been bought up and shipped to the Eastern markets. Barley is now worth $3 to $3.25 per bushel in Detroit.

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers in curing Coughs, colds, and all Bronchial affections, and cheering the afflicted, has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and collapse all rivalry; the demand for them has steadily increased for the twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they know of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these Wafers. When taken in season the effect a permanent cure. Sold by every druggist and most of the respectable stores throughout the Province, at 25 cents per box.

A NEW AND GRAND EPOCH IN MEDICINE!—Dr Maggiel is the founder of a new Medical System! The quantitarians, whose vast internal dooms enfeeble the stomach and paralyze the bowels, must give precedence to the man who restores health and appetite with from one to two of his extraordinary Pills, and cures the most virulent sores with a box or so of his wonderful and all-healing Salve.

These two great specifics of the Doctor are fast supercending all the nauseous nostrums of the day. Extraordinary cures by Maggiel's Pills and Salve have opened the eyes of the public to the inefficacy of the (so-called) remedies of others, and upon which people have so long blindly depended. Maggiel's Pills are not of the class that are swallowed by the dozen, and of which every box fail taken creates an absolute necessity for another. One or two of Maggiel's Pills suffices to place the bowels in perfect order, tone the stomach, create an appetite, and render the spirits light and buoyant! There is no griping, and no reaction in the wants of delicate females. Ulcerous and eruptive diseases are literally extinguished by the disinfectant power of Maggiel's Salve. In fact, it is here announced that Maggiel's Bilious, Dyspeptic and Diarrhœa Pills cure where all others fail. While for Burns, Scalds, Chilblains, Cuts, and all Aberations of the skin, Maggiel's Salve is infallible. Sold by J. HAYDUCK, 11 Pine street, New York, and all Druggists, at 25 cents per box.

"COUNTERFEITS!—Buy no Maggiel Pills or Salve with a little pamphlet inside the box—They are bogus. The genuine have the name of J. Haydock on the box with name of J. Maggiel, M D. The genuine have the Pills surrounded with white powder."

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP!

FOR CHILDREN TEETHING,

GREATLY facilitates the process of teething by softening the gums, reducing all inflammation—will allay ALL PAIN and spasmodic action, and is

SURE TO REGULATE THE BOWELS.

Depend upon it, mothers, it will give rest to yourselves, and

Relief and Health to your Infants.

We have put up and sold this article for years, and CAN SAY IN CONFIDENCE AND TRUTH of it what we have never been able to say of any other medicine—NEVER HAS IT FAILED IN A SINGLE INSTANCE TO EFFECT A CURE, when timely used. Never did we know an instance of dissatisfaction by any one who used it. On the contrary, all are delighted with its operations, and speak of terms of commendation of its magical effects and medical virtues. We speak in this matter "WHAT WE DO KNOW" after years of experience, AND PUBLISH OUR REPUTATION FOR THE FULFILMENT OF WHAT WE HERE DECLARE. In almost every instance where the infant is suffering from pain and exhaustion, relief will be found in fifteen or twenty minutes after the syrup is administered.

Full directions for using will accompany each bottle. None genuine unless the fac-simile of CURTIS & PERKINS, New York, is on the outside wrapper.

Sold by druggists throughout the world.

Price, only 25 Cents per Bottle.

SEWING MACHINES!

GROUT'S

New Twisted Elastic Three Corded Stitch

SEWING MACHINE.

THE undersigned has received the agency for the sale of Messrs. Grout & Co's. $15 Family Sewing Machine, which took the first prize and diploma at the last Provincial Fair held at Kingston, against all other Machines exhibited.

This Machine does all kinds of work, from the thickest to the slightest; works on Leather, Beaver and Woo'en Cloth, Cotton, Linen and Muslin, using Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, direct from the spools without the trouble of rewinding. It will hem, fell, stitch, tuck, bind, braid, quill, seam, gather, sew, or ruffle, or embroider, and do ornamental stitching in the most perfect manner.

The twisted stitch and the means of making it is peculiar, as it is produced by a rotating looper of peculiar construction, with a spur or cast off slide, and is so constructed that it is impossible to miss a stitch, besides being the most simple operation in the world.

All will see the great advantage of the twist given the thread, as each thread has a twist given it while forming the stitch, making it a three cord stitch, having greater strength than any other stitch, at the same time giving it great beauty.

Prices of Grout & Co's Sewing Machines complete, with hemmer, braider, extra needles, screw driver, clamp, book of instructions to enable any one to operate it at once, $15; Machines plated and pearled from $16 to $25; tables and treadles, $6; extra needles, 15 cents per dozen: full supply of oil, silk thread, &c., for sale.

ALSO,

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Musk for Canada Musk. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Musk, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Musk. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them, causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions; thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, soothing the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad heel in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1867.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Cuts, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for Americus, Wells, Fargo's and Haraden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughter's ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

EQ. SELLY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1868.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters, should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said they were there "every time." If he felt "bilious" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"• • • I owe much to you, for I really believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"• • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"• • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"• • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They set like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 284 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents,

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Helmstreet's Inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes 50 cents and $1 by all dealers.

C. HELMSTREET, Chemist.

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

It eradicates scurf and dandruff
It keeps the hair rich, soft and glossy.
It prevents hair turning gray and falling off.
It restores hair upon permanently bald heads

This is just what Lyon's Kathairon will do. It is pretty it is cheap durable. It is literally sold by the car-load, and yet its almost increasing, until there is hardly a country store that does not keep it, or a family that does not use it.

CARELESSNESS.

Many persons neglect their horses' health and condition until it is too late, when at a trifling expense and no trouble the horse might have been saved if attended to in time. To all who may have occasion to use an article of the kind we would confidently recommend Dr. Tuley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine," it is without doubt the best in use, as thousands who have used it will testify.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Tuley & Co. is on the wrapper. Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, are agents for the Canadas, and will supply Druggists and Dealers.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints: Scrofulous and Syphilitic Affections, such as Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Eruptions, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

Gentlemen,—Feb. 6th, 1868.

J. C. AYER & Co.: Sirs: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a scrofulous habit, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it broke out in ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it turned inward and distressed me in the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my body and arms with sores, which were painful and discouraging disorders. I tried many medicines and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, the disease grew worse. At length I was recommended to use your Sarsaparilla. I had no faith in it, as I had taken so much other stuff that I had supposed an alterative (disagreeable, to be sure) must be worse than that; but I tried your medicine, and, to my surprise, before I had taken one bottle I found I was getting better. I kept on using it, and soon all the sores began to form under the scab, and when I had taken five bottles of your Sarsaparilla, I found myself entirely free from disease. My skin is now clean, and I have by my feelings that the disease has been thoroughly purged out of my system. You can well believe that I feel what I say in saying what I do, and you, that I hold you to be one of the agencies of the age, and remain ever gratefully,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1867, that he has cured an intractable case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Ringworm by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Bishop Hines of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a bloody swelling on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumors, Uterine Ulcerations, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. S. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I most cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the peculiar character. I have cured many leucorrhœas of Leucorrhœa by it, and cases where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The effect upon myself was most wonderful, restoring wasted and broken down energies in these female derangements."

Edward S. Morrow, of Newberry, Ga., writes, "A dangerous ulcerous humor on one of the females in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight months no symptom of the disease remains."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

New Orleans, 20th August, 1866.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and remind you of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic ulcers in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, steadily taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulcerations had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disorder would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla; the ulcers healed, and he is well again, and of course without some disfiguration to his face. A woman who had been brought to the same disorder by mercury was suffering from like pains in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she endured excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I have found from its results, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, those truly valuable results fill me with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, G. T. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

Brownsboro, Prince Co., Va., 8th July, 1868.

Dr. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and for a time in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. SHEARE.

Jesse Y. Gotwalt, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Espy, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and my letter you needs was worth trying. By the blessing of God it has cured me, and has so purified my blood as to make a new man of me. I feel young again. The best that can be said of you is not half good enough."

Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Pile, Epilepsy, Melancholy, Neuralgia

Many remarkable cures of these affects we have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It strikes the vital fluid into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the physicians of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and For the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to surpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary disease, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its efficacy—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the efficacy of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has in all the virtues that it did have when made by the cures which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Morris, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system, at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

MOTHERS READ THIS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP

AS A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for the teeth of children and adults. As a well-known and methematically fact that one great cause of death among children in their infancy arises, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. Up on dentition and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, the simple use of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup would save the life of almost every child that be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms. Deranged appetite, extravagant extensions of the abdomen, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, headache, fever, restlessness, peevishness, and crossness of the baby, with frequent sharp screams, convulsions, paralysis, &c. In many cases where there is no stomach, acquaint stools, faintings, tremors, coughs, indigestion, low spirits, hysterical demeanor, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Dalrymple's Worm Lozenges are palatable and safe to be administered to the child even the youngest, and will thoroughly without pain and completely destroy the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Copper Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the facsimile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

Poetry.

THE QUEEN OF THE BALL.

She is a Queen of the evening, Queen of us all,
And we blind slaves fall at her feet:
"I will," saith Beauty, and lo! 'tis law
For the Medes and the Persians meet.

In a shower of feathery, cloudy lace,
Fastened o'er a robe of rose,
She is sailing along and the human tide
Of worshipers round her flows.

What hardeth she? 'Tis a matter of course,
Doth the rose not know she is fair?
And the jewels glitter with double pride
Enthroned on her chestnut hair.

Ceres, Lalage, Juno, and all
Fused into a glorious one;
She is Queen of the lesser sovereignties—
Do the stars not hide from the sun?

A heliotrope from her bonnet falls:
'Tis only her Highness' wile,
That a hundred lovers may strive for the prize
And She one be paid with a smile.

Shut she adjusts her diamond spray,
With a feigned unconscious grace;
It is studied every chapter and verse,
For the attitude suits her face.

Yet what a peerless beauty is she,
As her long, dark lashes veil
The melting black of her glorious eyes,
And she turns from red to pale!

Listening now, with a real joy,
To the old, old story, told
'Mid the clash of music the glitter of light,
Of flowers, and jewels, and gold.

Ah, well! 'Tis better to rule one heart,
Tell we in one love alone,
Than to play o'er dozens the tyrant's part,
And to sit on a ball-room throne.

Selections.

THE ABYSSINIAN EXPEDITION.

Colonel Sykes forwards to the London Times a letter from a friend attached to the Abyssinian expedition, which contains a racy account of some of his experience. The letter is dated Unoda, Nov. 6th. The following is the extract. "We commence our day at 4:30 a. m., getting up and riding out in different parties shooting. The jungle was full of game when we arrived, and we had our mess table well supplied with all kinds, but now they are getting shy and we have great difficulty in speaking the larder. We, however, manage to do it. This is a most peculiar country.—There seems to be but very few inhabitants. We are now in the low country, which is very poor indeed. You may ride for miles and perhaps not see any one, and when you do they are poor wretched half starved looking creatures, and both men and women have a strong resemblance to the monkey tribe. The men go about in the costume of our first parents, and the women with a skin tied round their loins; they have nothing on their heads at all, except wooly hair, which some shave off, except a tuft on the forehead; the ladies do the same but some shave between the tuft and the back hair. They are a very excitable race. A good many come to see us, and they think nothing of going up to a sepoy when eating and helping themselves unasked. Money is of no use here for small purchases. If we want milk we give rice in exchange, but in buying stock such as goats, mules, &c., dollars are taken. There is little or no cultivation. I have ridden a good deal about the neighbourhood, and have been long distances, but have only once seen a patch of ground over which a plough had passed. Our locality is certainly very pretty, high hills all around us, and we cannot get out any way without going through a pass. The soil is sandy and large stones—very nasty ground for horses. There are not any roads of any kind but simply foot tracks. The jungle is thick and full of sandal (Mimosa Arabica) trees, and the thorns touch us up occasionally. We have to go about armed and in parties, as the Jobo race attack and murder unarmed men, so our pistols are always loaded. We are rather "up a tree" about carriage. It seems the men did not understand the order, and brought with them about 200 weight of kit each man, instead of 40 lb and we shall have to leave a good number of pots and pans behind when we advance. It is said a regiment of infantry and one of cavalry will be left behind to defend the passes. Our horses do not get on at all. Whether their constitutions are bad, and are, therefore, unable to stand the reaction after being shut up for three weeks on board ship, or whether the grass they get is bad, I can't say; but we have lost sixteen since we landed. I am writing in a superior officer's tent, with a double fly, at 4 a. m. and the thermometer is at 96 degrees. I was awoke last night by my dog barking. Luckily I had got a light, as ——, who shares my tent was sick.—Gett ng out of bed, I heard a hissing noise, and rousing my friend and looking about we soon found a snake under my bed. On return from shooting this morning, I found one of the largest scorpions I have ever seen, snugly ensconced in a pair of slippers; the beasts are beginning to find comfortable places for themselves in our tents."

CAUTION TO SISTERS.—Harriet: I say, Charlie, I've been stealing some of your scent; but it isn't very nice—something odd about it—smell!" Charlie: "Not wiped your lips with it, I hope? It's the new stuff for my moustaches—brings 'em out an inch every night!"

A friend, having met Sheridan, asked him how he fared. "Oh," answered Sheridan, "I have turned over a new leaf, and now go on like clockwork." "Ay," replied the other, "tick, tick, tick."

A minister travelling through the provinces a few years ago, asked an old lady on whom he called what she thought of the doctrine of total depravity? She replied, Oh, I think it a good doctrine, if people would live up to it.

A young lady out West is so great a prude that she left the dinner table blushing the other day, because the servant put some bear meat before her.

CHEESE MAKING.

Mr. Hill the superintendent of the well known Dunham cheese factory, has written the following to a local paper on the important question of cheese making this interesting remarks cannot be too widely circulated:—

MR. EDITOR.—Permit me, through your columns to offer a few remarks on cheese making.

There is no branch of farming to-day that offers prospects of better or more permanent remuneration than the dairy. It has become a vast and widespread interest, and it is wonderful to see what advancement has been made within the past few years. It is only a few years since you would have seen our farmers peddling their cheese through the streets of Montreal for five or six cents a pound, now we begin to supercede that system where there was nothing but chance.

Instead of a few cheeses peddled in Montreal, we have cars, boats and ships freighted with propects of heards which are numbered by thousands, and yet to-day we are but at the commencement of dairy farming, and only at the threshold of a great interest that is to have a controlling influence on the wealth and prosperity of the nation.

It is on the point of flavor and quality that our efforts in the future must be directed; there is room for improvement, and an effort should be made in this direction. In manufacturing there are several points that are important to insure high flavor. The first is pure, clean, sweet milk when it goes into the hands of the manufacturer. If we expect to arrive at the highest and best flavor, manure dirt, or the dropping of an unclean udder, must be excluded from the milk, and the pails and all the utensils used in the factory and out must be kept clean and sweet. The nature of milk is very imperfectly understood by most farmers and dairymen. It is surprising what a small quantity of ferment will taint a large quantity of milk. It will be thus seen then that when the careless dairyman has not cleansed his pails or cans, or when he has been milking with dirty hands, or is not careful to exclude milk that is feverish or gargety, he is adding the leaver to the lump. When such milk is brought to a heat favorable to its development, it is of great damage, and causes the manufacturer trouble in flavour. New milk, such as the first, second, or third milking, makes bad work in securing flavor. We think tin pails should be used instead of wood, for the reason that they are easier kept clean. If the farmers could find some way to cool the milk as fast as it comes from the cow. I am satisfied a finer flavoured cheese could be obtained. Some of our heating apparatus is badly arranged, we want a uniform heat through every portion of the milk; high heat in any portion of the milk gives it a scorched flavor, besides injuring its quality in other respects. Heat should be slow and never higher than 105. Much of our bad flavoured cheese comes from tainted rennets; there should be more attention paid in obtaining sweet rennets, and some action should be taken at the annual meeting in disseminating correct knowledge through the country in regard to the selection and curing of rennets. The rennets obtained from Montreal are for the most part of a very bad character; many of the stomachs of the calves when they arrive in market are in a starved condition, the stomach highly inflamed, and on the point of putrefaction. Of course this is poison. Now to inoculate human food with this poison is a crime which should be stopped. We also get sheep and hogs mouths and other parts of animals that we cannot name. It is impossible to make fine flavored cheese from such a complicated mess of stuff. The farmers must save the rennets; if 10 or 12 cents will not pay for saving them, they must have more. I would remark here, the idea of making nice cheese among the sleaches of slops, whey and filth, is a great mistake, and is a thing that should be seen to. Cheese is an article that is very susceptible of taint, and no manufacturer can lead the market whose factory is surrounded by filth and where no attention is paid to cleanliness in conducting operations.

The questions is often asked, what effect does too much rennet have on the cheese? It acts the same as salt to make it dry and hard. Now if we fail to salt enough, we have a porous cheese; porous cheese come through different causes—want of salt, uneven salting, putting the curd to press before it is properly scoled, tainted rennets, tainted milk, or anything that will ferment.

I shall have to beg leave to differ with most cheese makers, in regard to the sour curd process. It is done because the cheeses are more easily taken care of, and will keep their shape better. I claim that the curd cannot go to the press too sweet after it has gone through the proper process which takes from 3 to 6 hours. Souring cheese takes away that rich, nutty, mellow taste that is required to make a cheese palatable. Another great mistake is in not greasing properly. When cheese is allowed to stand for weeks without dressing, the atmosphere absorbs the watery portion that should be retained, in order to secure a fine rich flavor, besides every pound lost in this way takes so much from the farmer. Making cheese is one thing and taking care of it is another. I think there is too little attention paid in taking care of cheese. A moist atmosphere is the best for curing cheeese; if the atmosphere is dry, the floor of the dry house should be sprinkled with water several times in a day.

Much more might be said but we leave the subject for the present.

Lotteries and Swindling.

A firm of rogues in Chicago, who sold many thousands of tickets for a fictitious lottery of silver ware and jewelery, and then ran away one night with the money found no difficulty in repeating their sharp practice in another city. These so called charitable gift undertakings, that was broken up by the police of New York transferred itself to Washington, and with the aid of franking privilege there, did a flourishing business. Tricks and quibbles are devised to cheat the law, and shams are set to cheat the conscience. The evil word lottery is carefully kept out of sight; the drawing is a distribution; the prizes are gifts; the wheel is replaced by some puzzling arrangement of certificates and envelopes. There must be no blanks, no bushels of pinchbeck breastpins and brass sleevebuttons, worth fifty cents a dozen, are thrown in, and every man gets a cheap picture at an exorbitant price.

And then what transparent impositions are practised to quiet the moral scruples of those who have been brought up in a holy horror of lotteries! To day, the scheme is for the benefit of the Masonic fraternity; yesterday it was to found an asylum for the orphans of soldiers and sailors.—an asylum to be built nobody knows where, and managed by nobody knows whom. Now, a hospital is to get some indefinite share of the profits; again the money is to go to a school. Sometimes the promise is not all a lie; the charitable object proposed does receive a bonus for the use of its name and character, while the lottery men of course, retain the lion's share; but in many cases not a penny goes to charity, and the concern is not only a 'nuisance' but a false pretence.

This mixture of charity and gambling is perhaps one of the worst features of the whole business, and we do fervently beg and hope that religious and benevolent institutions will hereafter set their faces against it. We do trust, after the demoralizing pace at which the lottery mania has run riot this winter, we shall have the money changers driven out of the temple, and swindling banished from the church.—We have no wish to be disrespectful; have not the clergy much cause, to blame themselves for the alarming spread of this popular passion for gambling, this thirst to be rich without working, this eagerness to buy a hundred thousand dollars with a five dollar bill? If a church wants a new organ, or a sunday school a new banner, or a parsonage a new carpet, the popular way to get it now a day is to set up a big raffle, in which a thousand people are expected to pay for a thing, and nine hundred and ninety nice of them don't get it. And we speak by the card when we say that church raffles are often notoriously conducted in a dishonest manner. If this sort of thing is respectable, it is not easy to see how one can censure the faro banks and keno shops. If the teachers go astray, it is no wonder the people run after the ignus fatus of sudden wealth. For pity's sake gentlemen, no more charitable swindling!—N. Y. Tribune.

Priestly Persecution of Freemasons.

A correspondent, writing from Havana, on the 19th ult., gives an account of the promulgation of an order which is aimed at the Freemasons of Cuba. He says:

The inquisition stands a fair chance of again assuming its ancient and powerful sway, in the dominions where modern civilization and advanced ideas of progress have not yet been able to separate things spiritual from things that belong, only to government and the welfare of nations.—The events of the past twenty-five years undoubtedly diminished the influence and power of the priesthood in Spain, but nevertheless have been insufficient to destroy their preponderance or their meddlesome character, so as to confine them merely to the task of attending to the care of wayward souls. No matter how badly they might be defeated on certain occasions they patiently persist in the course they have laid out, and, hydra like, again present themselves in attitude either to attack their opponents, or defiend the object they have in view. Among the many institutions and measures which for a long time have been a thorn in the side of fanatics and bigots, that of freemasonry occupies the front rank; and in no country has the society and its members found such bitter opponents as in Spain and its dependencies.—Enlightenment is not compatible with the ideas of bigots. The Masonic fraternity, although denounced by bishops and priests and prohibited by the laws of the realm, has assumed respectable proportions both in Spain and its colonies. Four lodges were known to be in existence here, and tolerated by the powers that be, the members being the elite of Spaniards and Cubans, some of them well known in the republic of letters and science, while others were equally distinguished for their probity and fair fame. Lodges were also organized in other cities of the interior, and until the Masons had the unheard of audacity of acknowledging themselves as such openly, by appearing with their regalia in the streets of Cienfuegos on the occasion of paying the last obsequies to a deceased brother member, no one belonging to the Government had openly interfered with them. This action capped the climax, and a few days ago an order by the acting captain-general was promulgated prohibiting all meetings or reunions of any secret society. I can barely believe that this section of the captain-general's was caused by the mere fact of a few men appearing in the streets in a peculiar costume, and am compelled to ascribe it to the machinations and influence of the priesthood, who still exercise such a powerful sway. Some extenuation may also be found in the reported fact that a certain physician, occupying a high rank in the fraternity, has tried to undermine and stain the laudable purpose of the order by attempting to use his influence therein for other views, said to be of a political nature; and if this really is the case, no blame can attach to the Court of Balmaseda, but he deserves all praise for protecting the important trust confined to his care.

A WORD TO YOUNG MEN.

There is a sad lack of earnestness among young men. To dress, smoke, talk twaddle and slang, and frequent places of amusement, seems with many to be the chief ends of life.

And even among those who profess religion, the time frittered away and misspent is something painful to estimate. The hours that might be devoted to useful study or active labour for Christ are spent in desultory reading, aimless sauntering through the streets, or shallow, profitless conversation. Some excuse their idleness by quoting the worn-out illustration of the bent bow, and say, "they must have a recreation." Recreation is necessary, but let it be of the right sort. We have a profound belief in the old saw, "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." But when Jack plays let him play sensible and in good earnest. We understand recreation to be creating a fresh of mental and physical power, and we have yet to learn that this is attained by reading sensational literature, engaging in empty talk or becoming deeply interested in questionable amusements. Young man, life was given you for other things than these. That wondrous nature, with its soaring hopes and depressing fears, its godlike intellect and deep instincts of immortality, is too valuable to be passed thus. And if any should read this who are lovers of pleasure more than of God and men, we would say to them, is there no soul to save, no heaven to win, no mind to adorn with beauty, no success to be achieved; are there wasters to be reclaimed, no tears to wipe away, no hearts to cheer, no feeble hands to be lifted up and strengthened; is there nothing to be done, that you should cast your manhood away on trifles, and spend your time on shadows that ever elude your grasp? Assume your true position in the world. Be earnest. Lead the van among the good and true. Grasp the weapon of prayer, and battle manfully against the evils that hold the world in thraldom. Lay hold upon the strength of God, and labor to bring in the time in which

Each man finds his own in all men's good,
And all men work in noble brotherhood.

A Boston paper says: A very delicate, simple, and beautiful machine has been constructed, which will take a portion of a tree, after, it has been cut the right length and breadth, and shave it up into thin ribbons as wide as a roll of house paper, making one hundred or one hundred and fifty to the inch. These rolls of wood are placed on the walls by paper hangers with paste and brush, precisely in the same manner as with paper. The wood is wet when used, and really works easier than paper, because it is much more tough and pliable. In three days, when variety is sought for, one can finish the walls of the house in different woods, to suit his taste. One room can be finished in bird's-eye maple, another in chestnut, another in ebony, another in white wood, and so on. Thus he has no imitation, but the real genuine article upon his walls. The eye tires of set figures such as we have in ordinary paper hangings, but never of nature itself. The longer the wood hanging remains on the wall the more distinct will be the grain and colour of the wood.

There was a bloodless duel in Doniphan County, Kansas, a few days ago, that afforded much amusement to the residents of Wathena. It appears that a Frenchman offered an insult to a prominent resident of Bellmont. The latter gentleman promptly challenged the Frenchman, who as promptly accepted the same. Preliminaries were arranged and the duel took place—the pistols, however, were loaded by the seconds with blank cartridges. The Frenchman fell, and a bloody handkerchief, close at hand was promptly wrapped around his prostrate form. The gentleman from Bellmont, confident that he had mortally wounded his antagonist, took to his heels to avoid arrest.

What a lovely spot for a residence Memphis must be! On Christmas day, a policeman was killed by a drunken party whom he was endeavoring to arrest. Another stray shot killed a German lad of 11; one negro boy was killed by another; and our despatch concludes by stating, with charming frankness, that some dozen persons, mostly negroes, were accidently shot during the day by the promiscuous firing of pistols loaded with ball. No doubt the promiscuous feature of the day's sport was especially amusing when a negro or two came temptingly near.

A lieutenant-colonel is one of the Federal regiments tells a story of General ——, who had command of an army corps during the siege of Vicksburg. "Yes, yes," said the General, "this seems to be a queer army; when not engaged in hostilities they are engaged in horse-stealing."

MUSICAL NOTE.—An eminent authority on musical antiquities assures us that he has the best possible reason to believe that the violin on which Tartini composed is celebrated "Reverie du Diable," was the only real and original fiddle-de-D—.

PARLIAMENTARY.

There have been no very important measures passed yet, but very many have been promised. On the 16th inst., Mr. Read introduced a bill to separate the Townships of Harcourt and Bruton from Burleigh, and to have them joined to other Townships of the English Company's Townships. The County Council have sent a memorial, praying that this be not done.

Several petitions have been presented, praying that no charter be granted to the Licensed Victuallers Association. This association, we believe, is nothing more or less than an association of whisky dealers.

A bill to authorize the publication of the Ontario Gazette has been passed. Arrangements are being made for its publication.

Another relative to appointing Magistrates and Coroners has passed.

The Act to amend the Municipal and Assessment Act is in the hands of a committee. We trust that due care will be taken, and that the necessity of yearly tinkering will be removed. Our Assessment and Municipal Laws have changed with the years lately.

On Monday the only item of importance reported was that of Sir H. Smith drawing the attention of the Government to the rumor of great distress among the fishermen of Nova Scotia. Mr. McDonald replied that the Goverment would likely bring in a measure next day to afford some relief.

On Tuesday Mr. Carnegie introduced a bill to amend the Act for consolidating the town debt, so as to enable the town to borrow $5,000 towards erecting bridges over Mud Lake and Pigeon Creek.

In Committee of the whole House it was agreed to grant $5,000 for the relief of the suffering fishermen of Nova Scotia.

Mr. Richards moved the House into Committee of the Whole on the subject of free grants of lands; the resolutions of the Government are to the effect that free grants shall be given in unsurveyed townships only, and only where land was arable. Timber and mineral lands are to be preserved under certain restrictions. The exemption of Homestead is proposed to be applied to these grants only, and that for a period of 20 years. The law is not likely to give satisfaction to any class of settlers. We will give more particulars of this bill next week.

We have pleasure in calling attention to the concert in the Music Hall to-night, and would advise everybody to attend. The concert is in aid of the funds of the Peterboro' Library Club; this would be a sufficient reason for giving them a good house, but a reference to the programme will show that they have provided a rich treat. They will receive the aid of a number of talented amateurs, and have secured the services of Miss Clayton, an accomplished artist and a great favourite with Toronto audiences. We hope to see such a house as will assure the Club that they have the sympathy of the community, and that they will be supported in the efforts to provide amusement of a high order. Tickets to be had at T. Meneely's and J. Stratton's book stores.

$3000 were raised for the Pope, in Montreal on Sunday and Monday last.

Who May be Elected as Reeve or Councillor.

We have heard some talk and there has been a little writing concerning some members of our County Council holding their seats illegally. For the benefit of our readers we may say that those members referred to are Mr. Carroll, Reeve of Burleigh, and Mr. W. A. Scott, Reeve of Harvey.

The clauses referring to qualifications are the 70th and 72nd. The 70th says, "The persons qualified to be elected Mayor, Aldermen, Reeves, Deputy Reeves, and Councillors, or Police Trustees, are such residents of the municipality, within which or within 2 miles of which the municipality or Police Village is situated, as are not disqualified under this Act, and have, at the time of the election, in their own right or in the right of their wives, as proprietors or tenants, a legal or equitable freehold or leasehold rated in their own names on the last revised assessment roll, of such municipality to at least the value" ; in Townships—freehold, $400, or household, $800; in Incorporated Villages—freehold, $600, household, $1200, &c.

The 72nd section says, "In case in a municipality there are not at least two persons qualified to be elected for each seat in the Council, no qualification beyond the qualification of an elector shall be necessary in the persons to be elected."

Those who urge that the Reeve of Burleigh holds his seat illegally only read the first clause, forgetting or passing over the second. It is a fact that there are only 4 persons on the Burleigh Assessment Roll for 1867 who possess the necessary property qualifications, hence, the 70th section will not apply to Burleigh. But by the 72nd section any elector may be chosen Reeve or Councillor. By the 75th section the electors are "the male freeholders whether residents or not, and the male householders of the municipality who have been for one month next before the election residents, &c., &c." The clause that requires residence, or a residence within two miles, is not applicable in the case of Burleigh, as will be seen by reading the 72nd section.

In regard to the Reeve of Harvey, Mr. Scott, the matter takes another shape. He stops a good deal in town at the hotel, but he keeps a boarding house in Harvey at his mills, and stops there very often. He has an office for business in town, and he has one in Harvey at his mills. the matter then would rest on the point which is his home, the house and place in Harvey, or the hotel where he is accustomed to stop while in town? We presume that the decision would be in favor of Harvey. Hence with the light of the 72nd and 75th clauses we are inclined to the opinion that no steps will be taken to unseat Mr. Carroll, as our confrere intimated lately. That Mr. Carroll "is not even an elector," is certainly false, for he is rated at, at least. $100 on the Assessment Roll, as we took the pains to examine for ourselves. We have taken the trouble to enquire into these things because we find that one or two well-meaning persons have been led away in part by false reasonings, and might in consequence do something that would get them into trouble and cost. We advise interested parties to read the statutes for themselves and not trust to others who may be desirous of leading them astray.

We learn that the South Monaghan Agricultural Society held their annual meeting on the 11th inst., in the School House of Section 3. After the election of officers for the present year, Mr. Edward Kerr, President, in the name of the Society, presented John Barnard, Esq., of Oakwood, formerly of South Monaghan, with a Diploma for the active part he had taken in organizing and getting the Society into successful operation. Mr. Barnard kindly thanked his old friends for the favor they had conferred upon him. We trust Mr. Barnard will meet with many warm friends in his new home.

A correspondent from Ennismore writes us:—"The Council of Ennismore have this day (January 20th) voted a sum of money to one James Murphy for acting as constable, but strange to say there are several warrants out for this model constable, and a number of peace officers from the town have spent much time in trying to arrest him, but so far have failed." Our correspondent surely does not mean that the Ennismore Council are granting a premium for lawless conduct.

Our friend the Review and Mr. Carroll have fallen foul of each other again, and some hard hits generally follow these encounters. We would remind our dear neighbor that he should not make assertions without proof as was the case last week, but we will leave the principals to have their own say in the matter, but advise kinder words.

BOY MISSING.—A French boy named Tonisee Pete, between 15 and 16 years old, has been missing from Peterborough since Sunday night last. He had on a suit of grey clothes and fur cap when last seen. His parents have made every enquiry but can find no trace of him, and fear that he has met with some accident. They will be very thankful for any information regarding his whereabouts.

BAND MASTER'S CONCERT.—Mr. Rackett intends giving a concert on Thursday evening next, in the Music Hall, when he will be assisted by Mr. Boswell, Comic Vocalist; Mr. James Dunsford, Harpist; Mr. Philp, Violinist; and the Battalion Band. We hope to see a full house.

John Shuter Smith, Mayor of Port Hope, has been appointed Clerk of the Executive Council of Ontario. He talks of resigning the Mayoralty. There is a desire, the Guide says, that he should retain the office, and that a chairman should be appointed to act in his absence.

Dickens has invested $15,000 in U. S. Bonds.

It is the intention of the Government of Ontario, to publish an Ontario Gazette.

On motion of Mr. Bennett, seconded by Mr. Calcutt, D. Haggart was appointed auditor for the current year. The Reeve named Jonathan Stephenson as the other auditor.

The Council adjourned, to meet on the first Monday of February at 7.30. p. m.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

THURSDAY.

The Council met. All the members present.

The Minutes were read and approved.

Moved by Mr. Carroll, seconded by Mr. Peck, That the Special Committee appointed to enquire into the report of a prisoner under sentence of hard labor being allowed to be at large in the town, be allowed to report. The report was adopted.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. S. S. Peck, That a memorial to the Legislature of Ontario on the subject of the Buckhorn road, was read a third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. Young the committee on the Drill Shed was allowed to report. The report was read and referred to the Committee on Finance.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Garbutt, that a memorial to the Local Government praying for the improvement and extension of the Burleigh Road, was read a first time.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Lang, the Council went into Committee of the Whole on the memorial. It was read without amendment.

It was then read a third time and passed.

The Council adjourned until ten o'clock on Friday.

FRIDAY.

The Council met. The Warden in the chair. All the members except Messrs. Choate, Lucas, and Scott were present.

The minutes of yesterday were read and signed.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. S. S. Peck, the Finance Committee was allowed to report a second time.

This was caused by the receipt of a letter from the Crown Land Office in reference to the resurvey of Burleigh, showing that there are 79,402 acres on Mr. Fitzgerald's plan; deduct 5,198 acres of water of Stoney Lake leaves 74,204 acres surveyed; cost, $3,710. 20. Crown Land Office paid for 65,114 acres viz., $3,255.70. The County had to pay for 9,090 acres viz., $454.50; of this $300 were paid at time of survey, the balance, $154.50 had to be paid now.

The Report was finally adopted after the different readings.

On motion of Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Coughlin, a By-law to provide for the payment of certain accounts and claims was read a first time. This By law was also read a second and third time and passed.

It was moved by Mr. S. S. Peck, seconded by Mr. Laing,—That 200 copies of a By-law, offering a reward for the apprehension and conviction of persons stealing horses, be printed and properly circulated through the county.—Carried.

This motion was passed because of a report that the people were ignorant of the By-law, and in obtaining information from lawyers often had to pay dearly for it.

Moved by Mr. Pearce, seconded by Mr. Peck,—That a memorial on the subject of the application made by the Canadian Land and Emigration Company to the Provincial Parliament be read a first time.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Pearce the memorial was read in committee of the whole. Mr. Pearce in the chair.

The memorial was read a third time and passed.

This memorial is to prevent action of the Legislature in separating certain townships of the English Land Company from Burleigh, to which they are now attached, and also with a view to prevent the settlers coming too much under the control of the Company during election times. The memorial is a wise one.

A memorial to the Government on the subject of the settlement of the wild lands was also prepared and passed.

Moved by Mr. Carroll, seconded by Mr. Garbutt,—That in view of the able, dignified and courteous manner in which the Warden, P. M. Grover, Esq., has presided over the deliberations of the Council during the past year, that the thanks of this body are due to him, and that a vote of thanks be and is hereby tendered to that gentleman.—Carried unanimously.

Moved by Mr. Peck, seconded by Mr. Laing.—That the sum of fifty dollars be granted to the Warden for extra services rendered to this Council.—Carried unanimously.

The Council then separated.

LOST THEIR GUN AND CAP.

A few fellows with more fun than pluck took upon themselves to call on Mr. Johnston Cooney, of Otonabee, for the purpose of a chiraviri; Mr. Cooney having thought fit to take to himself another and better half. Mr. C. having heard the fine fellows while fixing up his cattle, determined he would have a Canadian Ball's Run of it, and took the little hay fork in his hand down to his house. After a little, a rap comes to the door, which Mr. C. opened and beheld from twenty to thirty young frolicksome fellows outside, bent on some noise or some whisky. He, however, did not give time for much stir, but demanded what they were doing there, and made a race at them with his little hay-fork in hand. Then followed the general skedaddle. The captain, however, got a tip in the rear and fell in the snow, and on rising left his gun behind him, forgetting his firearms of course. Another prominent officer got upset with a touch of the fork handle and left his mark also, and on rising from his cold snowy bed left his night-cap, or rather his cap, which looks like a fireman's cap, or one of Her Majesty's volunteer head dresses. The run was complete, the field won, the enemy routed, a hard fought battle but not a man killed; one or two wounded fell to the rear, but beyond this there is nothing fearful to relate. Mr. C. keeps the gun and cap as tokens of victory, but will, we understand, give them up to their owners as a token of his appreciation of swiftness of foot (for he declares they were as light of foot as a young roe) if they go for them. Thus ends the affair. Hoping that I have not trespassed too much on your space,

I am yours,

A COWARDLY ACT.

Last week, as Mr. Kidd, Teacher of School No. 10, Smith (better known as the Stoney Lake School) was returning home in company with a person named Savoy, two ruffians, partly disguised, bounded from their ambush and assaulted Mr. Kidd in a most brutal manner, knocking him down and then kicking him, and all without any known provocation. On Tuesday they were brought before the Magistrate and fined one dollar each and costs, which was very trifling in deed for such a dastardly act. It is worthy of remark, that on the appearance of the two ruffians, Savoy made off as fast as possible, leaving Mr. Kidd to his fate, which showed that he had either complicity in the affair or at least did not wish to stop it, which he might have easily done, being a stout athletic young man. Such cowardly conduct cannot be too strongly condemned. The assailants, I learn, are not residents of Smith

HORRIBLE TALE OF CRIME.

A DYING MAN CONFESSES TO A MURDER MANY YEARS AGO—THE VICTIM BURNED ON A LOG HEAP.

(From the Goderich Signal.)

It will be fresh in the memory of our Goderich Township readers that at the time of the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. McIntosh, it was bruited about that a young man had disappeared many years before in a somewhat similar manner—no traces of his remains having been discovered. In connection with the fate of that young man there was a tale of horror known only to one person on earth, and, we are informed on pretty good authority, that remorse has at last wrung from the slayer the story of his crime, while he lay upon a dying bed, a few days ago. The story is this: About 23 years ago a young lad engaged as a laborer with a man then living up the townsaip. It soon transpired that the youth brought with him over $1,000 in money. The employer, moved by avarice, determined to possess himself of this money. But how? The old story; "Dead men tell no tales!" He easily made up his mind to do murder. One beautiful spring's day he took his gun, proceeded to the woods where the young man was at work, shot him through the heart from behind, dragged the dead body with a yoke of oxen, threw it on a log heap, and burned it to ashes. The money was secured, and the circumstances suddenly improved; but being rendered uneasy by the murmuring of the neighbors, who inquired into the youth's fate, and wishing to escape from the scene of his horrible crime, he removed to the States. There the demon of Remorse constantly gnawed at his soul, and he was forced in the face of death to unburden his guilty mind. We have not used names in the above, nor shall we do so until our information is more explicit.

THE GALLED JADE WINCES

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—It appears that my remarks anent the Railway By-law at the meeting of the County Council last Tuesday has stirred up the bile of Mr Thomas Wesley Poole, who though unacknowledged by the proprietor, is said to be the Editor of the Review. In fact, to judge by an article which appeared in the last number of that model sheet, under the caption of "Personal," the gentleman (?) named appears to be very much displeased with me, and whines and squirms as if he were hurt, He complains vociferously that my statement in relation to the conduct of certain newspaper men in reference to the Railway question is untrue and uses rather strong and coarse language in urging his denial expecting, doubtless, by the use of such language to carry conviction. Well, I shall not attempt to imitate the peculiarly polished style of the gentleman (?). I may be permitted to observe, however, that it is not often people get so dreadfully angry about statements that are not true; in fact, the wrath of Thomas Wesley on this occasion and the readiness with which he puts on the "cap" looks very suspicious. The public will be apt to conclude notwithstanding his denial that the cap fits him very snugly. But in the same breath in which he vehemently urges his denial Thomas Wesley with strange consistency charges me with relating private conversations in my allusions to the principles by which certain newspaper men are governed as explained and admitted by themselves. Now, if as Thomas Wesley says no such conversation as that referred to, occurred between any person connected with the Review office and me, what ground has he for charging me with being guilty of the "unmanly act of relating private conversations?" and then, on the other hand, if such a conversation did take place, it follows that he was equally wrong in charging me with a falsehood. Choose which horn of the dilemma you please Thomas Wesley. But the fact is there was no privacy whatever in connexion with the conversation referred to, the admissions were elicited in open discussion and by others as well as me, and became the subject of common conversation before being alluded to by me. It is agreeable, however, to learn that Thomas Wesley is improving in his manners, and that he now considers it unmanly to retail private conversations, it shows that the lessons recently taught him have not been altogether thrown away, and for this improvement in his manners the public I think will give me some little credit. If he will only continue to improve the time may come when respectable men will cease to dread his presence as they would that of a viper, and rather speak in whispers or walk away when he is known to be around.

Thos. Wesley affects to see railway contracts in connection with the Reeve of Burleigh, the current reports in that respect are no doubt confined within the walls of the Review office, and as it is not considered necessary now-a-days to contradict anything appearing in that sheet, I will let it pass, merely remarking that I have never had a word of communication in writing or otherwise with any person connected with the Cobourg railway, directly or indirectly, on any subject whatever; but Thos. Wesley is welcome to the diversion intended by putting this innocent fiction into circulation, the public will understand him. He is becoming honest as well as mannerly. He is shocked at the idea of my receiving mileage for attending the meetings of the County Council, and in his pious horror loses sight of the fact that I frequently travel the distance mentioned, and farther, to attend the meetings of Council, and also that I attend the meetings of the Council of my municipality without making any claim for mileage, although the law allows it. Thos. Wesley also ignores the fact that his remarks apply to others as well as me, and that we have a rather respectable prdecedent for our action in this matter. He is aware that a member of the Senate of the Dominion, a resident of a neighbouring county, represents a remote township in the Council of that county, and although residing in the county town receives mileage as though he resided in the county he represents. He is also aware that for years before it became lawful to do so, it was the practice of the Council of this and other counties to vote themselves mileage, and even a larger per diem than the law allowed. All this is well known to the meek and innocent Thomas Wesley, but in having a dash at me it was necessary to keep these facts out of sight. Thomas Wesley strains at a gnat, but he could not swallow a camel. Oh no! Yet some ill-natured people will argue that he can—hump and all, at one gulp. Well, suppose we investigate the matter and see. By reference to the Minutes it will be seen that Thomas Wesley Poole was employed by the Council of this county in the capacity of local Superintendent of Schools for the year 1865, and that he received payment for his services in that capacity. It will also be found, that in January following (1866) he was appointed Auditor. Now the law is strict and properly so, in regard to the office of Auditor. No person having "directly or iddirectly any share or interest in any contract or employment during the year previous," or the then current year, being eligible for such office. Yet Thomas Wesley Poole accepted the office of auditor for 1866, although at the time and for the year previous he held the office of Local Superintendent of Schools. The following is a copy of the declaration of office and qualification which he took and subscribed before P. M. Grover, Esq., J. P., on the 28th of January, 1866:—

"I, A, B, having been appointed to the office of Auditor for the Municipal Corporation of Peterboro, do hereby promise and declare that I will faithfully perform the duties of such office according to the best of my judgement and ability; and I do solemnly declare, that I had not directly or indirectly any share or interest whatever in any contract or employment with by or on behalf of such Municipal Corporation, during the year preceding my appointment, and that I have not any contract or employment (except that of Auditor) for the present year."

Now Thomas Wesley Poole knew right well when accepting the office of Auditor for 1866 that he was not qualified, and with the full knowledge of the fact staring him in the face one is amazed at his hardihood and the flexibility of his conscience in taking and subscribing the above declaration. In order that there might be no misapprehension about the matter and that the above declaration should be regarded with the solemnity and sacredness of an oath, section 421 enacts that "The wilful and corrupt making of any false statement in any declaration required or authorized by this Act, shall be a misdemeanor, punishable as wilful and corrupt perjury."

Thomas Wesley was appointed Auditor for 1867 and took and subscribed a similar declaration of office to the foregoing before John Walton, Esq., J. P., on the 22nd of January, 1867, and since the month of January last has been in the employment of the Council as Sessional Clerk at two dollars a day, in addition to the office of Auditor. This is the man who sets himself up as the arbiter of what is honest, honorable and manly! Ah, thou immaculate Thomas Wesley, why didst thou allow thyself to forget that it is a dangerous as well as a naughty practice for dwellers in delicately constructed glass houses to indulge in throwing stones.

In making this exposure I owe an explanation, if not an apology, to the public. I am aware that it is never well to draw the veil that covers the uglier features of our human nature, and it is with reluctance that I deviate from a rule at once wise and charitable. But when it is remembered that since last June I have been attacked from time to time through the editorial columns of the Peterboro Review, in a manner both cowardly and malicious in the extreme, it cannot be surprising that I should retaliate and use some of the means at my command in my defence. I have over and over considered Mr. Thomas Wesley Poole of falsehood, but no sooner does he find one position indefensible than he abandons it for another. He is too mean and dishonest to acknowledge defeat when beaten, but shifts his position and, coward that he is, attempts to stab in the dark from some other quarter.

I am, &c.,
JOHN CARROLL.

Colborne Board of School Trustees.

The following in relation to our new Principal, Mr. Dixon, we clip from the Colborne Express. It speaks for itself.

On Saturday evening last a special meeting of the Union Grammar School Trustees took place, when the following address, which requires no prefatory remarks on our part, was read and presented to Mr. Dixon:—

Farewell Address to J. B. Dixon, Esq., M. A., by the Board of Trustees of the Colborne Union Grammar School.

DEAR SIR,—It is with feelings of the deepest regret that we have learned your determination to resign the Head-mastership of this Institution, and that the bond by which we have been held together for twelve years past, is now about to be broken. We cannot allow this opportunity to pass without bearing testimony to the high estimate we have formed of your intellectual and moral worth.

We have always found you to be much interested in the progress and advancement of all with whom you have been associated—you have given your countenance and valuable assistance to everything having for its object the improvement of your neighbors and the amelioration of their condition—you have taken a deep interest in all religious and benevolent societies: and we therefore consider your removal to another sphere to be a great loss to this community.

We think it, however, a matter of congratulation to be able to say, that under your faithful and efficient management, the Colborne Union Grammar School has risen from small beginnings until it now holds a fair and promising position among the Grammar Schools of this land. This we attribute very much to the manner in which you have always discharged the duties devolving upon you, marked as it has been by great painstaking, by constant kindness to your pupils, and by persevering efforts for their welfare. You have succeeded we believe in awakening in the minds of your pupils an ardent desire for knowledge and information, which, in our opinion, is the great object to be aimed at by every instructor of youth. Such a work commenced in the mind cannot fail to produce good results, not only in this neighborhood, but, let us fondly hope, on the future of this New Dominion. The wave thus set in motion cannot rest until it reaches from one side of this land to the other. You have universally commanded the respect and esteem of the Students of this Institution, not only for the talents you have displayed in teaching, but also for the sympathy you have shown for them in their exertions. We can safely say that we have always committed the care of our youth into your hands with unshaken confidence. Having thus highly esteemed you it is scarcely necessary to say that we regret exceedingly your departure from our midst. You have been a partaker in the struggles through which our Grammar School has so successfully passed—you have been a sharer in all our anxieties for the advancement of education in this part of the country—and you have likewise shared in all the honors that attach to your unwearied efforts. We have great pleasure in calling to mind the fact that our school is now free from debt, and we believe you will be pleased when we say that the fees to those outside of our school section are now entirely removed. We have always found you advising the young men under your care to aim at a University education, and we rejoice not a few to have been prepared in this institution for prosecuting their studies with honor to themselves and credit to you at higher seats of learning. We feel glad also to be able to say that a large number of girls have received an education in your department of this institution, and we believe that, until some better and more suitable instruction has been provided for girls, they should obtain their present educational advantages intact, and we hereby tender our thanks for your late services against the attempt made to exclude them from our Grammar Schools, which if successful, would, in our opinion, be a most serious damage to our new and rising country. We cannot close this address without referring with pleasure to the Literary Association which has been a great source of attraction to this school, conducted as it has been under your presidency in a most harmonious and successful manner. And now, sir, in parting with you as a Teacher, we do sincerely pray that the richest blessings of Heaven may descend upon you and yours

REPLY.

Of J. B. Dixon, M. A., to the Board of Trustees of the Colborne Union County Grammar School:

GENTLEMEN,—In reply to your very flattering address, I beg leave, at the very outset, to express to you my sincere and heartfelt thanks for the kind and gentlemanly manner in which I have been invariably treated by you. We have been very intimately associated for many years, during which you have never once complained of my management of your affairs, nor have I had reason to find fault with you. It is true, as you state, that we have seen the school whose guardians you are, grow from small beginnings to a very honorable position among the Grammar Schools of Ontario. To this happy result, you have contributed fully as much as I. In the midst of financial difficulties and discouragements, you have nobly, manfully, and faithfully, stood by this institution.—Had you wavered, had you hesitated, this village would have lost a school which its inhabitants now regard with some degree of pride.—The darkest hour is past. I congratulate you that you are not only out of debt, but in a more prosperous financial condition than either you or I could have expected three or four years ago; while in other respects the present year has been the most successful this School has ever known.

I am glad to know that you heartily approve of what little I have done to advocate the right of girls to share in all the benefits to be derived from Grammar Schools, which ought to be, like our Common Schools open to both sexes on the same terms. In this school, at least, the girls have shown themselves to be equal to boys. The history of this Grammar School proves conclusively that the education of grown up boys and girls together is very far from having, as some contend, an immoral tendency. You are witnesses to the fact that, in twelve years, there has not been a single instance of impropriety growing out of the association of the sexes in the same classes and in the same room. If all other Boards of Grammar School Trustees manifested the same interest in the advancement of girls that you do, justice would be done and that speedily. Neither you nor I can see any good reason why two girls are made equal to one boy in distributing the grammar school funds. Let us hope that we shall never hear of such injustice again.

I am very much pleased to hear that you have made your school altogether free. In return for your liberality, the Counties' Council would do well to follow the example of Leeds, Grenville, Peterboro' and other Counties in granting the small amount required by law to be raised from "local sources."

The scholarships established by you at the beginning of the present year, have, I think, been productive of beneficial results. Four non-resident pupils—two from Cramahe and two from Haldimand—have availed themselves of your liberal offer. Percy has not sent any pupils on these terms, and, I have reason for believing that the fact of their establishment was not known in that township in time to bring in candidates for the last examination.—I would advise the continuance of these scholarships in a new form and your application to the Township Councils for the establishment of as many more.

I had desired a scheme for the establishment of two or three scholarships (open to all competitors) of the annual value of thirty or forty dollars, but of course I cannot now carry it out. I think there are in this Grammar School Circuit wealthy, enlightened and liberal gentlemen to furnish the means if the subject be laid before them.

I would recommend you to continue to distribute prizes of books, either annually or semi-annually. The rivalry which their distribution causes and the extra exertions put forth by the pupils amply justify such an outlay on your part.

I cannot speak too highly of the beneficial influence of the Literary Association which has been established in connection with this school. There has hardly been a meeting at which some of your Board have not been present. I consider this Association to be on a better basis than the Mechanics' Institute which flourished for so many years in this village and did a great deal of good. I wish the Literary Association a long, useful and prosperous career, and I commend it to your special care and protection. It may be made a centre of intellectual life and energy in this part of the country.

Having been so long Principal of your school, I cannot be indifferent to its future. I know you have a good and efficient staff of teachers in the common school department, and it affords me great pleasure to state that during this year they have all faithfully and honorably discharged the very arduous duties which devolved upon them. With you I leave the care of this Institution in all its departments, in the firm assurance that you will honestly discharge your duties to the youth of this village and Grammar School Circuit.

Already, (I say it with confidence,) this school has done its part in elevating the tone of the common schools of this county, and I hope you will continue to afford to teachers, every possible facility for prosecuting their studies here. The Common School, the Grammar School, and the University are only the links in one grand chain designed to elevate humanity and to develope the intellectual and moral energies of mankind. We have always endeavored to sympathise with the Common School on one hand and the University on the other and it is gratifying to know that we have had a good degree of success in both directions.

Finally, allow me to thank you again for all your kindness, and to wish you prosperity in this life and happiness and eternal felicity

"In the Land of Hereafter."

JAMES B. DIXON.

Colborne, Dec. 21st, 1867.

Below will be found a portion of a document issued by the priesthood of Ireland, in which some of their demands and grievances are set forth.

"Political economy will never do for a country like Ireland, any more than the ordinary food of health and vigor would do for the weak and sickly. The most exceptional legislation must be employed, the minutest knowledge must be obtained, the most perseveing local inquiry must be instituted, and a full, heart-whole, and, we should say, exclusive attention, pro*vince* by province, must be directed to discover and remedy Ireland's wants; and these things an English Parliament cannot perform. An English Parliament has already too much to occupy it; an English Parliament will always proceed by fixed principles applicable only to organized communities, and they will not do for Ireland; an English Parliament will have to command a combination of parties who know little of Ireland, and understand the necessity of entirely exceptional legislation—a thing absolutely essential to Ireland. And, above all, such a Parliament will never satisfy the cravings of a whole people whose intellects and whose hearts combine in the cry for nationality. A land tenure will accomplish something; removal of the Protestant ascendancy, by placing the Protestant Church in the same position before the State as the Catholic Church, will accomplish much; equality in education and the removal of the anomaly of giving a freedom of education on the condition of people giving up freedom, will do its share—and we will hail any and all of them with thankfulness; but we feel bound to say that when all of them have been granted, safety from foreign danger, perfect development of home resources, above all, the heart of this country will acquire nationality. Give Ireland her own legislature and the government of her resources—nationality and her federal amity will be a tower of strength to the empire. The country and people will have nothing to complain of any more—they will be themselves responsible for their own condition; conspiracies at home will have nothing to plot about, and conspiracies abroad can promise nothing which Ireland would not be ready to reject and resist. England will then be united to us by our best interests, and will be the protector of our most valued privileges, and the miserable conflicts of seven centuries will have an end. We conclude then, firstly, that Ireland is poor and helpless, not by any fault of the Irish race, but by the force and fault of English legislation. Secondly, that the said English legislation exercised its power, not only in pauperising Ireland for a season, but in destroying nearly all the sources of Irish national wealth, and thus making poverty a permanent condition of the country. Thirdly, that the danger to public order, both at home and from abroad, has been produced by said poverty and degradation. Fourthly, that the very nature of most of the remedies required to make Ireland rich and contented, makes it impossible for a British Parliament to adopt and employ them; and, besides, that home aspirations and the plea for Irish intervention from abroad can never be met unless by restoring Ireland her nationality, re-establishing the Sovereign and Lords and Commons of Ireland. Before the face of Ireland and the whole world we make this declaration—in the interests of heaven and earth—the present and the future. With the thoughtful men who sway the destinies of these kingdoms we leave the issue; but our own honor and conscience required that we should tell the truth and nothing but the truth, in the face of eventualities of which a Christian clergy should not desire to take the responsibility. We have discharged our duty, and on the statesmanship of England now rests the deeply important issue.

Hard Drinking Ending in Suicide.

A man named Wm. Anthony, 56 years of age, of Ellerby, Yorkshire, England, committed suicide yesterday p. m., by hanging himself. He has been some time in this country, labouring as a farm servant, and was in the habit of periodically accumulating a sum of money and then going on a "spree." Lately, as was his wont, he gathered up his loose cash and came to this city, putting up at the Cumberland House, on Yonge street. Here he remained until funds ran short. The people of the house, not wishing to turn him away, kept him until the place changed hands, when the new proprietors told him to get a situation, as they were not willing to accomodate him without proper remuneration. Up to two weeks ago he drank thewery hard; since then he has been sober and desponding. About half-past four o'clock, yesterday afternoon, the landlady spoke to him about his affairs, and he said that "at five it would be all right." He then disappeared. In about ten minutes he was found in the stable attached to the tavern, hanging by a clothesline from one of the beams, his feet touching the floor, his knees sl

This Company is organized for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of the west half of lot number Twenty in Concession A, in the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, and for the purpose of mining, smelting, and otherwise preparing for market, the ores of all kinds of metals and minerals, together with the acquisition, employment, and disposal of all lands, mines, or ores, or granting to others the right to mine, smelt, or prepare for market, the ores of all metals and minerals that may be found of advatage to the interests of the Company.

The already acquired property of the Company, the west half of Lot Twenty, Concession A, Galway, is extremely rich in Lead, Iron, Sulphate of Barytes, and Silver, quantities of each of which have already been taken by the promoters of the Company off this portion of the lot, which from the assays of Dr. Otway, show the following favorable results; Sulphur 23 per cent, Lead 17 per cent, Silver in Lead 16oz. 12dwt. 8grs., to the Ton, proving beyond a doubt the great value of the property. The original owners of the property have already spent about one thousand dollars in opening up the mineral veins that intersect the Lot, and in pushing an adit or tunnel through a hill upon the property.

The property is situated on the Bobcaygeon Road, about 12 miles from Bobcaygeon, at which place communication can easily be obtained to Lindsay or Peterborough, thence by the P. H. L. and R. Railway to Port Hope. Ore or goods can thus be transferred at all seasons from the property to Port Hope, or vice versa at a cost not exceeding $5 per ton.

The original Proprietors have already conveyed the property to the Rev. Mark Burnham, of Ashburnham, in trust to be reconveyed by him to the Company when organized.

The Trustee of the Company has a perfect title to the said parcel of land so that no delay need occur in commencing operations, and an immediate return on the capital invested may be anticipated.

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article, for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses: also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind, easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by moving from the air-cells the coagulable ice or that secretion which in Heaves clogs it causing a difficulty in breathing, and by action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions equalizing the circulation of the blood, restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a load hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I used everything I could hear of without benefit until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment. It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNIN

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches, Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Hamden's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mexican Liniment.

ED. SEELY

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1868.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in all time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the cork.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it on a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jest so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle says they were there "every time." If he feels "blue" in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"* * * * I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y.

"* * * * I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. * * The Plantation bitters have cured me.

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City

"* * * * I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. * * * The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES REMINGAY, St. Louis, Mo.

"* * * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 108 BROADWAY, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

CARELESSNESS.

Many persons neglect their horses' health and condition until it is too late, when at a trifling expense and no trouble the horse might have been saved if attended to in time. To all, who may have occasion to use an article of the kind we would confidently recommend "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine;" it is without doubt the best preparation in use, as thousands who have used it testify.

Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package.

SEWING MACHINES!

GROUT'S

New Twisted Elastic Three Corded Stitch

SEWING MACHINE.

THE undersigned has received the agency for the sale of Messrs. Grout & Co's. $15 Family Sewing Machine, which took the first prize and diploma at the last Provincial Fair held at Kingston, against all other Machines exhibited.

This Machine does all kinds of work, from the thickest to the thinest; works on Leather, Beaver and Woollen Cloth, Cotton, Linen and Muslin, using Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, direct from the spools without the trouble of rewinding. It will hem, fell, stitch, tuck, bind, braid, quilt, seam, gather, sew, or ruffle, or embroider, and do ornamental stitching in the most perfect manner.

The twisted stitch and the means of making it is peculiar, as it is produced by a rotating looper of peculiar construction, with a spur or cast off slide, and is so constructed that it is impossible to miss a stitch, besides being the most simple operation in the world.

All will see the great advantages of the twist given the thread, as each thread has a twist given it while forming the stitch, making it a three cord stitch, having greater strength than any other stitch, at the same time giving it great beauty.

Prices of Grout & Co's Sewing Machines, complete, with hemmer, braider, extra needles, screw driver, clamp, book of instructions to enable any one to operate it at once, $15; Machines plated and pearled from $18 to $25; tables and treadles, $6; extra needles, 75 cents per dozen; full supply of oil, silk thread, &c., for sale.

ALSO,

Raymond's $12 Sewing Machines

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will eat less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

FOR PURIFYING THE BLOOD.

And for the speedy cure of the following complaints; Scrofula and Scrofulous Humors, Scrofulous Tumors, Ulcers, Sores, Erysipelas, Pimples, Pustules, Blotches, Boils, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

CARLISLE, Ind., 6th June, 1866.

J. C. AYER & Co. Gents: I feel it my duty to acknowledge what your Sarsaparilla has done for me. Having inherited a Scrofulous habit, I have suffered from it in various ways for years. Sometimes it breaks out in Ulcers on my hands and arms; sometimes it forms internal and disgusses me on the stomach. Two years ago it broke out on my head and covered my body and arms with sore sores, which were pronounced by a leading physician, I tried many remedies and several physicians, but without much relief from any thing. In fact, they do rather grow worse. At length I was recommended to read in the Gospel Messenger that you had prepared an alterative (Sarsaparilla), as I knew from your statement that any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. Raw and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. My skin is now clear, and I know by my feelings that the disease has gone from my system. You can well believe that I feel what I can express when I tell you, that I hold you to be one of the agents of the right hand remain ever gratefully, Yours,

ALFRED B. TALLEY.

St. Anthony's Fire, Rose or Erysipelas, Tetter and Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Ringworm, Sore Eyes, Dropsy.

Dr. Robert M. Preble writes from Salem, N. Y., 12th Sept., 1866, that he has cured an inveterate case of Dropsy, which threatened to terminate fatally, by the persevering use of our Sarsaparilla, and also a dangerous Malignant Erysipelas by large doses of the same; says he cures the common Erysipelas by it constantly.

Bronchocele, Goitre or Swelled Neck.

Erskine Simon of Prospect, Texas, writes: "Three bottles of your Sarsaparilla cured me from a Goitre—a bad case resting on the neck, which I had suffered from over two years."

Leucorrhœa or Whites, Ovarian Tumor, Uterine Ulceration, Female Diseases.

Dr. J. S. S. Channing, of New York City, writes: "I must cheerfully comply with the request of your agent in saying I have found your Sarsaparilla a most excellent alterative in the numerous complaints for which we employ such a remedy, but especially in Female Diseases of the Scrofulous Diathesis. I have cured many to-day—one case of Leucorrhœa by it, and some where the complaint was caused by ulceration of the uterus. The ulcerations themselves were cured. Nothing within my knowledge equals it for these female derangements."

Blood Disorders, Boils, Carbuncles, Blotches, Blains, and all Skin Diseases.

Edward S. Morrow, of Newberry, Ala., writes, "A dangerous carbuncle humor on one of the children in my family, which had defied all the remedies we could employ, has at length been completely cured by your Extract of Sarsaparilla. Our physician thought nothing but extirpation could afford relief, but he advised the trial of your Sarsaparilla as the last resort before cutting, and it proved effectual. After taking your remedy eight weeks no symptom of the disease remained."

Syphilis and Mercurial Disease.

NEW ORLEANS, 20th August, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I cheerfully comply with the request of your agent, and resort to you some of the effects I have realized with your Sarsaparilla.

I have cured with it, in my practice, most of the complaints for which it is recommended, and have found its effects truly wonderful in the cure of Venereal and Mercurial Disease. One of my patients had Syphilitic sores in his throat, which were consuming his palate and the top of his mouth. Your Sarsaparilla, according taken, cured him in five weeks. Another was attacked by secondary symptoms in his nose, and the ulceration had eaten away a considerable part of it, so that I believe the disease would soon reach his brain and kill him. But it yielded to my administration of your Sarsaparilla: the ulcers healed, and he is well again, not of course without some disfigurement to his face. A woman who had been treated for the same disorder by mercury was suffering from this poison in her bones. They had become so sensitive to the weather that on a damp day she suffered excruciating pain in her joints and bones. She, too, was cured entirely by your Sarsaparilla in a few weeks. I know from the remedy, which your agent gave me, that this Preparation from your laboratory must be a great remedy; consequently, these truly remarkable results with it have not surprised me.

Fraternally yours, G. V. LARIMER, M. D.

Rheumatism, Gout, Liver Complaint.

INDEPENDENCE, Preston Co., Va., 6th July, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER: Sir, I have been afflicted with a painful chronic Rheumatism for a long time, which baffled the skill of physicians, and stuck to me in spite of all the remedies I could find, until I tried your Sarsaparilla. One bottle cured me in two weeks, and restored my general health so much that I am far better than before I was attacked. I think it a wonderful medicine. J. FRIAR.

John V. Gerhart, of St. Louis, writes: "I have been afflicted for years with an affection of the Liver, which destroyed my health. I tried every thing, and every thing failed to relieve me; and I have been a broken-down man for some years from no other cause than derangement of the Liver. My beloved pastor, the Rev. Mr. Kapp, advised me to try your Sarsaparilla, because he said he knew you, and any thing you made must be good. I sent to Cincinnati and got it, and used it till it cured me. I took it, as you advise, in small doses of a teaspoonful over a month, and used almost three bottles. Raw and healthy skin soon began to form under the scab, which after a while fell off. Schirrus, Cancer Tumors, Enlargement, Ulceration, Caries and Exfoliation of the Bones.

A great variety of cases have been reported to us where cures of these formidable complaints have resulted from the use of this remedy, but our space here will not admit them. Some of them may be found in our American Almanac, which the agents below named are pleased to furnish gratis to all who call for them.

Dyspepsia, Heart Disease, Pile, Epilepsy, or Falling Sickness, Neuralgia.

Many remarkable cures of these affections have been made by the alterative power of this medicine. It stimulates the vital functions into vigorous action, and thus overcomes disorders which would be supposed beyond its reach. Such a remedy has long been required by the medical of the people, and we are confident that this will do for them all that medicine can do.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

FOR THE RAPID CURE OF

Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Hoarseness, Croup, Bronchitis, Incipient Consumption, and for the Relief of Consumptive Patients in advanced Stages of the Disease.

This is a remedy so universally known to overpass any other for the cure of throat and lung complaints, that it is useless here to publish the evidence of its virtues. Its unrivalled excellence for coughs and colds, and its truly wonderful cures of pulmonary diseases, have made it known throughout the civilized nations of the earth. Few are the communities, or even families, among them who have not some personal experience of its effects—some living trophy in their midst of its victory over the subtle and dangerous disorders of the throat and lungs. As all know the dreadful fatality of these disorders, and as they know, too, the effects of this remedy, we need not do more than to assure them that it has now all the virtues that it did have when making the cure which have won so strongly upon the confidence of mankind.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. V. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed near all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and immediately fatal that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. If on taking and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms:

Deranged appetite, associated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes violent fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and if administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

N. B.—A few Holloway's Worm Lozenges, and take no other. Sold by Medicine Dealers everywhere. 22

Poetry.

HURRYING ON.

Hurrying on in the midst of excitement,
Pushing extravagant projects through,
Few of us know or pause ever to question
Even to ask where we're hurrying to;
Hurrying on over blessings unheeded,
Casting some joy, like the butterfly, gone,
What is the good of our wonderful frenzy
What is the use of hurrying on?

We have been hurrying on from our cradles—
What but its shadows have for the past?
We are still hurrying on as expectant—
What shall we get for our hurry at last?
Graves are so thick that we cannot well miss them
Going with only the clothes we shall wear;
Where shall be, then, all we're hurrying after?
What shall we have with our hurry when there?

Hurrying on in the wake of the phantoms,
Conjured alone in the fever of haste,
Hurrying on with extravagant projects,
Little we reck of the treasures we waste;
Little we think of the diamond moments,
Wealth or Eternity planted in time.
The soil for it a seed growing barren as ashes,
While we are yet hurrying out of its clime.

God works but slowly—but slowly my brothers—
Not hurrying onward in passion and strife—
Works with Love only, and only for others,
Not for himself in the green fields of Life.
Let us sit down, and be calm and be thoughtful—
Lifting our hearts to Eternity's brink—
Let us cease living alone for the present,
Let us cease hurrying—what do you think?

Selections.

A TIME TO DANCE.

BY REV. WILLIAM PATTON, D. D.

We claim for promiscuous dancing the authority of the varied experience and the great name of Solomon, as well as the sanction of the Word of God. This is not only the logic of the irreligious, but many professors of religion thus defend the practice of dancing as an amusement. These latter persons will be thankful for a candid examination of the Scriptures on this subject. If they clearly sustain the custom, then it may be followed with no misgivings and with the assurance that they are in the line of duty. And if the Scriptures do not sanction promiscuous dancing as an amusement, then they will not be misled, but will conform their practice to the obvious rule of propriety.

We will admit, for the present, that Solomon settles the matter that there is "a time for dancing"; that is, a proper time. But you will notice that he does not tell us when that time is, nor under what circumstances it is proper to dance—whether at sunrise or midday, at sunset or midnight; for it would be as criminal to dance at the wrong time as not to dance at the right time. Religious persons in this country will agree that the Sabbath is not the proper time, though we cannot tell how soon the Parisian fashion may control even here. Professors will admit that dancing as an amusement would not be proper at a meeting for prayer or religious inquiry. Nor would it be well to mingle the sound of the viol with the broken-hearted sobs of widowhood and orphanage at a funeral. It would shock the good sense of the community to read that the last night of the condemned murderer was spent in his cell with his friends in the merry dance. As there are many times when it would not be proper to engage in dancing as an amusement, it is strange that Solomon, so wise and thoughtful, had not settled the question absolutely by designating the proper time; but in vain do we look for any hint from him in that direction. There are only three ways in which we can regard his language: These we shall notice,

IS IT A COMMAND?

If so, then dancing becomes a duty binding upon all, and especially upon all professors of religion—the old, the young, ministers, elders, deacons, vestrymen, and the whole rank and file. But a dancing minister, elder or deacon, would hardly be endured by any Evangelical church. But if the words of Solomon, "a time to dance," are a command, we do not see how the officers of the church can perform their whole duty if they neglect dancing personally, and by exhortation urge it upon all the members. To forbid ministers would be as bad as the Roman Catholics, who exclude their priests from marriage, which is one of their seven sacraments. The context will not allow us to receive the words as a command, for it reads, "a time to kill, to break down, and to rend," etc.

IS IT A PERMISSION?

Does not Solomon, by this language, permit those who feel inclined to dance to engage in it as an amusement? Precisely the same permission that he grants to those who feel inclined "to kill" to engage in that as an amusement. By no principle of interpretation can we get from that text a permissive sanction for dancing that we do not equally get for killing. As Solomon has thrown no guards around any one to shield them from the assassin's knife, then all are equally exposed, and the assassin is permitted to make his choice, and, when arraigned for murder, plead at a bar the Divine permission as given by Solomon. We cannot allow this; therefore, permission for dancing must be given up.

TRUE MEANING.

The King of Israel simply states the conclusion to which his observation had led his own mind; which was, that there are times when men do kill, heal, break down, build up, weep, laugh, mourn, dance, rend, sew, love, hate, make war and peace, etc., etc. But he leaves the responsibility for these acts with the persons who perform them. These form the great items of history in every age. "To everything there is a season, and a time to every purpose." Eccl. iii. 1.

KIND OF DANCING.

As the words of Solomon give no intimation of the proper time to dance, so they are equally silent as to the kind of dancing which is proper and scriptural. The kind now in fashion is promiscuous dancing, or dancing in which males and females unite, and in some of them personal juxtaposition is a peculiarity. Solomon does not tell us whether the men danced by themselves, or men and women mingled promiscuously. As he is silent upon the very important part, we are driven to other portions of the sacred volume for light. The word, in its varied forms, occurs about twenty-six times. An examination of these would exhaust the scriptural testimony. These easily range themselves under three aspects.

AS A SOLEMN RELIGIOUS ACT.

When the Red Sea was passed safely, then the grateful nation expressed their thanks to God in songs and dances.—Ex. xv. 1. Miriam, then not less than ninety years old, "took a timbrel in her hand; and all the women went out after her with timbrels and with dances." Again (Judges xxix., 19–23) we read of the annual religious festival at Shiloh, where dancing formed a part of the service. David also "danced before the Lord with all his might" on the occasion of the removal of the ark (II Sam. vi. 13–14), for connected with this was the sacrifice of oxen and fatlings. In Ps. cxlix. 3, he says, "Let them praise his name in the dance"; and, cl. 4, "Praise him with the timbrel and the dance." In all these cases the dance was not an amusement, but an act of religious worship. It occurred among a people accustomed to express both joy and sorrow by violent external action; joy by the dance and loud shoutings; sorrow by wailing and tearing the hair and garments, strewing themselves with ashes, and disfiguring the countenance.

The world's people do not desire the dance as a religious act. Nor have we yet heard that professors of religion put their dancing parties on the same ground as they place the prayer-meeting and the preparatory lecture, as a solemn religious service. To mingle prayer, the reading of the Scriptures, and an exhortation not to be conformed to the world, with the sound of the viol, the polka, and the reel, would be regarded as an unequal yoking of diverse kinds. It would shock piety and dampen amusement. It is amusement and not worship; it is pleasure and not religion—that is sought after. Thus far the Scriptures only speak of dancing as a religious service.

AS A PUBLIC EXPRESSION OF JOY.

When Jephthah returned from his conquests, his daughter, as an expression of her thankful joy, "came out to meet him with timbrels and dances."—Judge. xi. 34. When David came back from the slaughter of the Philistines (I Saml. xviii. 6), "the women came out of all the cities of Israel singing and dancing." This incident is referred to in two other places, in each as an expression of grateful thanks, but never as an amusement. When the Prodigal Son returned, the father, in his gladness killed the fatted calf, and the elder brother, when he drew near the house heard music and dancing.—Luke xv. 35. It was the way that people in that age expressed their joyful gratitude. The prophet (Jer. xxxi. 4 and 13), as also the Psalmist (xxx. 11), tell of the tabret and dances, as the evidence of blessings restored; and when affliction is sent upon them, he speaks of the dance turned into mourning.—Saml. v. 15. The utter ruin of Babylon is noted by satyrs dancing there.—Isa. xiii. 21.

CONNECTED WITH EVIL.

When Moses came nigh unto the camp (Ex. xxxii. 19) he saw the calf and the dancing. This was the golden calf, and with shoutings they danced before it in idol worship. This did not please Moses, for "his anger waxed hot." It was when the Amalekites "were spread abroad upon the earth, eating and drinking and dancing" (I Saml. xxx. 16) that David smote them. As then, so now eating and drinking are associates of dancing as an amusement. "The harp and the viol, the tabret and pipe, and wine, are in their feasts; but they regard not the work of the Lord, neither consider the operation of his hands."—Isa. v. 12. When Michal, the wife of David, "looked through the window and saw him leaping and dancing, she despised him in her heart."—II Saml. vi. 16. The reason is thus explained (verse 20) "How glorious was the King of Israel to-day, who uncovered himself to-day in the eyes of the handmaids, of his servants, as one of the vain fellows shamelessly uncovereth himself." She thought it unbecoming in him, as the king, to dance, even as a religious act. For in that day dancing, as a personal amusement, was so incongruous with respectability that it was practised only by the "vain fellows." Cicero in his day says, "No one dances unless he is either drunk or mad." The respectable Romans had hired dancers; persons whose trade it was to dance for pay, and not for their own amusement. In Mat. xiv. 6, we read that the daughter of Herodias danced before them and pleased Herod. The treacherous result was that John the Baptist was murdered. The stubbornness of the Jews was illustrated by those who would not dance when they were piped unto, nor would they lament when they were mourned over.—Mat. xi. 17.

There remains only one more passage, Job xxi. 6–15. Here the worldly prosperity and fulness of pleasure is set forth; but the contemplation of it deeply affected the pious patriarch. "I am afraid, and trembling taketh hold of my flesh." "They send forth their little ones like a flock, and their children dance. They take the timbrel and harp, and rejoice at the sound of the organ. They spend their days in wealth." The result: "Therefore they say unto God, Depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thy ways."

CONCLUSION.

Having thus carefully examined every text in the Old and New Testament in which the word occurs, we are led to the following conclusions:

1. That dancing was a religious act among idolaters as well as the worshippers of the true God.

2. That it was practised as the demonstration of joy for victories and other mercies.

3. That the dances were in the daytime.

4. That the women danced by themselves; and the dancing was mostly done by them.

5. No instance is recorded in which promiscuous dancing by the two sexes took place.

6. That, when the dance was perverted from a religious service to mere amusement, it was regarded disreputable and was performed by the "vain fellows."

7. The only instances of dancing for amusement mentioned, are of the worldly families described by Job, the daughter of Herodias, and the "vain fellows" Neither of these had any tendency to promote piety.

8. That the Bible furnishes not the slightest sanction for promiscuous dancing as an amusement, as practised at the present time. The dancing professor of religion must not deceive himself with the impression that he is justified by the Word of God. If he still holds on to the practice, let him find his justification from other sources, and say frankly, I love the dance, and am determined to practice it, Bible or no Bible.

CONVERSATIONAL FAULTS.

Every child is early admonished of the rudeness of interrupting a person while speaking. But why this caution should be confined to children we cannot imagine. Their rudeness is the least provoking of any. They are the exhibitions that we meet in general society that mar our comfort most and excite our surprise. Even among adults we learn to be patient with impetuous natures, whose strong and ungoverned feelings touched by some spark in your words, go off like bombs, past all power of restraint.

But the aggravated offenders are those who interject your conversation with comments and hints, or vexatious corrections, or meddling smartness, and so take from you all pleasure of fluency. Just as you are coming to the nut of a story, they quietly drop a sentence which tells the whole, and leaves you with only the mortifying remnants. It is a jest that is loaded in your hand. They slyly step behind you and pull the trigger, leaving you empty as an exploded gun-barrel.

Sometimes a single word, like a drop of ink in a tumbler of water, will change the color of a whole statement. You cannot repel it nor answer it, for it attacks nothing, says nothing positively, but only fixes in the mind certain suggestions.

There is an infliction of this evil equally vexatious. It is when a shrewd tip comments in your ear, whisperingly astir, upon the remarks or address to which you are listening. It may be that you are not of a retentive countenance. A ludicrous word dropped just right, sets you into a laugh, irresistible just in proportion to its unpoliteness. You seem to mock the person speaking, while the arch whisperer sits demurely, without blame, as innocent as a dove.

Yet less bearable are the comments of conceited persons upon some performance to which you wish to give your attention. While a symphony is performing, they interpolate it: "Sublime," "Fine, very fine, don't you think so?" "Rather dull, that." During a discourse they are perpetually setting their remarks upon your ears, bringing you back to a consciousness and contempt. They sing in your ears like mosquitoes, they alight upon you as flies in summer days, only you are debarred the pleasure of aiming a slap at them. It is seriously to be considered whether, where this is the case, a hearty box on the ear would not be entirely proper, moral, and reformatory?

But there is another rudeness which, if less frequent, is equally annoying. It is the rudeness of the talkers and not of the interrupter. Many will ask you a question and answer it themselves; they will find fault with you and race forward with remarks so as to prevent any explanation; nay, they will aggravate the matter by putting stupid replies in your mouth, and then answering them. "Don't speak, I know what you are going to say; but it is not so, for," etc., etc.

Many persons have a very cool way of seeing what you think, and insisting upon it; they saw it in your eyes, or in your face, and will permit no denial. Sometimes you are caught upon a turbulent stream of talk which sweeps you down in the most ludicrous way. You are whirled around and overwhelmed with the rushing talk, which you cannot answer or get rid of or modify. A man of opposite politics pours at you for half an hour, misstating your position, charging you with all manner of absurdities, exaggerating facts, and abusing you and your friends and your party, and all the world generally, while you are like a man being played on by a fire engine—disheveled, soused, half smothered, and rolled up into a ridiculous heap.

Ought no some mark to be put on such men to warn every one of their danger?—We mark dangerous places on the highway; we put up a sign on a dangerous road. And yet these are less dangerous! Why should not men wear some badge significant of their propensities? Why not put signs upon dangerous people?—Episcopalian.

AN IMPROMPTU POEM.—Mrs. Hannah More was reproved by a gentleman for taking snuff. He observed he had never heard one good reason urged in favor of the practice. She replied she could give him half a dozen, and immediately repeated the following:

You say six reasons are enough
To justify my taking snuff.
First you'll allow in every nation
Two prejudice of education;
The fashion, too, you must confess,
Weighs with the ladies more or less;
Which to dull company confined,
It serves to stimulate the vacant mind.
It next affords us some protection
Against the dangers of infection;
And twenty more it may not suit your taste,
It snows a hand, an arm, a grace.
And if you'll have another still,
What think you of a woman's will?

A Screech from the Bird of Freedom.

From the N. Y. Rowdy Journal.

Let freedom awake and let tyrants quiver! We are aware that the words we have written will be instantly forwarded by the contemptible British cable to the stagnating courts of swaddled Europe, to show the despots that their schemes are unmasked. We know that the Lords of the Exchequer and Chancellors of the Admiralty, agents of the effete monarchy of St. James' will hold frightened councils over our revelations. Let them do their worst, we defy them! Already we are informed by a despatch specially provided for by the enterprise of ourself, and our son, the Fenian patriots, having destroyed the city of London, are marching on the great metropolis of Glasgow. Already revolution waves its bloody flag like goats of ensanguined gore, over the trembling meadows of Wales and the frightened valley of Newcastle-on-Tyne. We rather think an infamous aristocracy and a pestulent monarchy have enough to do without attacking us, but if they have not, let them come on! Whilst the glorious guardian of our blood bought and triumphant liberties—the illustrious American eagle—watches sleeplessly over us we have nothing to fear. Let the sparvined and ringboned British Cat remember that while our eagle holds in one claw the shield that protects the best government the world ever saw, in the other he grasps the linchpin of the universe! They will deserve their fate who meddle with thee, sempiternal, millifluous and majestic Bird!

Our present word is done: we calmly await the result. We can only repeat, in conclusion, the immortal warning uttered by Cicero (the great Roman General) on the eve of battle:

"Cujus muscovado, imperatrix quamquam Et harum paro magna fuit!"

STATISTICS OF THE BIBLE.

The Scriptures have been translated into 148 languages and dialects, of which 121 had, prior to the British and Foreign Bible Society, never appeared; and 25 of these languages existed without an alphabet, in oral form. Upwards of 43,000,000 of those copies of God's word are circulated among not less than 600,000,000 of people.

The first division of the divine oracles into chapters and verses is attributed to Stephen Langton, archbishop of Canterbury, in the reign of King John, in the latter part of the twelfth century or the beginning of the thirteenth. Cardinal Hugo, in the middle of the thirteenth century, divided the old testament into chapters, as they stand in our translation. In 1661, Athias, a Jew of Amsterdam, divided the Sections of Hugo into verses—a French printer had previously (1561) divided the New Testament into verses, as they are at present.

The entire Bible contains 66 books, 1,188 chapters, 31,185 verses, 770,692 words, 3,566,480 letters. The name of Jehovah, or Lord, occurs 6,555 times in the Old Testament. The shortest verse in the Bible is John xi, 32. The nineteenth chapter second of Kings, and Isaiah thirty-six are the same. There is a Bible in the library of the University of Gottingen written on 5,476 palm leaves.

A day's journey was 33 1 5 miles. A Sabbath day's journey was about an English mile. Ezekiel's reed was 11 feet, nearly. A cube is 22 inches, nearly. A hand's breadth is equal to 3¾ inches. A finger's breadth is equal to 1 inch. A shekel of gold was $8.09. A talent of silver was $516.32. A talent of gold was $13,909. A piece of silver or a penny was 13 cents. A farthing was 3 cents. A mith was 1¼ cent. A homer contained 75 gallons and 5 pints. A hin was 1 gallon and 2 pints. A firkin was 7 pints. An omer was 6 pints. A cab was three pints.

The commemorative ordinance of the Jews were:—Circumcision, the seal of the covenant with Abraham; the passover, to commemorate the protection of the Israelites, when all the first-born of the Egyptians were destroyed; petuate, the sojourning of the Israelites for forty years in the wilderness; the feast of pentecost, which was appointed to be held fifty days after the passover, to commemorate the delivery of the law from Mount Sinai; the feast of purim, kept in memory of the deliverance of the Jews from the wicked machinations of Haman.

A tall, keen eyed countryman walked into a court room during the progress of a trial. Stepping up to one of the "ring," he requested that the prisoners might be pointed out to him. The lawyer being somewhat of a wag, pointed to the jury. The stranger surveyed them critically, when, turning to his informer, he remarked; "Well, they are a hard looking set, aren't they? I know by their looks they ought to go to Kingston, every one of them!"

What can be a more desolate spectacle than an old maid sitting on an inverted half-bushel, in a cold kitchen, with her feet on the brim of a slop bucket, paring her corns with a case knife, by the light of a tallow candle. Our "junior" P. D. thinks that an old fogy bachelor, sitting in the dark, supping ox-tail soup with a fork, and letting his angry passion rise because he cannot get a decent mouthful, is infinitely worse to gaze upon than the "pictur" mentioned above.

At a crow ed concert a young lady, standing at the door of the hall, was addressed by an honest Hibernian who was in attendance, 'Indade Miss, I should be glad to give you a seat, but the empty ones are all full.'

Fellow deserve honor and have it, than to have it and not deserve it.

An acceptance at sight—receiving a black eye.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE.

THE ELECTION LAW.

Mr. H ary Smith moved the second reading of the Bill No. 7, to amend Chapter 6 of Con. Stat. of Canada, respecting elections of members of the legislature. He said he believed no subject was more worthy of the earnest consideration of Parliament, than purity of election. It was the object of this bill to take one step in that direction by reducing the days of polling from two days to one, and having the nominations all over the country simultaneously. It were idle for hon. gentlemen to attempt to conceal from themselves and the country the fact that bribery and corruption existed, to a very great extent, in this country, and that they would continue to exist, unless the Government would come forward to aid in the adoption of measures like the present, which would shorten the period of elections, would prevent the means of communicating from one poll another, and do away with the abominable practice of voters holding back their votes to the second day, to see what more they could get for them. Experience had shown that it was on the second day that bribery and corruption usually took place.

Mr. McKellar was happy to find that the Government were prepared to support this bill. Some amendments, he thought, might be made to the bill in committee. In Mr. Doron's Bill, there was a form of oath which he considered infinitely superior to that now on the statute-book. It required any one, whose vote was objected to, to swear that he was the owner, occupant, or tenant of the property to which the vote was attached. The committee, he hoped, would consider the propriety of substituting that oath for the present one, which enabled a man to vote if his named happened to be on the voters' list, although it had no right to be there.

Mr. McLeod approved of the principle of the bill. He only regretted that the gallant knight did not go further, and propose the introduction of the ballot—(Cries of "hear, hear," and "no! no!") There had been a great advance in public sentiment on this question in the mother-country; and he thought the time had arrived when the ballot might be introduced here, as a preventive of bribery and corruption.

Sir Henry Smith said he found that, in Mr. Doron's bill, as originally introduced, polling places were provided for every 300 voters. Subsequently, when the restriction of polling to one day was not carried, 600 voters were taken as the maximum.—Of course, the restriction of the polling to one day necessitated a larger number of polling-places; and he would be ready, in committee, to accede to any amendment which would save that effect. It had been suggested to him, whether in towns and cities the polling should not take place on the day after nomination. The suggestion he thought, was worthy of consideration.

Mr. Boyd said it had been shown, at the last election, that bribery and corruption were widespread through our constituences, and ought to be dealt with by this house.—If he was correctly informed, tavern-keepers had gone to candidates, with lists of voters, alphabetically arranged, offering them at so much a head. Gentlemen in office had gone and offered bribes, for the purpose of gaining their ends. The ballot had been suggested as a remedy. He did not stand here to advocate the ballot.—But he would say the ballot was not so objectionable as some honorable gentlemen might be disposed to conceive. It was used in Germany, in Australia, in New Brunswick; and what was in use in other British colonies could not be called anti-English, if introduced here. He thought it no objection to the ballot, that it was in operation in the United States. We had derived from that country several important features of our Confederation Act.

Mr. Gibbons was strongly in favor of the principle of having only one day's polling, and hoped yet to see the ballot-box come into use. Now that the election-law had been taken up by the House, he trusted those two cardinal points would not be lost sight of.

The bill was then read a second time, and referred to a special committee, consisting of the Hon. Attorney-General McDonald, Hon Mr. Cameron, and Messrs. Blake, Pardee, R. Scott, Ferrier, Tett, Lauder, and the mover.

A correspondent of a Boston exchange says:—"The records of the Surveyor's office show an aggregate of long lumber surveyed here during the past season amounting to 206,500,000 feet, a quantity little less than that of the last previous year, but much exceeding the average of years before. In addition to this we have also exported some 125,000,000 shingles, 115,000,000 laths, 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 clapboards, besides large quantities of other kinds of small lumber, such as pickets, sugar and fruit boxes, &c., besides ship timber and railroad sleepers. To carry on this commerce by water we have had vessels numbering 2,741 in arrivals and clearances each. The amount of manufactured lumber now on hand is unusually small, owing to the sudden closing of the river by ice and consequent stopping of the mills. Only some 20,000,000 or 25,000,000 feet remain. Some 75,000,000 feet of logs are, however, on hand ready for the saw as soon as the river opens, which may be sufficient to meet the demand of the early spring market. Our lumbermen are now busy at work in the woods and are thus far having a favourable season. A less amount of logs will be put in than has been customary, averaging, perhaps, two thirds of the usual crop. This together with that which has been kept over, will give our people the supply which all our customers may demand."

Europe.—The Italian budget for 1868 shows a deficit of revenue amounting to the startling sum of £20,000,000, with a floating debt of about $125,000,000. It is proposed to tax flour, wine, oil and silk, to meet the current expenses, while the sales of church estates will be set aside to liquidate the floating debt. France, too, is behindhand in the matter of revenue. During the last thirteen years only, under Napoleon's Cæsarean policy, the public debt has been increased one hundred and thirty per cent, and with increasing taxation the population remains stationary. The armies of Europe are the most costly items in the government expenditure; there is not a power of any importance in Europe at the present time that is not materially strengthening if not numerically increasing, its forces, and adding new weapons and improved projectiles to its armaments. The consequences are apparent. It is broadly stated that there is not a single government in Europe, except England, able to meet its annual expenditure by taxation.

Insurrection in Spain.—The Herald's London special says:—A despatch from Madrid says news from the provinces of Aragon and Catalonia read: A speedy rising is anticipated in favor of the eldest son of Don Juan. The widow of Don Carlos has sent 40,000,000 of regis to aid the insurrection.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO.

The business of the House is progressing slowly, but this arises, we presume, not so much from indolence or opposition as from preparing a great deal; at the close of the session there will be need of watching pet schemes. We do not think that there is any strong desire to do wrong, but on the contrary there is every appearance of reasonably wise administrations.

FREE GRANTS.

Mr. Richard's Bill for free grants to actual settlers went through a second reading on Monday, yet it is not likely to give anything like satisfaction. The government propose to give grants of 100 acres to settlers, who are to be bound to reside on said lot 5 years before a patent shall be issued, during that time they must clear at the rate of three acres each year, and build a house at least 16x20 feet. They can use any timber on the land they clear, for buildings, but not off the remainder of the lot, and if they sell any timber off the fifteen acres they must pay timber dues. Thus, that which very often is the only means of procuring a living during the first two years of settlement is cut off. All new settlers know that they can raise very little of anything the first year, and if they cannot use a few of the trees that may be on the lot to procure the necessaries of life, they will be forced to leave for some other part where they may be able to obtain money or bread for their families. This measure may be calculated to prevent settlers cheating the government, but assuredly it will also prevent settlers going on at all, and especially those who have small means, and they in nine cases out of ten are the men who go in to get a home. It will be found that those who go in to lumber under pretence of going in to farm, are those who have some means, at least enough to provide food for a winter and perhaps a little more. They do not require to raise much from the soil, and turn their attention to saw-logging and square timber, hoping to do better than by clearing the land, whereas the poor man goes in with no other hopes but in what he may raise, and at once directs his attention to that object, and it is too bad that he will not be allowed to use the timber to a certain degree beyond the few trees on 15 acres. He should at least be allowed to dispose of timber to such an amount as would aid in supplying his family with food, if required, and for those trees let him pay government dues, he if prevented doing so, he will be forced to go where he can provide food and clothing.

If the Government be determined to carry out those measures, they should prohibit all interference by lumberers or others with the timber on those grants, for the five years, and thus leave the settler the timber, for very often this is all that is valuable. It is not true, however, that all pine lots are useless for cultivation. Many of them, no doubt, are [illegible] but some lands are covered with a variety of timber trees, and very [illegible] pine on five or six lots where all is [illegible] pine timber, and yet the settlers must not use or dispose of any of it to aid him for a year or two. If the early settlers of some of our finest townships had been treated in that way, the lands of those townships now supporting thousands of a population would still be a wilderness. No hasty legislation should take place on this very important question, and whatever is done should be for the interest of the settler. Surely our Government's existence, or ability to meet current expenses, does not depend on a few old pine trees, or are the pines worth more than settlers.

INDEPENDENCE OF PARLIAMENT.

Sir H. Smith's Bill for the independance of Parliament, received a six months' hoist in Mr. Smith's absence, although nothing can be clearer than that such a Bill is needed. The Bill excluded from a seat in Parliament, any person deriving emoluments from the Crown through the Dominion government, as well as office holders in the Legislatures. The government opposed it, and the result was a six months' hoist.

DUAL REPRESENTATION.

Mr. Blake's Bill to prevent the same individual sitting in both Parliaments, was also defeated, but by an almost defeat for the ministry. The vote stood 32 to 30. The passing over of one man would have been a defeat. The division some time since that left Mr. Blake in the minority, was boasted of, and large letters indicated the way it was received by government pap hunters, will they be honest enough now to tell their readers that the scale required just one vote to turn it? This indicates the mind of the House, and is a warning to beware of opposing good measures too strongly.

COUNTY COUNCIL.

S. S. PECK, Esq., REEVE OF MINDEN, WARDEN.

The Reeves and Deputy Reeves of the different Municipalities met on Tuesday. All the members were present but the Reeve of Burleigh, who was absent in Toronto and had not then returned.

The names prominent for the honors of Warden were John Walton, Esq., S. S. Peck, Esq., and P. Pearce, Esq. The usual caucus meetings and trials of strength had of course to be gone through, and for some time outsiders could form no idea of the coming man. The change of one man would give it to either. Mr. Peck, however, prevailed, Mr. Walton consenting to leave the way.

Mr. Scott, seconded by Mr. Probert, proposed Mr. Pearce; and Mr. Miller, seconded by Garbutt, proposed Mr. Peck.

The vote was 11 to 7.

In our opinion each of the candidates had claims, but of course the strength of the claims will be considered from different stand points. Mr. Walton is an old and efficient member of the County Council, and represents the second wealthiest municipality in the county, besides this almost one half of the electors of the west riding considered him fit to represent them in the Parliament of Ontario; and not having been Warden before, his claim was considered a strong one, and indeed the change of one man would have given it to him. Mr. Pearce also, is an old and efficient member of the County Council, and a very active member too, but we think that his having been elected Warden twice before influenced one or two who voted for Mr. Peck. Mr. Peck's claims seem to have been more forcible, and in consequence he was successful. He will, no doubt, fill the honorable and responsible position in a becoming manner. It is no small honor to the back country to send a man considered worthy of being elected Warden. When he took his seat he thanked them for the honor shown him and the confidence thus expressed, and assured them that he would endeavor to perform the duties of the office faithfully, and with a due regard to the interest of the whole county; he would also depend on them for kind co-operation, as he would also be directed to a great degree, by the wise council of the senior members.

The minutes were then read and approved.

On motion of Mr. Pearse, a Special Committee consisting of Messrs. Scott, Young, Probert Miller Walton, Garbutt, Fogers and Coughlin was appointed to name the standing committees of the season.

Mr. Scott moved to have W. Wood, Esq. appointed Sub-Treasurer for Harvey. This was referred to the Committee on appointments. The motion was made at this early period in the session because at present there is no Sub-Treasurer for Harvey, and consequently no one to pay the teachers of Harvey the apportionment now due from the municipal school grants for the past year.

On motion of Mr. Probert, J. J. Hall, Esq., was reappointed auditor and C. Burton, Esq, was named by the Warden as the other auditor. On motion of Mr. Scott, Dr. Poole was appointed Sessional Clerk.

The Council then adjourned till 10 o'clock on Wednesday.

And on motion of Mr. Pearce the memorial was read a third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. Probert, seconded by Mr. Pearce, the Warden was authorized to correspond with the Warden of Victoria relative to employing a man to work on the Bobcaygeon road during the summer months, [illegible] the [illegible] of the [illegible] ways and small bridges on said road.

Moved by Mr Lang, seconded by Mr. Miller, that the Clerk of this Council be and he is hereby instructed to request the County Solicitor to prepare without delay a draft of a bill to legalize the resurvey of the townships of Burleigh and Harvey, with a view to enable this Council to recover from the said townships the proportion of the cost of the said resurvey advanced by this Council, and that the members of the Ontario Legislature for the townships of this County be requested to further the passage of the same.—Carried.

On motion of Mr. Probert, seconded by Mr. Scott, Messrs. Rogers, Pearce, Lang, Walton, Caughlin and the Warden were appointed a Special Committee to report on the House of Refuge question, and to report as soon as possible to this Council.—Carried.

TWO O'CLOCK SESSION.

The Council again met.

Moved by Mr. McDonald, seconded by Mr. Pearce,—That Mr. Bloomfield, Secretary of the English Land and Emigration Company, be heard before the Council with regard to the memorial addressed to the Legislature opposing the separation of the Townships of Bruton and Harcourt from Burleigh.

Mr. Bloomfield addressed the Council.

On motion of Mr. F. Peck, seconded by Mr. McDonald, Messrs. Pearce, McDonald, Miller, Lang, Probert, Scott and Rogers were appointed a Committee to enquire into the matter of separating Bruton and Harcourt from Burleigh, to report at this session of the County Council.

The Warden laid on the table a letter from Mr. Carnegie, M. P. P., in reference to petitions which have been forwarded to the government against the Harvey and Burleigh resurvey Act, and a copy of the objections contained in the petitions.

On motion of Mr. Lang, seconded by Mr. F. Peck, the communication was referred to the Finance Committee.

On motion of Mr. Pearse, seconded by Mr. Coughlin, a memorial to the Legislature on the subject of a bridg across the narrows on the Trent was read a first time.

On motion of Mr. Pearse, the Council went into Committee of the whole on the second reading.

It was afterward read a third time and passed.

The Council adjourned till ten o'clock to-morrow.

WAS IT UNMANLY?

Our readers are, no doubt, all familiar with the recent debate in the Legislature at Toronto, in which one Thomas Ferguson characterized the reference made by Mr. Blake to certain doings of Ex-Crown Land Com. Campbell in the late elections as "unmanly," inasmuch as the individual reflected upon was not present. The Simcoe man's words and deeds differ somewhat.—He appears much better able to inculcate the precept than to offer the example of personal bravery and perhaps his miserable attempt to help his friends out of one of the most dispicable acts ever perpetrated in this country would pass unheeded were the sentiments which he expressed not shared in by, at all events, another—Mr. Secretary Cameron—who followed him, from whom considering his profession of political purity, better might have been expected.

Mr. Blake deserves the thanks of every right-minded man for bringing forward Mr. Campbell's letter, and the plea of that gentleman's absence from the House was a poor one to urge without anything in addition to excuse his conduct. The plea itself is a bad one. Something similar occurred in the House of Commons in 1864, during a debate on Mazzini and the Greco conspiracy, when Mr. Disraeli said:

"I think the observations of the hon. member for Bradford ought not to pass altogether unnoticed. (Hear, hear.) He has drawn the attention of the House away from the question before it, and the position which he has laid down is one which the House of Commons ought not to recognise. (Hear, hear.) It is the right of the House of Commons, and it ought to be its duty when necessary, to observe on the conduct of absent men. (Hear, hear.) It certainly is not necessary that M. Mazzini should be a member of this House to give us a right to comment on his conduct.—(Hear, hear.) I thought that the remark made the other night by the Prime Minister went nearly to the root of all Parliamentary criticism (hear), when he complained of an attack on a Minister of the Crown who happens to have a seat in the other House of Parliament, because he was an absent man. ("Hear, hear," and a laugh.) We are advancing in that theory, and, according to the principle of the hon. member for Bradford, there is not a foreign Potentate or a Foreign Minister whose conduct we can call in question. [Hear, hear.] It is too absurd to notice, and it is not for that purpose I rose. But what I want to call the attention of the House to is the real point for their consideration.

We commend Mr. Disraeli's observations to M. C. Cameron, they may do him good. We would appeal also to the reasoning powers of Thomas Ferguson if we could discover any in him.

The Concert in connection with the Literary Club last Thursday evening was a complete success; all the performers acted their parts well. The attendance was reasonably good, and the Club was enabled to meet expenses and have a few dollars to spare. We had not the pleasure of being present during the whole of the first part. "Two Merry Girls are we," by Miss Clayton and Miss Parnell, was well received; an encore to this was excellently performed. Mrs. W. W. Smith also sang some beautiful pieces. Miss Kennedy at the piano and Messrs. Rackett, Buller and Kennedy of the band performed a quadrille. A duett, "A., B., C., by Miss Parnell and Mr. Johnston was deservedly encored. The star of the evening, Miss Clayton, appeared to great advantage, easy in manner with a clear, well-toned voice, and perfect control of it, together with a willingness to use it, and a very agreeable disposition; she was always received with raptures. She sang six or seven times during the evening without the least appearance of weariness. Her last piece, "Beloved Star," was sweetly rendered, indeed. The committee deserve the thanks of the citizens and of the club for their success in procuring her services. We learn that they intend having another concert in a few weeks and are determined to provide some of the best musical talent. We hope they will be successful again and that the citizens will, by their presence, encourage the efforts of the Club to provide such treats of amusement during the winter evenings.

Wesleyan Missionary Services.—In connection with the above mission, sermons will be preached at the Wesleyan Church, Peterborough, on Sunday, the 9th February, and on the evening of Tuesday, the 11th of February, the annual "Missionary Meeting" will be held. Several eminent ministers from a distance, together with the resident clergymen, will address the meeting.

Anniversary Services of Canada Presbyterian Church.—The anniversary services of the above church will come off on Sunday next, the 2nd day of February.—At 11 o'clock, the Rev. Mr. Laing, of Cobourg, will preach; at three o'clock the Rev. Mr. McDonnell, of Peterborough; and at six o'clock, p. m., the Rev. Mr. Chiniquy, of Illinois, will preach, and we have no doubt but that the large building will be crowded each time. The annual soiree will take place on Monday. Tea will be served about five o'clock, and afterward addresses will be delivered by several Rev. gentlemen, Mr. Chiniquy was a Roman Catholic priest, of Lower Canada; but he left that church some years ago and has directed all his energies since to the establishment of Protestant principles amongst the French who have settled in Illinois. Many efforts have been made to defeat his work, but in vain. It will be worth while going to hear his own story of his labours, we therefore bespeak a more than usually full house.

Mason's Theatre—"Ten Nights in a Bar Room."—The above heading on one of Mason's bills induced us to make our first appearance at a theatre, on Tuesday evening last. A great deal of the play was to the life. "Sample," a genuine Yankee bar-room loafer, acted his part well. "Slade," the tavern-keeper, who had been a miller, was, we hope, a misrepresentation of tavern keepers generally. But "Joe Morgan," as a drunkard, a sot, in delirium tremens, at the death-bed of his daughter, raving in those terrible fits, yet with with some glimmering of reason and affection, and "Joe Morgan" as a reformed man, was the best part of the whole, and was well done. Of the moral effect of such plays we purpose saying a few words next week.

The people of Toronto have sent $2,500 to the suffering fishermen in Nova Scotia. The Mayor of Cobourg has called a meeting of the citizens to consider what can be done to relieve those fishermen in distress in Nova Scotia. This is not a bad way to soften the hearts of the Nova Scotians towards Canadians. The Grand Trunk Company have agreed to carry 200 bbls. bulk from Toronto to the suffering district, which, it is said, is equivalent to a subscription of $210. The Hon. Mr. Archibald says, from one to two thousand families will require aid for several months.

Mr. Hough, of the World, has been elected a councillor for the Town of Cobourg, beating his brother, of the Sun, by 4 votes. We rarely find the World and Sun opposing each other.

The Cobourg Sun comes to us now enlarged, in a new dress, and full of reading matter. The Sun must be shining brightly on its proprietor. We wish his light may never be overcast.

SMITH COUNCIL.

DUMMER COUNCIL.

Dummer, Jan. 20th, 1868.

The members elected for the year 1868, convened at the Town Hall at noon, and made and subscribed the declarations of qualification and office.

The following sums were ordered to be paid:—To Mr. Wm. Moore, as chain bearer for Mr. Bolger $1; To Mr. T. Menzies, for book &c., 78 cents; To Mr. Wigmore, taxes remitted, $6.52.

On application of Mr. John Wason, the amount of his shop licence was reduced from $40 to $30.

On motion, Mr. H. Drain was appointed Assessor, and his salary fixed at $40.

A By-law to establish a road; a By-law to repeal By-law No. 170, relating to shop Licenses; a By-law to appoint Auditors and Assessor; and a By-law to provide for the payment of certain sums of money, received their several readings and passed.

Council adjourned to the 29th day of February next.—Com.

The New Regime.—L'Ecconomist shows a frightful waste of public money at Quebec by the multiplication of employes. It says that in addition to thirty-eight permanent employes (who are helping the House to do little or nothing) thirty-seven temporary ones have been appointed to assist them, making seventy-five in all for our sleepy Legislature of Quebec. Of these, thirty-one are messengers, or nearly one messenger to every two members of the Chamber. The salaries of the permanent staff amount to $30,100 per annum; and those of the temporary, to $30.50 per day. These appointments are said by L'Ecconomist to be debts contracted at the election; and that the spectacle of such a great expenditure is regarded with more distress by the Finance Minister (Mr. Dunkin) than any body else.—Witness.

Belmont and Methuen Council.

The Councillors elect met at Garrison's School House on Monday, the 20th inst., according to law. The Clerk declared Peter Pearce, Esq., Reeve, and Messrs. W. E. Young, J. A. Wild, A. W. The Minutes of the last meeting were read and signed.

On motion of Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Dafoe, Mr. John Boyd was appointed an auditor for the present year.

The Reeve appointed Mr. W. W. Armstrong as the other auditor.

On motion of Mr. Young, seconded by Mr. Dafoe, Wm. Rae was appointed Clerk for the present year.

On motion of Mr. Dafoe, seconded by Mr. Preston, Mr. Joseph Doupe was appointed assessor for the year 1868.

Moved by Mr. Preston, seconded by Mr. Young, that the printing for this municipality be done at the Examiner Printing Office for the present year.—Carried.

Belmont, 24th Jan., 1868.

The Papal Loan.—Mr. Robert Murphy, New York, agent for the Papal loan, writes to Alfred Larocque, Esq., the Montreal agent for the same,—that if any of the bonds which have been bought or sent as presents to the Pope, he (the Pope) can either destroy them, or keep them as his own personal property. We did not know of what use these Papal bonds were likely to be; but this is certainly a use for them that we did not foresee. Mr. Murphy says that he has already received a great number of them as presents from the faithful.—Witness.

Paris, Jan. 24.—The semi-official La Patrie, in an editorial, observes that Russia is the only power not now in harmony with the rest of Europe. Efforts of a character to tranquilize the public mind and give assurance of prolonged peace are singularly antagonized by the fact that every power in Europe is actively engaged in arming itself, as if for anticipated war.

Two Questions Easily Answered.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Dyas's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

The Great Eastern Steamship.—Unlike any other exhibition, we believe the sight of this noble vessel has given good satisfaction to the thousands of persons who travelled to Quebec to view her, and well repaid them for their outlay; and it is just so with the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," there never was anything that gave such satisfaction, it relieves pain almost instantly, and is the finest thing in the world for rheumatism, neuralgia, and pains in the stomach, &c. 25 cents will buy a bottle of it. Sold by all Medicine Dealers.

The following lines have been sent us, with a request to publish them, which we do, contrary to our usual rule, as there is no name attached.

IN MEMORIAM.

RESPECTFULLY INSCRIBED TO MADAME LEON CAISSE, NEE.

BY E——

They carried him forth in mournful array,
From all he so fondly cherished,
And it seemed to their hearts under grief's wild sway,
That all joy on earth had perished.

Oh, say, did not love show its power there,
O'er these burning hearts of ours;
He was dearer than life to those mourners fair—
He had strewn their path with flowers.

And the wail that rose from their hearts to heaven,
As the last long look was taken,
Oh, it told of the depth that God has given
To the soul by sorrow shaken.

And the rites of the Romish faith were done,
The pealing organ sounded—
The lights burn'd brightly, departed one,
By the white robed boys surrounded.

The altar gleam'd, in its sable shroud,
With the torches love had lighted,
While lowlier there the faithful bowed,
Sorrowful and affrighted

Dulcet the tones of that Latin prayer,
Above the dead recited,
And then, while manhood weeps, they bear
Him from that dome, grave-plighted.

Slowly along the snow-clad earth,
The sad procession wended,
Lost Leon! Hope speaks of a heavenly birth,
Now thine earthly course is ended.

And in that home, where thou wert the sun,
That hope dries the widow's tear,
It soothes C——d——l——a, the gentle one,
And thy dark-eyed Ell——m——r.

Among the shining angel throng,
While seraph's notes control the strain,
Thou sing'st the saved's celestial song,
And wouldst not come to earth again.

MARRIED.

WEBBER—McKEE.—On the 22nd inst., by the Rev. J. H. Johnson, M. A., at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. George Webber, of Peterboro', to Miss Elizabeth, youngest daughter of William McKee, Esq., of the township of Smith.

VERY NATURAL.

When a person has proved an article and found it good, and answering the purpose for which it is intended he will not readily abandon it for one of doubtful reputation or concerning which he knows nothing. We are led to make these remarks owing to the course always pursued by those who have used that celebrated and truly valuable horse medicine known as "Darley's Arabian Heave Remedy"—all are so well pleased with it that they will not use any other; many have waited several weeks until the agent could obtain a new supply. There is nothing equal to it as a condition Medicine, or for any complaint affecting the wind of horses.

This Company is organised for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of the west half of lot number Twenty in Concession A, in the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, and for the purpose of mining, smelting, and otherwise preparing for market, the ores of all kinds of metals and minerals, together with the acquisition, employment, and disposal of all lands mines, or ores, or granting to others the right to mine, smelt, or prepare for market, the ores of all metals and minerals that may be found of advatage to the interests of the Company.

The already acquired property of the Company, the west half of Lot Twenty, Concession A, Galway, is extremely rich in Lead, Iron, Sulphate of Barytes, and Silver, quantities of each of which have already been taken by the promoters of the Company off this portion of the lot, which from the assays of Dr. Otway, show the following favorable results; Sulphur 23 per cent, Lead 77 per cent, Silver in Lead 16oz. 12dwt. 6grs., to the Ton, proving beyond a doubt the great value of the property. The original owners of the property have already spent about one thousand dollars in opening up the mineral veins that intersect the Lot, and in pushing an adit or tunnel through a hill upon the property.

The property is situated on the Bobcaygeon Road, about 12 miles from Bobcaygeon, at which place communication can easily be obtained to Lindsay or Peterborough, thence by the P. H. L. and B. Railway to Port Hope. Ore or goods can thus be transferred at all seasons from the property to Port Hope, or vice versa at a cost not exceeding $5 per ton.

The original Proprietors have already conveyed the property to the Rev. Mark Burnham, of Ashburnham, in trust to be reconveyed by him to the Company when organised.

The Trustee of the Company has a perfect title to the said parcel of land so that no delay need occur in commencing operations, and an immediate return on the capital invested may be anticipated.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article, for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentlemen:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.

Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensable article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harnden's Express

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SELLY."

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beast, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. It is safe and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Westbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

Saratoga Spring Water, sold by all Druggists.

"Jes' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said: they were there "every time" if he felt "owly" in the morning, he took Plantation bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

" • • • • Iowe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

" • • • • I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. • • • he Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

" • • • • I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. • • • • The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEININWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

" • • • • The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

AGUA DE MAGNOLIA.

A toilet delight. Superior to any Cologne, used to bathe the face and person, to render the skin soft and fresh, to allay inflammation, to perfume clothing, for headache, &c. It is manufactured from the rich Southern Magnolia, and has obtained a patronage quite unprecedented. It is a favorite with actresses and opera singers. It is sold by all dealers, at $1.00 in large bottles, and by DEMAS BARNES & Co., New York, Wholesale Agents.

Helmstreet's inimitable Hair Coloring is not a dye. All instantaneous dyes are composed of lunar caustic, and more or less destroy the vitality and beauty of the hair. This is the original Hair Coloring, and has been growing in favor over twenty years. It restores gray hair to its original color by gradual absorption, in a most remarkable manner. It is also a beautiful hair dressing. Sold in two sizes 50 cents and $1 by all dealers.

C. HELMSTREET, Chemist.

Who would not be beautiful? Who would not add to their beauty? What gives that marble purity and distingue appearance we observe upon the stage, and in the city belle? It is no longer a secret. They use Hagan's Magnolia Balm. Its continued use removes tan, freckles, pimples and roughness, from the face and hands, and leaves the complexion smooth, transparent, blooming and ravishing. Unlike many cosmetics, it contains no material injurious to the skin. Any Druggists will order it for you, if not on hand, at 50 cts. per bottle.

SEWING MACHINES!

GROUT'S

New Twisted Elastic Three Corded Stitch

SEWING MACHINE.

THE undersigned has received the agency for the sale of Messrs. Grout & Co's. $15 Family Sewing Machine, which took the first prize and diploma at the last Provincial Fair held at Kingston, against all other Machines exhibited.

This Machine does all kinds of work, from the thickest to the thinest; works on Leather, Beaver and Woolen Cloth, Cotton, Linen and Muslin, using Silk, Twist, Linen or Cotton Thread, direct from the spools without the trouble of rewinding. It will hem, fell, stitch, tuck, bind, braid, quilt, seam, gather, sew, or ruffle, or embroider, and do ornamental stitching in the most perfect manner.

The twisted stitch and the means of making it is peculiar, as it is produced by a rotating looper of peculiar construction, with a spur or cast off slide, and is so constructed that it is impossible to miss a stitch, besides being the most simple operation in the world.

All will see the great advantage of the twist given the thread, as each thread has a twist given it while forming the stitch, making it a three cord stitch, having greater strength than any other stitch, at the same time giving it great beauty.

Prices of Grout & Co's Sewing Machines, complete, with hemmer, braider, extra needles, screw driver, clamp, book of instructions to enable any one to operate it at once, $15; Machines plated and pearled from $18 to $25; tables and treadles, $6; extra needles, 75 cents per dozen; full supply of oil, silk thread, &c., for sale.

ALSO,

Raymond's $12 Sewing Machines

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some dose of medicine is swooping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health. Again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. Them, if not relieved, react upon the stomach and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disorder. While in this condition oppressed by the derangement, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effort expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Pennsylvania Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ABA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we ever treat with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contact with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 1, 1866.

DR. J. C. AYER, Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PEEBLE,
Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1866.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom failed in cases of bilious disease to obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALANSO BALL, M. D.
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1865.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. Hitherto of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe costiveness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Sweet, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent preventives of the natural sorrow when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1865.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONESS REMEDY IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died. I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning. I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq. Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced: Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint. She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone; it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Musk for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article, for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine, of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Poetry.

OUR ANGLO-SAXON TONGUE.

BY DAVID TUCKER, M.D., R.A.

There is a little isle afar,
Whose iron heart and rim of rock,
Long time have spurned the strokes of war,
Long time have spurned the ocean's shock.

It is the cradle of a race;
It is the cradle of a tongue,
Not dissonant, nor void of grace,
But plain, expressive, clear and strong.

And with the tongue the race accords;
Like Vikings of the olden time,
Fearless and great, in deeds and words,
It ranges every sea and clime.

Yet softer tongues there be for those
Who flatteries lisp in gilded bowers;
In luxury and dull repose,
Or dalliance, wanting noble powers.

But thou, O Saxon tongue! art made
For men of toil and men of might,
Who by no dastard thoughts are swayed,
Nor fear to battle for the right.

By snowy hills and frozen streams,
From the dark forests of the North;
The old familiar glory gleams,
The old familiar sounds come forth.

By Ganges' and by Plata's flood,
By Tartar fort and Arab tent;
Far South—far East—by stream and wood;
On island and on continent.

Where sunbeams dazzle all the year,
And shadows from the palms are flung,
Still ring thy numbers, broad and clear,
O grand and conquering Saxon tongue!

Young nations springing into birth,
The scions of a mighty line,
Have spread thy manly sounds through the earth,
Till East, West, North, and South are thine!

Go forth, thou noble Saxon tongue!
Where'er thy nervous accents fall,
Tyrants shall yet to earth be flung,
And fetters from the bondsman fall.

Thou art the tongue that Freedom loves,
To shape her creed—to frame her laws;
Thou art the tongue that Truth approves,
To champion her eternal cause.

In thee as wont, O Saxon tongue!
By isles and rivers far away,
May heavenly songs be ever sung,
Thou herald of a brighter day.

Selections.

Edward Sheldon, or the Wayward Wife.

It has been my lot, during my past life, to be frequently thrown into the society of the newly married, and to mark, with much interest, the difference which they exhibit in their style of living, habits of industry or ease, frugality or extravagance, and the consequent effect upon the happiness of the married couple; and however much the husband be at fault, I can but admit, as far as my observation extends, that the wife is more frequently the cause of discontent and misery at the home fireside, and even of broken fortunes than the husband himself, who, however much he may have striven to keep his bark afloat, is nevertheless obliged to bear upon his unoffending head the whole weight of evils which their downfall produces. The want of that cheerful acquiescence in these habits of industry and frugality which the early career of every man obliged to make his own fortune demands from the wife, has discouraged and crushed many a man of good talents and bright prospects, and been the ultimate cause of a ruined fortune and disappointed hopes.

Edward Sheldon was a young mechanic of persevering and ambitious turn of mind, industrious, intelligent and highly respected in his native village. Having travelled abroad, it was at the age of thirty he returned to the place of his birth, and there established himself in business.

It was then he cast his eye about him for a companion, a wife to share his solitary hours and render his home inviting and happy; and fortune so willed it that a gay girl of seventeen should lead him captive, and without reasoning upon the disparity of their ages, and the consequent incongruity of their sentiments—for love never reasons—he led her to the hymeneal altar, and their destinies became inseparable forever.

For a time things went on smoothly; Edward labored hard to supply the folly and extravagance of his wife, who, in dress, strove to rival the wife or daughter of a millionaire.

But it could not last long, and before a twelve month had gone by, he found to his surprise, that his expenses had far exceeded his income, and to his perplexity the birth of a little daughter promised greatly to enhance them.

How to remedy the evil he knew not, for the most remote hint to his wife upon the subject was met with sullen discontent or open rebuke; he strove hard to keep on a firm footing, and would have racked his very sinews to save the annoyance and trouble which the gentlest refusal was sure to bring him; but as month after month went by, notwithstanding his efforts, he found himself daily sinking in debt, his property mortgaged, and ruin staring him in the face.

One bright morning in January, after breakfast, Edward kindly kissed his little girl, a beautiful child of something more than a year old, whose sweet smile and innocent prattle were his chief source of comfort, and taking his hat and cane prepared to go out to his usual task. There was a look of anxiety on his brow and a slight compression of his lips as he cast a hasty glance at his wife, who appeared to have arrayed herself for a promenade, and now stood before a glass smoothing her hair.

"Wait a moment, Edward" said she, and taking a purse from a drawer she examined its contents. 'I am going out shopping this morning, and have not half money enough to make my purchases. You must give me some, for I have quite a number of articles to buy."

Something like a look of defiance passed across the brow of the husband as he listened to this sudden demand; but he smothered his feelings of rebellion, and in a subdued tone asked.

"What have you to buy?'

'Oh! I am going to get me a new dress!' said she in a careless tone, 'you know that beautiful cashmere which Jane Roberts wears; I think I will get one like that it is so pretty, and I may as well get the baby a frock while I am about it; and I must get some new ornament for my neck, too; I am tired of this gold chain, and think a string of coral beads would be much more becoming—they are quite fashionable now. And there's that silver comb you gave me a year ago; it is getting quite out of date and I must have a new shell one—they are more genteel. Let me see—with what I have got I think I can manage with fifteen dollars to day.

During this rapid enunciation of intended purchases, Edward stood with his eyes cast down, and his cheek blanched with emotion. He had hitherto never refused his wife in her demands upon his purse, however unreasonable they might be; for, possessed of a a kind and affectionate heart, he shrank from discord as from the deadliest ill of life. But suddenly a new spirit possessed him, and raising his head he betrayed a flushed cheek, as he hastily stepped to her side and stood with her confronting the glass.

'Ellen,' said he, in a clear decided tone of voice 'which should dress the better, a man or his wife?'

"Neither, to be sure;" replied she regarding him with a look of unfeigned astonishment; 'they should both appear alike in that respect.'

'And who is dressed the better now?' said he glancing at his clothes, which were his best, and though of good materials, worn and threadbare, then at her rich velvet shawl and satin dress—' who is dressed the better now, pray?'

'And whose fault is it that you do not dress better?' said she in an ironical tone of voice, in whose chords not the least blending of kindness could be detected. 'If you do not choose to dress better, I'm sure I can't help it. I did not marry you to dress you, but expected to be decently dressed myself without all this fuss. You owe me fifteen dollars now!'

Sheldon turned his dark, penetrating eye upon the face of his wife, and gazed till her own sank beneath his look, and a blush of shame crimsoned her cheek.

'I owe you, do I?' said he at length, with a heavy sigh, as he threw himself into an arm chair, and resting his head against the back, seemed for a moment lost in thought. 'Yes Ellen, I did stipulate to give you a hundred dollars a year for your personal expenses eighteen months ago, but then business was far better than it now is and our expenses were less. Then I was free from debt and comparatively happy; now let me toil as I may, I cannot meet our accumulated bills from week to week. Look at me—I have not spent ten dollars for clothing the last year, and prefer now to appear in this shabby suit rather than leave my creditors unpaid, while you insist on the payment of the whole sum I have promised. Our last three month's board is unsettled, and 'tis but a few days since you warned me that our washerwoman's bill had run up to fifteen dollars. You might, Ellen,' he continued, and his voice grew husky with emotion as he rapidly proceeded, 'you might aid me in this struggle. Our expenses might be immediately curtailed one half, if you would consent to keep house and do our work; I could hire sufficient room for us to live comfortably at a moderate rate and by frugality and industry on our part, we might be prosperous and happy.'

While speaking, Sheldon had drawn his chair towards his wife, and taking her delicate hand in his, with that kindness and gentleness of manner, which was his custom when unreproached by coldness or severity. Now a tear filled his eye which he hastily brushed away as unmanly; but his lips quivered with emotion as he finished his appeal.

I know not how woman's heart could resist language like that, uttered as it was with that indescribable earnestness of manner weich comes from an over-burdened heart. But Ellen's heart and temper were it not spoiled by self indulgence, soured and distorted. She drew back coldly, and with an angry gesture, which repelled all the warm feelings that were ebbing from the heart of the husband, petulantly replied.

'I can't help it, you know I can't work, I don't know how; besides, I am sure it is enough for one to take care of a baby, and as for dressing less, you can do as you please, but I don't intend to appear more meanly clad than at present. Come, I am in a hurry, will you give me the money?'

'Yes, I will give it to you,' replied he, in a deep guttural tone of voice, which almost startled the insensible wife; and any one who had observed his countenance as he opened his purse, might have seen that something very unusual was at work at his heart.

'I will pay you what I owe you,' and he counted out fifteen dollars and placed them in her hand. 'Is that all I owe you?' and his voice grated strangely as he asked the question.

'That's it,' she replied carelessly, and donning her bonnet, she left him with the same cold unconcern that had always fallen like ice upon the warm impulsive feelings of the husband.

She had no sooner left the apartment than he caught his child to his bosom, and pressing her soft downy cheek to his, burst into tears—a torrent of unchecked tears gushed from an agonized heart. He had hoped—hoped beyond reason to soften that heart of the being he called his wife, to awaken her to a sense of duty that they might yet be happy. But now all hope was lost; his last and boldest effort was repulsed, she had turned away callous and unsoftened from an appeal that might have touched a savage heart. He had done all in his power to do, and hope went out in his heart, a firm and settled resolution, a new born purpose rose up and proclaimed despair.

'She had no friends to support her,' said he, casting his eyes round the apartment which was richly furnished by herself; 'a poor orphan I brought her here, and no more than such shall I leave her. Her uncle, who reared her in charity, is dead, and she will be obliged to earn her bread—a severe lesson, but a necessary one; she must yet learn to help herself, or she can never be what I hoped to find her.'—So saying he left the child in the care of a little girl, and went out.

It might have been two hours after the above mentioned occurrence took place, that a cab drove up before the door of the house in which Sheldon and his wife boarded, and a moment after he stepped out, bringing a large traveling trunk, which, with the aid of the coachman, was placed on the top of the carriage. He then went back to his room, and immediately returned, bearing his little daughter in his arms, neatly dressed in a little hood and pelisse, and prattling in high glee at the prospect of a ride. A moment more the door closed, the carriage wheels rattled over the pavements, and Sheldon had left his wife and house, that which he had so eagerly sought and dreamed as the highest felicity of life—perhaps forever! But his child was in his arms, on his heart, and though the burning tears rushed to his eyes, he was still happy in the innocent caresses of his beautiful and idolized child.

Five years had elapsed since the commencement of our story. Again it was January, cold and biting, and a stormy evening was closing up a dull and lowary day.

Alone in a humble and poorly furnished apartment, in an obscure part of the city, by the aid of a diminutive coal fire sat the wife of Edward Sheldon. She was busily engaged in sewing, and as she rapidly plied her task, would now and then pause, rest her head upon her hand, apparently engaged in deep thought. Once she dropped her work, buried her face in her hands, and while her face trembled with her emotion the tears trinkled through her fingers, and thick on her lap. But there was no sound no murmur of complaint; it was evidently the grief of a contrite hert, and only till she had subdued her emotions, and taking from a fitted ebony box the miniture of her husband, did she give vent to her feelings in words.

'O, that I could recall the past!' said she at length, in trembling accents, as she gazed on the faithful resemblance of him who should have been more to her than life itself. 'O, that I could recall my past wedded life, and relive again those days which should have been the happiest, but were alas! the most wretched of my life! The proud, selfish heart of mine was wearing the very life blood from his generous heat—so kind, faithful and forgiving! I could have been happy myself, but alas! it is now too late; I have made him an exile from home and entailed upon myself a life of loneliness and misery! and again she burried her face in her hands, and went long and bitterly.

And well she might weep, for she had merited her suffering, but was now an altered woman; she had passed through the bitterest ordeal it is woman's lot to bear—she was a deserted wife, and that very desertion had proved a blessing to her.

Falling upon the departure of her husband to find any clue to his residence, further than that he had left in the steamship for Europe: and believing, like every one else, that he left her forever, she immediately set herself to work, and by the necessity of toil, soon learned the value of that money she had so foolishly squandered.—Nor was this all, the effect upon her mind and temper was observed by all who knew her. From the irritable and fault finding woman, she had become mild and amiable in her temper, for grief had touched a cord of love which prosperity had never done.—Her child, too, her beautiful, but lost—how in her loneliness, did her heart yearn for that sweet one, on whom she could have lavished a deeper fountain of love than had ever swelled in her heart, when it lay in her bosom and cradled it in her arms.—But the dear one was lost to her—lost perhaps forever—and she was alone in the grief of her heart.

Why did the ringing of the door bell at that late hour of the night, so startle the lone one? It was often rung at that hour, and she heeded it not, but now she started from her dreamy posture, and passed her hands upon her heart which throbbed almost to bursting. Again it was rung more violently than before, and again the color forsook the cheek of the wife and the breath seemed stayed on her parted lips, as with every nerve awake she stood in the mute posture of suspense. There was something in the peculiar manner in which the cord was pulled that was associated with memory of days gone by, and as at last sound died on the air she drew her breath with a quick sigh and murmured,

'How like to his ring.'

Again, there was a quick step on the stairs—a manly tread—and soft feet followed mingling their echoes with the heavier ones. That step—O! how could a wife mistake the steps of one who had been the lord of her heart, although five weary years had rolled between her heart, and his! It nears—nearer, and nearer—and now it is on the threshold, and as the door swings back on the hinges, with that same impulsive turn it always took from his hand, the wife sank back in her chair without the power of motion or utterance. But the kind familiar voice of the lost one, breathing accents of love, and mingled with the clear sweet voice of her child aroused her, and with a heart full of penitence and gratitude she threw herself into his arms and wept tears of contrition and thankfulness.

Need I add the sequel to my story, or, will any one doubt if the restored husband and wife were happy! Will any one question if she hesitated to conform to what necessity and duty demanded?—or repine if every wish was not gratified? No, a lesson of forbearance and self-denial was graven on the heart, too deep to be erased by time, and with cheerful and earnest will she performed the various duties of life, and became from that hour a blessing to her husband and child.—Olive Branch.

Important Facts Relative to Consumption.

The general mortality is twenty-two to the thousand per year; of this one-seventh fall victims to a disease which ever seeks by preference, its victims among the young, the beautiful, and the talented,—pulmonary consumption.

Hitherto little has been achieved toward ascertaining the precise nature of tubercle; still less toward either a remedial or a preventive treatment of its attacks. It is due to M. Villemin, adjunct professor at the Military Hospital at Val de Grace, Paris, that within a year the scientific world has been awakened to the fact that probably consumption is contagious, that certainly it is inoculable. Like other communicable diseases, only a limited number of species are susceptible to its poison, perhaps none but man, the monkey, the cow, and possibly the rabbit. Carnivorous animals seem not at all liable to the disease; and sheep, birds, &c., though subject to complaints very similar in symptoms, never present cases of real tubercles.

The experiments of inoculation were made by taking a portion of tuberculous deposit and inserting it under the skin of a living animal. Subsequent dissection showed that in from ten to twenty days the lungs indicated unmistakable evidence of tuberculization, and by the twenty-eighth day, not the lungs only, but the kidneys, and the spleen as well, were far advanced in the characteristic degeneration. Inoculated in a pregnant female, abortion was the almost invariable result, and always the progeny met with an early death.

When it is remembered that, in consequence of the fixed belief that the disease was not communicable, no precautions have ever been employed to counteract its virus, or to put on their guard and protect from its influences those who are obliged to be exposed to it, we see at once the important bearing of these researches.

In France alone the mortality from phthisis reaches the enormous figure of 200,000 every year, and in this country the proportion is probably greater. Although M. Villemin's theories have not been received with entire favor, and have in some quarters been severely criticised, they seem based on careful experiments, and explain many otherwise inexplicable facts in the history and diffusion of the tubercles. We believe they will yet be found to be of great service in furthering our knowledge of the disease.—Medical and Surgical Reporter.

The Steamer Amaranth was coming down the Upper Mississippi, loaded with pig lead. As she was going over a shoal place the pilot gave the signal to heave the lead. The only man forward at the time was a green Irishman.

"Why don't you heave the lead?" demanded the mate.

"Is it heave the lead, yer honor?" Where?"

"Overboard you blockhead."

The Irishman snatched up one of the pigs of lead and threw it overboard; the mate, in endeavoring to prevent him, lost his balance and fell into the river.

The captain running to the edge of the roof, asked:

"Why don't you heave the lead, and sing out how much water there is?"

"The lead is heaved yer honor, and the mate's gone down to see how much wather there is," responded Pat.

ANECDOTE OF PALMERSTON.—A gentleman who has just returned from England relates an anecdote of the late Lord Palmerston, which had never before been in print. Upon one occasion, while he was premier, Palmerston was smoking at a railway station, contrary to the regulations in such cases provided. The proper official, not knowing that he was addressing the highest dignitary in the British Empire promptly requested him to desist, and was as promtly obeyed. Not long after, a handsome equipage drove up, in which Palmerston departed, and the officer, upon enquiry, then learned for the first time the exalted rank of the law breaker whom he had reproved. Greatly abashed, he waited upon Lord Palmerston next day and humbly begged his pardon, assuring him that he was not aware of the rank of the culprit whom he had met the previous day. "Ah," said Palmerston, "yesterday I thought you a faithful officer, but to-day I find you are a low minded puppy."

It being rather dark in the Ark, the ladies were unable to dress their hair, and when spoken to on the subject, Mrs. Noah's unfailing reply was, "Wait till the water falls," and as such the style was known. When the Ark struck ground, she put her head out of the door, (and such a head!) and exclaimed, at the top of her voice, "Is this Are-a-rat?" And the impression was, and is to this day, that it is very much like it.

Any man who writes for the common people to read, and mixes an unknown tongue with the English, without translation or apology, is an impostor. He deliberately insults ever common reader, and nothing but despicable pedantry would prompt the employment of foreign quotations when not required.

A young rogue, in Galena, Ill., stole $10 the other day from a man who had taken him home through charity. After stealing the money, the thief expended it in the purchase of a pair of skates, a cap, shirt, shoes accordeon, whiskey and cigars.

Lord Lyttletown proposed a most extraordinary amendment to the English Reform bill, which, if it passed, would disfranchise a large minority of the greatest men in the kingdom. No one is to vote "who cannot write a 'legible' head."

Beware of perishing in the suburbs of the city of refuge.

The Immaculate Conception of the Virgin Mary.

By Rev. CHARLES CHINIQUY.

The 8th December, 1854, the present Pope, Pius the IX was sitting on his throne; a triple crown of gold and diamonds was on his head; silk and damask—red and white—vestments were on his shoulders; five hundred mitred prelates were surrounding him; and more than fifty thousand people were at his feet, in the incomparable St. Peter's Church of Rome.

After a few minutes of most solemn silence, a Cardinal, dressed with his purple robe, left his seat, and gravely walked towards the Pope, kneeled before him, and humbly prostrating himself at his feet, said: "Holy Father: tell us if we can believe and teach that the Mother of God, the Holy Virgin Mary, was immaculate in her conception?"

The Supreme Pontiff answered: "I do not know; let us ask the light of the Holy Ghost."

The Cardinal withdrew; the Pope and the numberless multitude fell on their knees; and the harmonious choir sang the "Veni Creator Spiritus."

The last note of the sacred hymn had rolled under the vaults of the Temple, when the same Cardinal left his place, and again advanced towards the throne of the Pontiff, prostrated himself at his feet, and said: "Holy Father, shall we tell as if the Holy Mother of God, the blessed Virgin Mary, was immaculate in her conception."

The Pope again answered: "I do not know; let us ask the light of the Holy Ghost."

And, again, the "Veni Spiritus" was sung.

The most solemn silence had, a second time, succeeded to the melodious sacred song, when again the eyes of the multitude were following the grave steps of the purple-robed Cardinal, advancing, for the third time, to the throne of the successor of St. Peter, to ask again: "Holy Father, tell us if we can believe that the blessed Virgin Mary, the Mother of God was immaculate?"

The Pope, as if he had just received a direct communication from God, answered with a solemn voice: "Yes! we must believe that the blessed Virgin Mary, the Mother of God, was immaculate in her conception. • • • There is no salvation to those who do not believe this dogma!"

And with a loud voice, the Pope intoned the Te Deum; cannons of the citadel were fired; the last act of the most ridiculous and sacrilegious comedy the world has ever seen, was over; the doors of heaven were, for ever, shut against those who would refuse to believe the anti-scriptural doctrine that there is a daughter of Eve who has not inherited the sinful nature of Adam, to whom the Lord said in his wrath: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return!" and of the children of whom the God of Truth has said: "There is none righteous; no not one; they have all sinned!"

We look in vain to the first centuries of the Church to find any traces of that human aberration. The first dark clouds which Satan has brought to mar the gospel truth, on that subject, appeared only between the eighth and ninth centuries. But in the beginning, that error made very slow progress; those who propagated it, at first, were a few ignorant fanatics whose names are lost in the night of the dark ages. It is only in the twelfth century that it began to be openly preached by some brainless monks. But, then, it was opposed by the most learned men of the time. We have a very remarkable letter of St. Bernard to refute some monks of Lyons who were preaching this new doctrine.

A little later, Peter Lombard adopted the views of the monks of Lyon, and wrote a book to support that opinion; but he was refuted by St. Thomas Aquinas, who is justly considered, by the Church of Rome, as the best theologian of that time.

After that, the celebrated order of the Franciscans used all their influence to persuade the world that "Mary was immaculate in her conception;" but they were vigorously opposed and refuted by the not less celebrated order of the Dominicans. These two learned and powerful bodies, during more than a century, attacked each other without mercy on that subject, and filled the world with the noise of their angry disputes, both parties calling their adversaries heretics. They succeeded in driving the Roman Catholics of Europe into two camps of, fierce enemies. The "Immaculate Conception" became the subject of burning discussion, not only between the learned universities, between the bishops and the priests and the nuns of, those days; but it divided the families into two fiercely contending parties. It was discussed, attacked and defended, not only on the chairs of the universities, in the pulpits of the cathedrals, but also in the fields, in the very streets of the cities. And when the two parties had exhausted the reasons which their ingenuity, their learning, or their ignorant fanaticism could suggest to prove or deny the "Immaculate Conception," they often had recourse to the stick and to the bloody sword to sustain their arguments.

It will appear almost incredible to-day, but it is a fact, the greatest part of the large cities of Europe, particularly in Spain, were then reddened with the blood of the supporters and opponents of that doctrine. In order to put an end to these contests which were troubling the peace of their subjects the Kings of Europe sent deputation after deputation to the Popes to know from their infallible authority what to believe on the subject.

Philip III and Philip IV made what we may call supreme efforts to force the Popes Paul V, Gregory XV, and Alexander VII, to stop the shedding of blood and disarm the combatants by raising the opinion in favor of the Immaculate Conception to the dignity of a Catholic dogma. But they failed. The only answer they could get from the infallible head of the church of Rome was, that "that dogma was not revealed in the Holy Scriptures, had never been taught by the Apostles, nor by the Fathers, and had never been believed or preached by the Church of Rome as an article of faith!" The only thing the Popes could do to please the supplicant kings and bishops and nations of Europe in those days, was to forbid both parties to call the other heretics: and to forbid to say that it was an article of faith which ought to be believed to be saved.

At the Council of Trent, the Franciscans and all the partisans of the "Immaculate Conception," gathered their strength to have a decree in favor of the new dogma; but the majority of the bishops were visibly against that sacrilegious innovation, and they failed.

It was reserved to the unfortunate Pius IX, to drag the Church of Rome to that last limit of human folly. In the last century, a monk, called Father Leonard, had a dream, in which he heard the Virgin Mary telling him: "That there would be an end to the wars in the world, and to the heresies and schisms in the church, only after a Pope would have obliged, by a decree, all the faithful to believe that she was "immaculate in her conception." That dream, under the name of "a celestial vision," had been extensively circulated by means of little tracts. Many believed it was a genuine revelation from heaven; and unfortunately, the good natured but weak-minded Pius IX was among those who believed it. When he was an exile in Gaeta, he had himself a dream, which he took for a vision, on the same subject. He saw the Virgin, who told him that he would come back to Rome, and get an eternal peace for the church, only after he would have promised to declare that the "Immaculate Conception" was a dogma, which every one had to believe to be saved. He awoke from his dream much impressed by it. and the first thing he did when up, was to make a vow to promulgate the new dogma as soon as he would be back to Rome, and the world has seen how he has fulfilled that vow.

But, by the promulgation of this new dogma, Pius IX, far from securing an eternal peace to his church, far from destroying what he is pleased to call the heresies which are attacking Rome on every side, has done more to shake the faith of the Roman Catholics than all their enemies.

By trying to force this new article of faith on the consciences of his people, in a time that so many can judge for themselves, and read the records of past generations, he has taken away and pulled down the strongest column which was supporting the whole fabric of his church; he has forever destroyed the best arguments which the priests had to offer to the ignorant, deluded multitudes which they keep so abjectly tied to their feet.

No word can sufficiently tell the dignified and supreme contempt with which, before that epoch, the priests of Rome were speaking of the "new articles of faith, the novelties of the arch-heretics Luther, Calvin, Knox, &c., &c!" How eloquent were the priests of Rome, before the 8th of December, 1854, when saying to their poor ignorant dupes, "in our holy Church of Rome there is no change, no innovations, no novelties, no new dogmas. We believe to-day just what our fathers believed, and what they have taught us; we belong to the apostolical church, which means that we believe only what Apostles have believed and preached." And the ignorant multitudes were saying' amen!

—But, alas, for the poor priests of Rome to-day; those dignified pose, those precious and dear illusions, are impossible! They have to confess that those high-sounding denunciations against what they call the new doctrines of the heretics, were nothing but big guns loaded to the mouth to destroy the Protestants, which are now discharging their deadly missiles against the crumbling walls of their church of Rome. They have to confess that their pretensions to an unchangeable creed is all mere humbug, shameful lies, they have to confess that the church of Rome is a Proteus, new comers, new sorcerers of Satan, that do not any longer dare to say to the disciples of the Gospel, "Where was your religion before the days of Luther and Calvin?" for the secret voice of their consciences says to-day to the Roman Catholics, "Where was your religion before the 8th December, 1854?" and they cannot answer.

There is an inexorable and irresistible logic in the minds even of the most unlearned men, which denies, to-day, all the sophisms of the priests of Rome if they dare to speak again on their past subjects, "the novelties and new dogmas of the Protestants." There is a silent, but crushing voice, going, to-day, from the crowds to the priest, telling him: "Now, be quiet and silent on what you are used to call the novelties and new doctrines of the Protestants! for, are you not preaching to us an awful novelty? Are you not damning us to-day for disbelieving a thing which the church, during eighteen hundred years has, a hundred times, solemnly declared, by the mouth of the Pope, had "never been revealed in the Holy Scriptures, had never been taught by the fathers, had never been heard of by the church herself?"

I will never forget the sadness which overcame me when I received the order from the Pope to proclaim the new dogma to my people, (then all Roman Catholics.) It was as if an earthquake had shaken and destroyed the ground on which my feet were resting. My most cherished illusions about the immutability and the infallibility of my church were crumbling down, in my intelligence, in spite of my efforts to keep them up. I have seen old priests, to whom I opened my mind on that subject, shed tears of sorrow on the injury this new dogma would do to their church.

The Archbishop of Paris, at the head of the most learned members of the clergy of France, had sent his protest to the Pope against this dogma before it was decreed; and he had eloquently foretold the deplorable consequences which would follow that innovation; but their warning voice failed to make any impression on the mind of the infatuated Pope.

And, we children of God, must we not acknowledge the hand of the Lord, in that blindness of "the man of sin!"

The days are not far way that a cry of joy will be heard from one end to the other of the world: "Fear God, and give glory to Him! Babylon is fallen! because she made all nations drink of the wrath of her fornications."

For, when we see that "wicked one, who exalteth himself above all that is called God," destroying himself by the excess of his own folly and impieties, we must bless the Lord.

The Lord was then drawing me away from my perishing ways; but I did not know him then, I was struggling against Him to remain in the dark dungeons of error. But God was to be the stronger. In his infinite mercy He was to conquer me, and with me many others.

May all the nations bless and praise him for his mercies!

Not long after that, in a single day, more than one thousand of my countrymen came with me from the realms of the spiritual object slavery which had bound us to the feet of the man of sin, and we took Jesus, the eternal Son of God, for our only way, our only light, our only life!

PARLIAMENTARY.

The Homestead Bill, as it is called, has passed its several readings; all that is required is the Governor-General's assent. It does not go as far as the people would wish, but still is a step in the right direction. For our own part we cannot see why a grant from the crown should be exempt from seizure, and the farm purchased by industry be liable to seizure, but a year or two may bring about all we desire. The Municipal and Assessment Bill is pgressing and will contain several things not in the old act. In committee, a motion to extend the term for erecting a House of Refuge to 4 years, was lost by the vote of the chairman. The law is likely to remain imperative. The Licensed Victuallers Association is not likely to succeed in getting incorporated. Why should whisky dealers particularly become an incorporated body? The subject of denominational grants has not yet come before the House; that question, however, is not likely to pass unattended to. Episcopalians, Catholics, Methodists and the people of the Old Kirk are all astir, each party for itself.—What a beautiful medley it presents. Religious denominations the very antipodes of each other, combined to assist each for selfish purposes. We advise them to hold a grand union missionary meeting to get funds to send a union mission to the heathen. They can surely as reasonably meet together in a missionary meeting, as unite to beg funds to extend their distinctive dogmas amongst the youth of Canada.

EDUCATIONAL GRANTS.

In a previous issue, we referred to the action of the County Council in cutting off its accustomed grant from the Grammar Schools of this County, and especially from the Norwood Grammar School, believing, as we do, that the withdrawal of the grant will destroy the School, unless the Township of Asphodel comes forward and raises the necessary sum to ensure the Government grant. We are glad to be able to announce that some of the Reeves who voted against the grant have seen new light, and are willing to grant a little to our Grammar Schools. If the Town and County would unite and raise the whole in proportion to assessment, the matter would be settled. Perhaps this will be the result of the whole matter. The Town Grammar School will not go down, but we can not, we fear, say so much for the Norwood School, although it has done a good work in the cause of education. At the June sessions the question will be brought up again, and a wiser solution than the last we hope found out.

BUT DENOMINATION GRANTS.

What about these? Let every denomination support its own isms, say we. Yes, and every sect its own sectarianism. But, say some, denominational does not mean Sectarian. Let us hear Worcester on this matter:—

"Sectarian, pertaining to [illegible] or sect.

"Denominational, relating to [illegible] or kinds of religion."

"Denomination, a class of sect."

"Sect, a religious denomination."

Now if theology and physic combine they will have difficulty to separate the Denomination from the sect, or vice versa. They are like man and wife, one flesh, what is denominational is sectarian. It is amusing to find, even in the Peterboro Review the Calvanist Theologian and Armenian Physician, writing to advocate Denominational grants; but churches like the world say—"Scratch my back and I'll scratch yours." Both parties call Rome hard names, and yet they will tax themselves to extend her dogmas. Let us be consistent, if she is right let us help her; if she is wrong let us leave her to propagate her own error, but yesterday we gave $250 to Father Chiniquy; shall we to-day vote $4000 to build up his enemies in Regiopolis, whose tested against our money going to educate Episcopalians, shall we now ask Episcopalians to give their money to educate Roman Catholics? Or does the unrighteous maxim shut people's eyes to inconsistency?

A Fashionable Wedding.

On Tuesday morning St. John's Church (Episcopal) was the scene of another very fashionable wedding. The happy twain, whose plurality became unity on that day were John Burnham, Esq., Barrister, and son of Rev. Mr. Burnham, and Miss Maria, third daughter of Robert D. Rogers, Esq., of Ashburnham. At the hour appointed, ten o'clock, and before it, numbers were repairing to the church to witness the nuptials.

At ten o'clock the bridegroom and his attendants arrived and entered by one side of the church; in a few minutes the bride and her party arrived in several sleighs and entered by the other side of the church. She was preceded by her mother accompanied by H. T. Strickland, Esq. The bride was supported by her father, and her bride's maids—Miss Rogers and Miss Mary Rogers —her sisters, and Miss Burnett, of Cobourg, followed; immediately after came some more of the wedding party. The bridegroom who was attended by Dr. Geo. Burnham, Capt. J. Z. Rogers, and Mr. C. Rogers, of Grafton, arrived at the altar a little in advance. The nuptial ceremonies were performed by the Rev. Mr. Beck, assisted by the Rev. M. Burnham.

The bride, who looked uncommonly well, was beautifully dressed in the most costly white silk trimmed with rich silk lace and pearl. The head-dress was in the form of a wreath trimmed with red trimming, and over the whole was cast a large bridal veil. The bride's maids were dressed in white lustre with wreaths to match, trimmed with red also. The appearance of the whole was certainly very grand and pleasing. The ceremonies being over, the bells pealed the announcement, as the party left in their sleighs for the residence of the bride's father.

In the afternoon the happy couple left for their wedding tour. We wish them a pleasant trip, a safe return, and a long and happy life.

Mr. E. Shaver, of Buckhorn, has bought out Mr. John Simpson of the Simpson House, here, and is now in occupation and doing business.

LAKEFIELD.

The annual Soiree of the Lakefield Presbyterian Church was held on Monday last. At 4 o'clock tea was served in the upper story of the new waggon shop, when to the number of about 200 partook of the good things which the ladies of Lakefield and vicinity had provided in providing. After tea all adjourned to the church where a more intellectual treat awaited them. The Rev. Mr. Tilton, Pastor of the Church, occupied the chair. The Rev. Mr. Ewing, of Bailly, delivered a very warm and soul-stirring speech, his subject being "The Sign of the Times." Mr. Moffatt was then introduced by the chairman in such eulogistic phraseology, that the speaker on coming forward asserted that if he were not personally acquainted with the chairman he would have surmised that he was a native of that bright gem of the ocean which contains a curious geological specimen, having an oily effect on the tongue when brought in contact with it. He then proceeded with his subject—"Our Sons and Daughters Twenty Years Hence." He did not speak in a spirit of prophesying, but began at home by pointing out to the fathers and mothers present that it was in their power to contribute much to the welfare and prosperity of their sons and daughters growing up, and preparing to occupy prominent positions twenty years hence. He pointed to the way in which parents might prepare their children for important positions by giving them a proper education. He severely condemned the blindness of protestant parents in sending their daughters to nunneries to be educated, and asked was it that they had not good institutions of their own. Was it that they acquired more gracefulness in manner or learned to deceive a scrutinising public by preserving a composed exterior, while their heart was torn by inward anxieties. He laid down as a rule that the best way to further education in the young mind was by leading it to think for itself in order that they might grapple more successfully with the advancement of science which is constantly going on. He humorously remarked that some were so averse to "new notions," as they called them, that they surveyed the new order of things creeping on us apace with almost religious horror, giving as an illustration that a man in Scotland was once brought before the synod for having a fanning mill for trying to raise the wind when the Lord ordained it should be a calm. He addressed a few words to young men, that in floating the river of life to beware of the great maelstrom of intemperance, as in avoiding it they would become better members of society twenty years hence.—Music was discoursed at intervals by an efficient choir. On the whole the evening was passed pleasantly by all. The proceeds which amounted to about $80 are to be applied to some charges made in the church. —Com.

To the Editor of the Examiner

SIR,—Would you kindly inform me through the columns of your valuable journal, if there is any clause in the statutes of the Dominion of Canada, that embraces and countenances the election of Reeve or Councillors, in the manner underneath decided? The facts are these:—

At a certain place in the Province of Ontario, there lived a man, wise, for the sake of brevity, we will designate as A. Now, this man A, was Reeve of the township, and another who we will call B, was clerk of the same. As the time for the Municipal elections drew nigh, B, aspiring to the honors of the Reeveship, gave up his office of clerk, in accordance with the requirements of the law, and prepared to enter the field as a candidate and as the opponent of the then present Reeve, for the office before mentioned. Now, A's party calculated that that of B's would forget during the excitement of the day of nomination, to demand the poll, and the result showed that they were not far astray in their calculations. A, on that occasion was nominated first, B, second, and during the excitement of these and the other nominations for councillors, B's party did actually forget to demand a poll on that day, and accordingly afterwards, A claimed to be duly elected, and eligible to retain office of Reeve.

B's party differed from this manner of deciding the question, and disputed the election. The upshot of the affair was, that A went to the county town to consult a lawyer about the matter. B's party were also in communication with another "limb of the law," and advised by the limb aforesaid, came together and held another election, putting B in as Reeve, and also a new council. So here was a pretty kettle of fish, two Reeves and two councils or virtually neither Reeve or council, as neither were eligible to act.

When the day for the swearing in of the new Reeve and council prescribed by law arrived, the friends of both parties came together, and after some consideration of the matter, (one man being about as popular as the other) the Reeve, so called, determined as the shortest and easiest, and to them most satisfactory manner of setting the difficulty that they (the Reeves) should adjourn to another room (with the sanction and consent of both parties) and there and then decide by drawing lots, which set of Reeve and councillors should reign paramount during the coming term, and sir, there and then was it decided by lot that B and his accompanying council should occupy the offices.

So, sir, that was the manner in which the Municipal officers were elected, and you oblige me and others by giving the desired information.

I am, sir,
Your obedient servant,
RATEPAYER.

The whole matter is certainly without precedent as well as contrary to law, under the circumstances the only legal course would have been for the old Council to appoint their successors.—Ed. Ex.

RE-UNION.—The next entertainment of the Peterboro Literary Club will be held in the Room over the Royal Canadian Bank, this (Thursday) evening, at 8 o'clock. We hope to see the room well filled.

By an oversight last week the names of Mrs. Robert McNabb and Mrs. Mack were omitted in the list of donations for two parcels of valuable clothing to the Protestant Home.

The Wesleyan Methodist Missionary meeting on Tuesday evening was well attended; several very interesting addresses were delivered on the occasion. A good collection was the result.

SOIREE.—The annual Soiree of Zion Church, Swan's Corners, Otonabee, will take place this evening.

Government Grants to Denominational Colleges.

To the Editor of the Peterborough Examiner.

SIR,—The subject of Government aiding Denominational Colleges having been alluded to in the Legislature of Ontario, and discussed by the press in Toronto and elsewhere through the Province, and having found its way into this County, I ask permission to express through your columns some views upon this question now beginning again to agitate the country, as well as to endeavor to correct some of the writers in our local press here, whose zeal seems to outstrip their knowledge.

In the last Review there are two advocates for the grants being continued, one advocating the claims of Queen's College, and the other Victoria College. The former in the Review of the 31st ult. had a sub-editorial article, combating the assertions of some who maintain that one University and one College are sufficient for the Province of Ontario, by referring to the statistics of other countries. In the next Review the same writer asks how the wants of the country can be met? and replies by making available "the facilities for acquiring an university education afforded by those Colleges already in operation, which have been established by the liberality of certain religious denominations, or by calling into existence new institutions that shall be termed 'non-denominational.' By the Government furnishing grants in aid to the former, or by their supplying the whole amount necessary to organise and maintain in full equipment the latter." He shows by a reference to the statistics of Queen's College that the former is by far the cheapest. He then asks, "What is to prevent the Province from continuing to supplement the resources of these Colleges that efficiently perform a work. • • • Simply a 'cry' that these are denominational Colleges." Well, call it a "cry" or a "howl" or what you please, the fact is admitted that they are denominational, and to a country like Upper Canada which has struggled for 30 years to resist the desperate efforts of an oligarchy to impose a State Church upon it, no surprise need be felt at the strenuous opposition to an appearance of the evils it so happily escaped from. I have hinted that the writer I am reviewing is not the Editor. This is only a supposition, the style is new, the knowledge of some matters and the ignorance of others, strengthen the belief that it is a new hand. This does not matter one iota. I do not wish to be personal, I am to deal with statements. Now, I must put my friend right about some of his statements. I wish to give him fair play, and he must give the same to us.

He tells us that Queen's College was established in 1841. "At that time" he says "there was no University in the Province; King's College, afterwards transformed into the University of Toronto and University College, was not in existance. It did not come into operation until two years afterward." !! All wrong my friend. You know little of the history of Canada or you would not have fallen into such errors. Allow me to give you a brief history of King's College, and what has been done to supply a higher education for this Province.—About the year 1797 (I think it was) the Parliament of Upper Canada, by an address asked the King to sanction the setting apart of a tract of land while it was plentiful, for the purposes of education. He graciously replied that he would sanction any measure which his faithful Commons in Upper Canada should recommend for so laudible a purpose. Accordingly, 1,000,000 acres of land were set apart for the purpose of establishing in each District a Grammar School, and as Toronto, then Little York, was the most central town, there should be a College established in it. In 1827 the Rector of York, the late Bishop Strachan, went to England and succeeded by very unfair means to obtain for the Church of England the charter of this College which was named "King's College." In 1828 the charter was dated, and well do I remember the indignation felt by the people throughout the Province generally at this high-handed measure. None were more loud in their denunciations than the Presbyterians of that day. From 1828 to 1849 the College with its immense funds was monopolised by the Church of England, and the terms of admission to it were subscription to the 39 articles. Long and loud were the clamours of the people for a restoration of their charter. Every successive government adopted a measure for its settlement. In 1844 the Draper administration adopted the question of its liberation as a test of its retaining power, and in 1847 the present Sir John A. Macdonald a member of that Government, drew up a bill recommending the division of the funds of the College among the denominations, retaining the lion's share to the spoilers. Fearing to bring this measure before the House, they chose an appeal to the people, and never did a people speak to a government in a more condemnatory manner than did the people of Upper Canada then. The result was the formation of the Baldwin-Fontaine Government and a very strong body of supporters. This administration in 1845 appointed a committee to enquire into the affairs of King's College, and in 1849 restored it under its present name to its rightful owners—the people of Upper Canada. (See 12 Vic. Cap. 82). The original endowment for King's College was 226,000 acres of land and for U. C. College, sometimes called the Royal Grammar School there were 63,865 acres set apart. This latter institution in addition to its endowment and large sums from the University fund has been receiving grants from Government. From the endowment to the 30th of June, 1839, there were received for the above institutions £42,729, and disbursed up to said period £54,925, leaving £27,803 on hands and invested. Besides some £21,000 overdue for purchase money and interest. The above will show that King's College was in existence long before the period put down by our friend. I have at hand plenty of data to prove the facts.

I am, however, getting tedious and must hurry on and say a word to "Veritas," who seems indignant at no one's coming forward to contradict the "gross misrepresentations and sly insinuations of the Globe and Leader," and he rushes forth to stay the progress of the wickedness of these bad papers. Like Elihu of old, he thinks "days should speak and multitude of years should teach wisdom," and he is anxious to show his opinion. All I can say just now is that there is no fear of this champion for Victoria College setting the world on fire, notwithstanding his arrogance. Two highly gifted and educated writers insist that "denominational" and "sectarian" are synonymous terms; but this Solon in the East has discovered they are not. Let him consult his dictionaries again before making himself ridiculous.—Again, I think he is running before he is sent: the friends of Victoria College take very different ground from this new advocate of its claims. He is horrified at the idea of such colleges as Victoria being called "sectarian;" he fears if they are broken down young men will either go without an education or seek it elsewhere than in the Godless institutions in Toronto! "Victoria College," he says "is denominational inasmuch as it is under the special supervision of a particular body, but it is not and never has been sectarian inasmuch as nothing is taught there but a liberal, comprehensive course of secular education, unbiassed by the annunciation of a single sectarian dogma, and no religious test has ever been required of either student or professor"!! I much fear if "Veritas" here speaks the truth, that he makes his favourite College more Godless than Toronto University. I have plenty of material on hand to show that authorities in the Methodist Church prefer to call Victoria College sectarian. But I must close, and reserve what I have further to say to a future occasion.

Meantime,
I am, Mr. Editor,
Yours, &c.,

EDUCATION OF GIRLS IN ENGLAND AND FRANCE.—The people of England and France are beginning to give the girls as high an order of education as the boys. In the former country a Cambridge examination system has been established, under which classes of girls under the age of eighteen have been formed in various towns of England, and also in the city of London. In these classes, the girls are examined in various branches of study, including some of the severest, such as geometry and algebra, and the most distinguished obtained certificates which, like college degrees, may be serviceable to them in their future lives. The Empress Eugenie patronizes a similar movement in France, which was appropriately inaugurated in the Sorbonne, in December. Great numbers of young ladies attend the lectures there, among whom were two young relatives of Eugenie herself. This system of superior instruction for girls has been adopted in 30 or 40 other towns of the departments.—N. Y. Times.

Thus in England and France everything is being done to ensure as sound an education to girls as to boys, while in Canada many would deprive them of it by shutting our Grammar Schools against them.—Ed. Ex.

LIGHT BREAKING.—The Canadian papers are beginning to see the aspect of affairs in Nova Scotia in their true light. They are beginning to realise the determination which is being displayed by the people of this province to be freed from the bonds of union; and in an article which we give in another column, the Quebec Chronicle bewails the folly of Ottawa legislation, inasmuch as no effort was made to conciliate Nova Scotia. Other Canadian journals are whining the same tune, and profess extreme regret that nothing was done to meet us half way. Such regrets are unavailing now. The time for conciliation has passed away. No compromise will now be accepted. The people are determined to have repeal, even at the expense of cutting all connection with Britain. Political etiquette and sentimental feelings can have no force at the present juncture. The best thing to be done by the Dominion Government is to express their willingness and desire that Nova Scotia should be legislated out of the Union, if they wish to prevent the fragile Dominion breaking to pieces.—Eastern Chronicle.

A LEGAL QUESTION.—Among the curious side questions raised by the Confederation Act, we saw lately one having references to the extradition policy of the Dominion. A clever lawyer in Chicago, or some other western city, argues in favor of a criminal client of his that the Dominion has no extradition treaty with the States, and therefore cannot claim her criminals back. He says that the old Province of Canada is now defunct, and all treaties with her defunct also. The point was considered of sufficient gravity to be referred, and it is certainly not unworthy of attention. Should the judge decide in its favor, a new extradition treaty would be an immediate necessity.

A very painful case of seduction and abortion has been brought to light in Montreal. An officer of the 60th Rifles became acquainted with a handsome young lady, daughter of a prominent citizen of London, and, as he had exchanged from his regiment and was going to volunteer in the Abyssinian expedition, the girl accompanied him to Montreal. They have been stopping at a house in the city, where he passed her off as his cousin. Medicine to procure an abortion was administered to the poor girl, and her life is despaired of. The affair causes much sensation. The Telegraph says the case is only one of a number of victims.

It is said that the ex-King of Hanover has bought one of the most beautiful seats near Arnhelm, named Bijsen, for two millions of guilders. It is rumored that this purchase is connected with a project of marriage between the Crown Prince of Holland and one of the daughters of ex King George. The wedding gift, it is said, will be eight millions.

Some of the survivors of the battle of Mentana having met at a fraternal banquet in Mantua, on the 16th ult., the following telegram was sent to General Garibaldi: 'Some of the survivors of Mentana send their General an affectionate greeting. Push on the completion of our unity. Call upon us; we are ready.' The General sent the following reply;

Dear Fuigi: I have received from a lady the following motto; 'Victory is achieved by perseverance.' I hope Italy will remember the motto next spring. My affectionate compliments to the companions in arms of

On the 5th inst., the newly-installed Lord Mayor of Dublin, Dr Carroll, who is a Catholic, went in state to the Catholic Cathedral, wearing the insignia of his office, and supported by a number of members of the Corporation in their official robes. Cardinal Cullen preached on the occasion. He spoke with characteristic bitterness of the penal laws by which the Irish Catholics were formerly oppressed, but remarked his co-religionists that the repeal of the law which prevented Roman Catholic civic functionaries from going officially to their own places of worship was accomplished not by "secret societies, or assassination, or the blowing down of houses, but by peaceful and constitutional conduct."

Prince Napoleon is going to make a long journey somewhere. Such he ever does when his advice is not taken at the Tuileries. In a recent interview with his cousin a very animated conversation took place, in which the Emperor reproached the Prince's father-in-law with ingratitude, and hinted at chastisement. The prize is not a popular man with the Parisians, but every one admits that he is an able man. His politics are Republicanism, pure and simple.

Boston, 23rd.—The Traveller, this morning, contains a correspondence dated Shanghai, Nov. 20th, that gives the following details of an explosion, barely alluded to in a late cable despatch. The news has just reached us of terrible explosion in the China arsenal, at Woohung. The loss of life is estimated as high as 500. Probably 1,000 is nearer the number in kill and wounded. No Europeans were hurt. The explosion was distinctly heard Kin Kiang, some 120 miles distant.

COTTON IN ILLINOIS.—It is estimated that Illinois alone will produce five hundred thousand bales of cotton next year, and we understand that the Government of the United States have given instructions to their General in command of the army in the South to have all the seed saved that is possible, for planting in that and other western States, but should their expectations not be fulfilled it is gratifying to know that we have a sovereign remedy for coughs, colds, cramps in the stomach, cholic cholera, morbus, and all complaints of the like nature, in the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," sold by all Medicine Dealers, 25 cts per bottle.

TWO QUESTIONS EASILY ANSWERED.—Why should men wear beards? Because they are a great protection to the throat and lungs, and add much to their personal appearance.

Why should we use "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers?" Because when used for coughs, colds, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, &c., they act like a charm. Ministers and lawyers use them, physicians recommend them, and singers and public speakers say they are the very best medicine in existence for the cure of such complaints. Sold by all Dealers at 25 cts. per box.

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C. W., who are the sole proprietors.

DARLEY'S
Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses, also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.

SUGAR-COATED

ARE safe and reliable remedy in all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels. They are no Quack Medicine, puffed up by high sounding testimonials from imaginary people, but are the result of forty years experience of a first class physician, and their extraordinary success is due to the fact that they answer exactly their name. The formula from which they are prepared, is based on sound, scientific principles, and has received the unqualified approbation of the medical profession. They do not promise to heal all ills, but for all diseases arising from any derangement of the Stomach, Liver and Bowels, they furnish an effectual remedy. We have in our possession, over one hundred testimonials from physicians who have used them in their practice and highly approve of them, among which are the following:

Over a Million Dollars Saved!

Gentleman:—"I had a negro man worth $1,200 who took cold from a bad hurt in the leg, and was useless for over a year. I had used everything I could hear of without benefit, until I tried the Mexican Mustang Liniment.—It soon effected a permanent cure."

J. L. DOWNING.
Montgomery, Ala., June 17, 1859.

"I take pleasure in recommending the Mexican Mustang Liniment as a valuable and indispensible article for Sprains, Sores, Scratches or Galls on Horses. Our men all say it acts like magic."

J. W. HEWITT,
Foreman for America, Wells, Fargo's and Harndeu's Express.

"The Sprain of my daughters ankle, occasioned while skating last winter, was entirely cured in one week, after she commenced using your celebrated Mustang Liniment.

ED. SEELY.
Gloucester, Mass., Aug 1, 1865.

It is an admitted fact that the Mexican Mustang Liniment performs more cures in shorter time, on man and beats, than any article ever discovered. Families, livery-men and planters should always have it on hand. Quick and sure it certainly is. All genuine is wrapped in steel-plate engravings, bearing the signature of G. W. Weatbrook, Chemist, and the private U. S. stamp of Demas Barnes & Co. over the top.

An effort has been made to counterfeit it with a cheap stone plate label. Look closely!

"Jem' so!"—"Exactly!"—Solon Shingle said: they were there "every time." If he felt lowley in the morning, he took Plantation Bitters; if he felt weary at night, he took Plantation Bitters; if he lacked appetite, was weak, languid or mentally oppressed, he took Plantation Bitters; and they never failed to set him on his pins square and firm.

Few persons want any better authority; but as some may, just read the following:

"* * * I owe much to you, for I verily believe the Plantation Bitters have saved my life.

H. WAGONER, Madrid, N. Y."

"* * * I have been a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, and had to abandon preaching. * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me

REV. C. A. MILLWOOD, New York City.

"* * * I had lost all appetite—was so weak and enervated I could hardly walk, and had a perfect dread of society. * * * The Plantation Bitters have set me all right.

JAMES HEIMINWAY, St. Louis, Mo."

"* * * The Plantation Bitters have cured me of a derangement of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, that distressed me for years. They act like a charm.

C. C. MOORE, 254 Broadway, N. Y."

Mrs. O. M. DEVOE, manager of the Union Home School for Soldiers' Children, says she "has given it to the weak and invalid children under her charge, with the most happy and gratifying results." We have received over a hundred reams of such certificates, but no advertisement is so effective as what people themselves say of a good article. Our fortune and our reputation is at stake. The original quality and high character of these goods will be sustained under every and all circumstances. They have already obtained a sale in every town, village, parish and hamlet among civilized nations. Base imitators try to come as near our name and style as they can, and because a good article cannot be sold as low as a poor one, they find some support from parties who do not care what they sell. Be on your guard. See our private stamp over the cork.

This Company is organized for the purpose of developing the mineral resources of the west half of lot number Twenty in Concession A, in the Township of Galway, County of Peterborough, in the Province of Ontario and Dominion of Canada, and for the purpose of mining, smelting, and otherwise preparing for market, the ores of all kinds of metals and minerals, together with the acquisition, employment, and disposal of all lands, mines, or ores, or granting to others the right to mine, smelt, or prepare for market, the ores of all metals and minerals that may be found of advatage to the interests of the Company.

The already acquired property of the Company, the west half of Lot Twenty, Concession A, Galway, is extremely rich in Lead, Iron Sulphate of Barytes, and Silver, quantities of each of which have already been taken by the promoters of the Company off this portion of the lot, which from its assays of Dr. Oliver, show the following favorable results; Sulphur 23 per cent, Lead 77 per cent, Silver in Lead 16oz. 13dwt 8grs., to the Ton, proving beyond a doubt the great value of the property. The original owners of the property have already spent about one thousand dollars in opening up the mineral veins that intersect the Lot, and in pushing an adit or tunnel through a hill upon the property.

The property is situated on the Bobcaygeon Road, about 12 miles from Bobcaygeon, at which place communication can easily be obtained to Lindsay or Peterborough, thence by the P. H. L. and B. Railway to Port Hope. Ore or goods can thus be transferred at all seasons from the property to Port Hope, or vice versa at a cost not exceeding $5 per ton.

The original Proprietors have already conveyed the property to the Rev. Mark Burnham, of Ashburnham, in trust to be reconveyed by him to the Company when organised.

The Trustee of the Company has a perfect title to the said parcel of land so that no delay need occur in commencing operations, and an immediate return on the capital invested may be anticipated.

CANCERS CURED!

By a new, but certain, speedy, and nearly painless process, and

WITHOUT THE USE OF THE KNIFE.

THE cure will be guaranteed, and, as a proof of this, no pay is required, until the cure is complete. The moment a cancer is discovered, it should be cured, as it will cost less and is more speedily cured than when of longer standing, and there is nothing to gain, and everything to lose by delay. What now seems a harmless lump in the breast, neck, eye-lid or elsewhere, or small wart or sore on the lip, may, in a few short months, become a hideous, disgusting, destroying mass of disease. If required, references can be given to parties who have been cured many years since, and who are now sound and healthy. All communications promptly answered. No money required in advance, and none until the cure is complete.

Peterboro, November 28 1866. 48

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with pains, diseases and symptoms of internal derangement? Do you require a cathartic medicine, to cleanse, purify, and invigorate your system, and restore the healthy action of the digestive organs? Then, why will you suffer? Why not take the remedy which is known to be the best that can be obtained? Why not take AYER'S PILLS, which will surely do all that is required, and which have cured, and are curing, more people than any other medicine in the world? Why not take the pills which are sugar-coated, so that they are pleasant to take, and which are purely vegetable, so that they cannot do harm in any quantity? Why not take the pills which are universally recommended by physicians, and which are known to be the best cathartic ever made? Why not take the pills which are for sale by druggists everywhere, and by all dealers in medicine? Why not take the pills which are safe, sure, and reliable? Why not take AYER'S PILLS, and get well?

Because you will not suffer any one to impose upon you with something else, which may be cheaper, but which is worthless. Because you will not be cheated out of your health, when you can be restored to it by the use of a few dollars. Because you will not waste your money for that which will do you no good. Because you will not take pills which contain calomel, or other mercurial preparations, which, while they may benefit you, will surely injure you. Because you will not take pills which are made of cheap, drastic purgatives, which will derange your system, and make you worse than you were before. Because you will not take pills which are for sale by the dozen or hundred, and which are thrown broadcast into the market, regardless of the injury they may do. Because you will not take pills which are put up in such a manner that they will not keep in any climate. Because you will not take pills which are not sugar-coated, and which, consequently, are unpleasant to take. Because you will not take pills which are not for sale by druggists, and which are not kept by dealers in medicine. Because you will not take pills which are not universally recommended by physicians. Because you will not take pills which are not known to be the best cathartic ever made. Because you will not take pills which are not for sale by druggists everywhere, and by all dealers in medicine. Because you will not take pills which are not safe, sure, and reliable. Because you will not take AYER'S PILLS, and get well.

A mild cathartic produces in the body, and eliminates its natural functions. Thus, if not relieved, pass from themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general constipation, suppression, and disease. If take in this condition, opposed by the curative power, take Ayer's Pills, and are here directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstruction and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of Ayer's Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1866.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of abdominal sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR: AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that use your treat with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contest with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Colics, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Piles, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Hanford, Canada

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe one-half the diseases to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Rev. H. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent promotives of the natural secretions when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawker, of the Methodist Epis. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1866.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1865.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

Sold in Peterboro by Ormond & Gilmour, A. W. Kempt, and Wm. Coulter. In Keene by A. Campbell, Campbell McNeil & Co., C. Britton, Lindsay, and all Medicine Dealers.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE OF

CONSUMPTION

BY THE

GREAT SHOSHONEES REMEDY

IN CANADA.

MESSRS. Y. & C.—GENTLEMEN:—I Wilson Storms, of Brighton, C. W., make oath and say,—I feel anxious to let you know what the Great Shoshonees Remedy has effected for me. My wife was afflicted with consumption and died; I was also afflicted with the same disease, and after her death I continued sinking just as she had done. I had very severe night sweats; coughed nearly all night and every night; could not sleep unless a little towards morning I raised over a quart of matter every 24 hours; had severe pain in the left lung, &c., &c., and was greatly debilitated. In fact I was going as fast as I could. I was taking medicine from a regular physician, but it did not even relieve my cough. I went to the village one day about a quarter of a mile, which took me to go and come about two hours.—While there I saw Esq., Wellington, and happened to say to him, "I wish you could give me something to relieve my cough." He said "There is the Great Indian Remedy just introduced; Dr. Barker has it for sale, and I believe it will cure you." I took his advice, and brought a bottle home with me; took a tablespoonful at once, which I felt through my whole system; at night I took a tablespoonful, and rested well all night, and continued to rest well every night. The Cough, Night Sweats, Raising of matter, Pain in the Lung, &c., gradually left me, and I got hearty and strong. I took only three bottles. I am not taking it now, and I am as hearty and as well as ever I was in my life. My sister-in-law was with me for a while, who was affected with the Liver Complaint She has taken the remedy, and is well. This certificate you may show to the world if you please.

FURS! FURS!

CAUTION.

THE public are hereby cautioned to Beware of purchasing Colored and Russian Mink for Canada Mink. The Canada is superior to any in the world, and is therefore the most valuable. This has induced wholesale dealers to imitate our Canada Mink, not only by coloring Russian, but also by coloring United States Mink. The Canada costs more than double that of any other country, which enables dealers to make a large profit on the spurious article. Those buying Furs in Montreal or other places should beware least they get the inferior article for which they will no doubt have to pay full prices. Take care, therefore, for I have been shown articles purchased as genuine in Montreal, which I can certify were colored and of inferior quality.

Those who buy any article of my own manufacture, I will warrant to be genuine of best quality, and best workmanship, and at lower prices than any wholesale dealer will supply the same article.

A call is respectfully solicited.

Poetry.

I have been to see the Baby.

I have been to see the baby,
And its face was very red,
And the down was very scanty,
On its ugly little head.

And its eyes were not open—
You've seen little Kittens so—
They pretended it was sleeping,
But the humbug couldn't go!

I surveyed it at a distance—
Asked them what its name might be;
Nameless yet, but they incline to Call it JONAH, after me!

Then they asked if it wasn't pretty—
If I didn't want a kiss,
(Pray the lie may be forgiven
Which I spoke in saying "yes!")

"Yes it is a perfect beauty,
And I fairly longed to kiss it,
But not being smoothly shaven,
I must make another visit."

Soon the thing began to whimper,
Squirming like a hungry rat;
Thinking I was one too many,
Then I seized my hat and left.

Dreaming, that same night I fancied
That the baby was my own;
I awoke, with terror trembling,
Felt and found I was alone.

Then a while I lay there musing
On my bliss and others' woe,
Then I found the placid slumber
Only bachelors can know.

And to day my soul is thankful
For the perils I've escaped;
Blessed be the watchful angel
Who my destiny hath shaped!

The Old Bachelor and the Baby

A WARNING AND AN EXAMPLE.

Mr. Ellery Corban was an exceedingly nervous man. He came honestly by it, for his mother was nervous before him. Mr. Corban was a bachelor of forty-five, remarkly well preserved, and rather fine looking. He had a portly figure and florid complexion, and a head of dark brown hair which any man might have been excused for feeling proud of. Mr. Corban was very well off. He had never kept house, perhaps he knew that elderly bachelors and widowers were generally fated to marry their housekeepers; and Mr. Corban regarded marriage and the gallows as about the same [illegible] and [illegible] he considered a very unnecessary part of creation. The mystery of their having been allowed an existence he could never solve. He could not help regarding their creation as a grave mistake somewhere. He boarded at Mrs Gregg's, and had made his home there for fifteen years. Mrs. Gregg was as much like a man as she could be, and still be a woman.

One day last summer it became evident to Mr. Corban that he must take a journey west. The interests of his business demanded it; so he put a few things into a valise, said good morning to Mrs. Gregg, and set out to the depot. He was five minutes late, for his necktie had given him a great deal of trouble, and he had been unable to find a pair of stockings which were not destitute of toes. But he had comforted himself with the reflection that as he had boots on, no one would be the wiser in regard to the condition of his toes, and at last he got off. He heard the whistle, and started on the run. If there is anything calculated to put one out of temper, it is having to run to catch the cars; and our hero may be excused if when dropping with perspiration and completely out of breath he rushed into the first car which offered, he was irritated with all the world, himself included.

The car was well filled. In fact, there was only one vacant seat, and that was beside a woman. Corban turned to seek the next car, but was met by the conductor at the door. "No room in there, sir. All full. Anniversary meeting at Parkersburg; there is a seat, sir!" indicating the one beside the woman. Corban was troubled with a touch of the rheumatism in his left knee, and could not stand comfortably—nothing else could have forced him to get so near one of the sex. He stepped up to her and made the stereotyped enquiry:

'This seat engaged?'

'No, sir,' replied a very sweet voice, and Corban saw that the speaker had expressive blue eyes and golden hair.

He took the seat, and the lady drew the bundle she had been partially resting on the cushion into her lap.

'Better let me put your bundle up on the rack?' suggested Mr. Corban.

The lady opened her eyes in indignant amazement, whipped off a layer of flannel from the package, and displayed to the horrified eyes of our bachelor friend, the red, puffy face of a moon-eyed baby.

'Muzzler's little 'tweety sugar darlin!' she exclaimed in the dialect which is perfectly intelligible to all babydom. 'Muzzler won't let the naughty man put the little lammie, lump baby up on the rack!'

The baby struck out menacingly with its fat fists in the direction of Mr. Corban, and gave utterance to a yell of triumph. Mr. Corban broke into a cold perspiration. He had never been so near a baby before in all his life—and a woman, too! It was almost too much for him.

He had a strong mind to stand the remainder of the way, or until somebody vacated a seat; but his knee gave an extra twinkle, and decided him to try and endure the terrible state of things. He took a paper from his pocket and essayed to read; but the baby had launched out in one of those baby refrains, which is like music in the ears of all mothers, and the cooing so confused our bachelor hero that he took no sense of his paper, so he pocketed it with the savage determination to petition the next Congress for women with babies to be kept in a car by themselves.

At the first stopping place he was on the lookout for a seat, and to his joy discovered the gentleman in the next seat making preparation to leave; but before he was fairly out of his seat, an old lady in a green shawl and a poke bonnet had edged into it, and cut off all Mr. Corban's hopes. Of course, she turned around and began at once to talk to the baby.

'Dear little chicken! How old is it marm?'

'Almost eight months,' said the proud mother.

'Well, I declare! what a large child of its age! Why, there was my Enoch, when he was a year he warn't a mite nor grain bigger than that child. But then, Enoch, he had the whooping cough and the measles and the nettle rash, and the collaretta infanticide afore he was eleven months. And I expect them diseases had some effect onto his constitution.'

'I should think so,' replied the baby's mother.

'You look tired, dear,' went on the old lady; 'the baby must be dreadful heavy. Why don't you let his pa take him?' with an expressively reproachful glance at the savage countenance of Mr. Corban.

'I'm not his pa!' grumbled Mr. Corban, pulling his hat a little farther down over his eyes.

'Oh! you ain't? Well, now, that's curus, said the old lady. I should have thought you was for sartin'! The baby is the image of ye—jest the same kind of a nose; and its eyes has got the same expression.'

Expression, indeed! Mr. Corban was boiling over! He had always particularly prided himself on his expression; and here was this ogre comparing him to that dumpling-faced, huckle-berry-eyed baby!

'Well,' said the old lady, slowly, as if she had reached the conclusion after some thought; 'I 'spose as it's likely this is a post-mortem child which means one as is born after the death of his father, and you married its mother rather soon after the husband departed this vale of tears?' Well, that's go' to be dreadful common now. But my Elijah has been dead nigh onto nineteen months, and I hain't begun to think of a second partner. Though Squire Hudson he has been ruther attentive to me lately; and the Squire is left so helpless and comfortable with them six children of his, that I don't know. I hope the Lord will show me my duty, and give me strength to take the Squire for better or for worse, if it's right and best! I don't never want to shirk no duty, marm. When did your husband die, marm?'

'Parkersburg!' screamed the conductor. 'Stop five minutes for refreshments! and change cars for Wallingford, Amsterd and Myrtle Bridge!'

The woman with the baby arose quickly. A thrill of joy went through Mr. Corban. He thought she was at her journey's end. He, too, rose with alacrity.

'Can I assist you any way, madam?' he asked, gallantly.

'Thank you; I will just trouble you to hold baby while I go and get a cup of coffee. I breakfasted early, and need something warm. Be careful and hold his head high; he is subject to the croup.'

And before Corban could utter one word by way of refusal, she had put the baby into his arms, and was rushing off with the crowd.

Our unfortunate hero felt himself growing hot and cold alternatively. He had served two years with credit in the war, and been in a score of battles, but, through it all, he had never experienced such a sinking at the stomach as came over him now. Most of the passengers left the cars; and Corban would have done likewise, but he feared he might lose sight of the baby's mother, and the train would start without him. So, in an agony of terror lest something dreadful should happen, he stood there in the aisle, holding the baby at arms' length, and fixing his frantic gaze on the door through which his deliverer would come.

'All aboard!' called the stentorian voice of a new conductor—and the people rushed in. But the passengers were, most of them, new ones, for there was a junction at Parkersburg; and, worst of all, the baby's mother was not among them! The bell rang; the cars were moving; the door was shut with a bang, and the train was off. Corban waxed desperate.

'Hallo, there!' he called to the conductor. 'Stop! this train can't go on; there's a woman left behind. She went to get a cup of coffee. Stop! I tell you, this instant, sir!'

'What's up?' asked the conductor.

'She's left the baby—'

'Your wife? Oh! never mind. Such things occur frequently. She'll come next train.'

'I tell you to stop! I shall go crazy! And——Oh, Lord! what shall I do with the baby? Say, I'll give you five dollars, ten dollars—twenty—yes, fifty dollars, if you'll back and let me off at Parkersburg.'

'I should have no objection to the money, sir, but I couldn't oblige you if you were one of the Rothschilds!'

And the conductor passed on his way.

'Bless your soul, sir!' said the old lady in the next seat, giving Corban a nudge with her parasol—'you'll suffocate that baby! Don't you see you're holding him with his feet where his head ought to be? He's wrong side up.'

Corban lastly rescued the youngster, which uttered a shrill yell at his treatment.

'You'd ort to be ashamed of yourself!' went on the old lady, indignantly, 'to toss that blessed child round in sich an onhuman way. A man never ought to have no children that don't have no natral feelings toward 'em. Sir, you was a baby once yerself.'

Just then a thin yellow faced woman slipped into the seat in front of Mr. Corban. She was middle aged, but her dress had all the gushingness of sixteen. 'Lovely child!' she exclaimed instantingly.

The baby began to squinnie up its face and flourished its heels and fists.

'Dear me, how forward it is. How old is it, sir?' inquired the spinster, for such she was.

'I can't know!' growled Corban.

'Been a widower long, sir?' queried the lady.

'No. I've never had a wife.'

"Bless me!" cried the lady; 'then she's run away and left you. Dear! dear! how could she leave such a nice man, and such a dear, darling little baby?'

'What's that?' enquired a middle aged gentleman near by, who was evidently a little deaf—'your wife's gone and left you, sir? Just my case, sir, exactly. My poor Jane departed this life last May. I got her the handsomest grave-stone that money could buy. There's an angel on it, with all her wings spread, and then Latin description—Requiescat her eat in pacem. The grave-stone maker said that would be a good epigram; and I consented as she was fond of a cat.'

By this time the baby began to cry lustily, and the whole car sympathized—especially the female passengers.

'It's got the cholera morbus!' said the old lady previously mentioned. 'It'll die for sartin if something hain't done!'

'Die? You don't think so?' cried Corban.

'Dear me!' said the thin faced lady, 'what an inhuman woman its mother was.'

"Take it, my good lady, do!" cried Corban, imploringly; 'I'll give you a hundred dollars to take it.'

'What is all this row about, said a sharp nosed little man, with a newspaper in his hand. 'A child, is it? Fall back gentlemen; and let me look at it. If it should prove to be the one.'

'How? What do you mean?' queried a dozen voices.

'It is! it is! It can be no other!' exclaimed the sharp nosed man excitedly.—How strange that I should chance upon it Listen to this, gentlemen,' and he read from the paper in his hand the notice:

'STOLEN—Supposed to have been stolen from its carriage in Central Park, on the morning of the eighteenth instant, a male child about nine months old. Said child has blue eyes, and rather dark hair; and a remarkably forward and interesting child. Any person who will return him to his afflicted parents, at No. —— Forty-nine street, or give information that will lead to his recovery, shall receive a reward of three hundred dollars.

LEWIS ROSCOE.'

'Well! I never!' exclaimed the old lady. 'It must be the very same baby! This child has got blue eyes and dark hair, and 'pears remarkable forward!'

'Yes, ma'am, unquestionably the very same,' remarked the sharp nosed man, confidently; 'consider it my duty to take possession.'

'Oh take it, do,' cried Corban, imploringly; 'I'll give a hundred dollars to get it of my hands.'

'No doubt you would, my man; but I ain't took in that way. My name is Smithers—Peter Smithers, sir; and I live in Albany. I am a magistrate, sir; and I arrest you for child stealing.'

'I tell you I didn't steal it. She went off after a cup of coffee.'

'Don't trouble yourself to repeat that story again. I understand the case fully,' said Mr Smithers, promptly. 'Conductor, is there a place on the train where this rascal would be any safer than here?'

'We don't run prison vans,' responded that worthy, sullenly.

'Well, gentleman,' said Mr. Smithers blandly, 'you are all men of honor, and have wives and children, or ought to have; and you all have feelings of sympathy, doubtless for the parents of this unfortunate baby and I depend upon you, gentleman, to assist me in guarding him until we reach a station where I can place him in charge of the proper officials. At the next stopping place I will telegraph to Bridewell, and have constables ready to take possession of him the moment we arrive.'

'You shall pay dearly for this!' roared Corban, now fairly infuriated. 'Yes, sir! I'll take the law of you the moment we get any where there is any law! Call me rascal, indeed!'

Just at that moment the sharp signal, 'down breaks' sounded; and in a few moments there was a slight shock, and the train came to a sudden stop.

Everybody rushed out to ascertain the difficulty; and it was found that a wheel of the engine had broken, and the locomotive was partially off the track.

No one was injured; but it would occupy some time to get things so that the next train could run; and, in the meantime, Mr. Corban thought, with rapture, he could make his escape. He formed the plan of dropping the unfortunate baby and fleeing to the woods. In the bustle and confusion it could only be accomplished. But he had reckoned without his host. Mr. Smithers was right at his elbow. He had no notion of allowing that tempting reward to slip through his fingers; and a couple of other gentleman kept guard with him.

And there stood poor Corban holding the whimpering baby, and expostulating, swearing and blustering in a way that made all the ladies decide that he was a monster—and they gave him and the baby a very wide berth.

Suddenly the whistle of of the next train from Parkersburg was heard. A bright hope sprang up in Corban's breast. It was possible the baby's mother might be on board.

He rushed forward, but Mr. Smithers seized his arm and held him back.

'Be quiet, sir!' said he. 'Remember you are under arrest.'

The train had been warned of the detention by the first express, and came to a halt at a little distance behind; and the moment it did so, the door of one of the carriages was burst open, and out leaped the baby's mother.

A cry of joy came form Corban; and with one bound he broke the grasp of Mr. Smithers upon his arm, and rushed towards her.

'Oh! my baby, my precious baby!' screamed she, snatching the child from Corban.—'My darling! My little angel darling!' and she fell to kissing it in a way that set all the ladies round about to pulling out their handkerchiefs and exclaiming: 'Did you ever!'

'God bless you!' cried Corban, enthusiastically. 'I never was so glad to see any mortal being before!'

'Oh! you dear delightful man!' cried she, shaking hands with him. 'I am so much obliged to you for taking care of my little lamb. You see I got behind a moment—the coffee was so dreadful hot.'

Mr. Smithers' face had grown very long. 'Then it must Mr. Louis Roscoe's child?—And it has not been stolen?' he asked dubiously.

'I should rather think not'—replied the mother indignantly. 'It is my child, sir; all I have left of my dear husband who gave up his life at Coal Harbor, two months after baby's birth.'

'I most heartily beg your pardon, sir,' said Mr. Smithers, addressing Mr. Corban, 'I—I—that is, I didn't think—You see—'

'Mind your own business, sir,' said Mr. Corban, shortly; 'and continue minding it for the rest of your life—that is my advice, sir.'

Mr. Corban and Mrs. Brent, for that was the young widow's name, got very friendly and familiar by the time the train was ready to go on; and Mr. Corban took the next seat by her side with a real feeling of delight now. She was going on a visit to some friends in the very city where his business called him; and he obtained permission to call on her and enquire about the baby.

And in due time—I cannot tell how it came about—for there is no accounting for things of this kind—Mr. Corban concluded that he was tired of boarding—Mrs. Gregg ha! becomes so neglectful of her boarders' comfort; so he led Mrs. Brent to the altar, and set up a home of his own, with a wife and baby.

Go to him now and utter one word against women and babies, and you would get shown to the door without ceremony.—Peterson's Magazine for January.

Daniel De Foe on Drink as a Medicine.

In a rarely-read work, called the "Life of Colonel Jack," by the well-known author of "Robinson Crusoe," the following passages occur. The hero Colonel Jack, is giving an account of his third wife:—"I was infinitely satisfied with my wife, who was, indeed, the best humored woman in the world, and a most accomplished, beautiful creature indeed, perfectly well-bred, and had not one ill quality about her; and this happiness continued without the least interruption for about six years. But I at last had a disappointment of the worst sort, even here. She caught cold and grew very sickly. In being so continually ill and out of order, she very unhappily got a habit of drinking cordials and hot liquors. Drink, like the devil, when it gets hold of any one, though but a little, goes on by little and little to their destruction; so in my wife, her stomach being weak and faint, she first took this cordial, then that, till in short she could not live without them, and from a drop to a sup, from a sup to a dram, from a dram to a glass, and so on to two, till at last she took, in short, to what we call drinking. As I likened drink to the devil in its gradual possession of the habits and person, so it is yet more like the devil in its encroachment on us, where it gets hold of our senses. In short, my beautiful, good-humored, modest, well-bred wife grew a beast, a slave to strong liquor, and would be drunk at her own table, nay, in her own closet by herself, till she lost her beauty, her shape, her manners, and at last her virtue. Oh, the power of intemperance! And how it encroaches on the best disposition in the world; how it comes upon us gradually and insensibly, and what dismal effects it works upon our morals, changing the most virtuous, regular, well-instructed, and well-inclined tempers into worse than brutal! Never was a woman more virtuous, sober, modest, and chaste than my wife. She never so much as desired to drink anything strong. It was with the greatest entreaty that I could prevail with her to drink a glass or two of wine, and rarely, if ever, above one or two at a time; even in company she had no inclination to it. Not an immodest word ever came out of her mouth, nor would she suffer it in any one else in her hearing without resentment. But during her illness and weakness her nurse pressed her, whenever she found herself faint and a sinking of her spirits, to take this cordial, and that glass, till it became necessary to keep her alive, and gradually increased to habit, so that it was no longer her physic, but her food. Her appetite, sunk and went quite away, and she ate little or nothing, but she came at last to such a dreadful height, that, as I have said, she would be drunk in her dressing-room before eleven o'clock in the morning, and, in short, at last was never sober. Let any one judge of my case now; I that for six years thought myself the happiest man alive, was now the most miserable, distracted creature. As to my wife, I loved her well and pitied her heartily. I almost locked her up, and set people over her to take care of her, but her health was ruined, and in about a year and a half she died."

During a recent performance of Romeo and Juliet, at Marblehead, Mass. the fair Juliet's question in the soliloquy before taking the sleep draught. "What if this mixture does not work well?" was answered by an urchin in the pit—"Then take a dose of pills." The effect upon the audience can be imagined.

As the authority for the privileges at present enjoyed by the ladies, the following is an ancient Saxon law, of which no record of repeal is found: "Albeit, as often as leape years dothe occure, the women holdeth prerogative over the mene in matters of courtshipe, love, matrimonie, so that when the ladie proposeth it shall not be lawful for mene to say her nae, but shall receive her proposal in all good courtesie."

Why was Goliath astonished when David hit him with a stone? Because such a thing never entered his head before.

DENOMINATIONAL GRANTS.

More than once in the history of the Colony has the subject of grants to denominational colleges attracted the attention of the people. Year after year the subject has received the attention of public men, and several parliamentary debates have testified to the manner in which those grants have been received by the two great parties that existed. The reform party has long protested against them, holding that it is the duty and should be considered so, of each denomination to provide its own youth with such religious instruction as the members of the denomination wish to bestow upon them; and contending that public funds should only be given towards secular education, and that entirely independent of religious connexion. It is almost useless, at the present time, to refer to the question of denominational grants at all, as we understand that J. Sandfield's Government have determined to make no provisions in their estimates for such grants. It is somewhat necessary, however, to discuss those questions in order to settle the public mind on the matter, for the advocates of one side are generally too prone to give only a one side view of the subject debated.

One thing has struck us in the letters that have appeared in our papers, that even in the Review, grants — to Victoria and Queen's Colleges, only— are advocated.— What do those special pleaders intend doing with Regiopolis? Surely the editor does not advocate the destruction of his own denominational—Roman Catholic—College. Or does he really leave it to be inferred that Protestant Colleges deserve public support, but Catholic Colleges do not? The great burden of the song of these advocates of giving from the public chest to Victoria and Queen's Colleges is their being non-sectarian, and yet they speak of "Professors appointed by a Board controlled by the denomination to which they are attached, or under the management of some other religious body." That is under the management of a religious body, and yet not sectarian; a something never heard of until the present discussion commenced. Seeing the untenable position they had drifted into they give it up, and now advocate grants to those colleges because of the moral and religious character of the teaching and supervision of Professors of denominational colleges, and the consequent dangerous teachings and influence of non-denominational institutions. This, however, will not stand the test of experience. A Colenso got into the Church; yes, to be a Bishop! was a famous teacher of youth. Might not such another get into the Professor's chair of our denominational colleges. In a Belfast institution (Presbyterian) about 25 years ago, a certain Professor adopted erroneous views and secretly and cunningly propagated them, until a few years after it was found that many Ministers were completely imbued with his errors, and the result was fearful and bitter contention, both in Presbyteries and Congregations.

The next argument is that the advocates of denominational grants have the influence of ministers on their side. If this affords a just reason for any course of conduct, then in Lower Canada Catholic Schools only should be established, for there the Catholic majority hold that Protestant Schools are but seeds of heresy and irreligion; and to carry out the doctrine of numerical strength let them go to India and Bedhiem should receive government support. Now, we do not for a moment imagine that the friends of denominational education at the public expense would go the full length that their present line of argument would thus lead them, were they in either Lower Canada or India, again, we ask why do they not put in a word for Regiopolis? the principle surely should be extended to every denomination, and the Professors in Regiopolis do just as emphatically declare that their course of instruction is wholly free from religious or sectarian influences, and we can point to one man who received a considerable part of his education at Regiopolis, although both before and after he was attached to the Wesleyan Methodist body. To advocate Regiopolis would arouse the opposition of a numerous class of our fellow citizens; hence the cunning silence on this subject, yet we declare most emphatically, if one denominational college receives public money, why shall not all such colleges, for all classes of our fellow subjects pay their individual quota to such funds.

The next great objection is the danger of sending a young man to Toronto. Most of our readers will see very little difference in sending a child to Toronto and sending one to Kingston or any other town or city. Indeed we have a class amongst us who think it dangerous to send a child to a common school, although he does remain evenings, nights and morning under parental control, unless such common school be under denominational control. But there is also another class of citizens who hold that the only object sought by such separate school advocate is the power to mould the pliant mind of the youth of our country to suit denominational purposes; (this last class are not far astray, perhaps,) and to this end they would destroy our excellent common school system to establish their pet scheme of propogating ignorance, if we may use the term. Gambling, intemperance and bad company are the great causes of the ruin of all the young men who go astray, and who will ensure an effectual guarantee that a young man going to Cobourg or Kingston shall be freed from those vices any more than if he were at Toronto. The argument is a weak one surely and the cause weak indeed that requires such flimsy arguments to uphold it. Instead of quarrelling about denominational education let all the friends of education unite to raise the standard of our Grammar Schools, raising them, if possible, to the position of colleges, where not only a preparatory education shall be afforded, but where the course of the two first years of a university education can be obtained, the only condition being that Grammar School pupils shall be required to pass a yearly examination before a provincial board appointed by the government, and let all public aid be given to such schools or colleges in proportion to the work done or according to the number of pupils who study the prescribed studies, and the number of pupils who pass such board of examiners, and then let those colleges which claim to be non-sectarian come under the same regime and receive aid in the same proportion, according to the number of successful pupils, and let them be under governmental supervision, otherwise, upon no other principle is it reasonable or just to every class of our citizens to afford public aid to any college. Let the state grant liberal support for a sound secular education. Establish one, two, three or more universities, if needed, and let denominations provide for any particular or sectarian education they think their denominations require.

"FAIR PLAY".—We have received a communication from Norwood, signed as above, giving us a little History of the celebrated correspondent "Veritas", and laying some heavy charges of untruthfulness, &c, against him. As this same correspondent once tried to represent as as giving a false report of a meeting in Norwood, we will give the Norwood opinion of "Veritas", as follows:—

"This man 'Veritas', is nothing less than a Medical Doctor Practising in this Riding; he is not doing much for the credit of that honorable body, (medical body, we suppose) being something like the Editor of the Review, rather untruthful. I have been watching the movements of 'Veritas' for some time, and am sorry to say that his communications abound with —— (more than truth, of course) * * * * * It is considered strange that he, professing to be a gentleman, should write such untruthful things to oblige a certain Editor; but then he is so obliging as to write them, and the Editor examines to see are there enough of them; they are then printed, his readers deceived and innocent men slandered. I will watch this 'Veritas', however.

This is a hard picture of the Norwood correspondent "Veritas", and we would have consigned it to the waste basket, but to show what is thought, at home, of the man who accused us, most unjustly, of a false report. The local Supt. was a wonderful bug-bear in his way last fall, yet strange to say he was an aspirant for the office at the last county council meeting. This affords a key to the tone of the Epistles. Perhaps we may hear from "Fair Play" again.

SOIREE AT SWAN'S CORNERS.—The Soiree of the zion church took place on Thursday evening last. Notwithstanding the severity of the day there was a large attendance. The object of the soiree was to enable the Trustees to clear off a debt that remained against the building, and this, we learned, they were enabled to do, leaving a balance on hand of about $10, which it was trusted would be used towards fencing the grounds properly. Financially, therefore, the meeting was successful, but the severe weather kept away several of the speakers who had promised. The choir under the management of Mr. Parnell did much to supply the want, and on the whole the evening was as pleasant and as cheerfully passed as it would have been if worn out with long speeches. At the close Messrs. J. and E. Kindred sung two verses of a hymn in the Manx language, to the great pleasure of those present. After votes of thanks to the choir for the music, and the ladies for the good things provided, all departed.

THE RE-SURVEY.—We have been informed by Mr. Carroll, who has just returned from Toronto, that the bill to legalize the re-survey of Harvey and Burleigh was lost in committee on Saturday last. The Reeve of Burleigh and also of Harvey were present, and had the Hon. Sidney Smith there on the part of the Townships. The committee held that the legality or illegality of the survey rested with the government, and in consequence the whole matter was left in their hands. We can hardly see the justice of the course. We do not see why the old township should pay for the survey of new township. Either the lands surveyed or the government should refund the money to the County.

THE BIBLE SOCIETY.

The 31st annual meeting of the Peterboro Branch was held in the Wesleyan Church on Friday evening last. The attendance was not as large as it should have been, considering the importance of the object and the interesting nature of the meeting. Perhaps never before in Peterboro was there so many really interesting and delightful addresses at a meeting of the kind. Some one suggested the defect in human nature by which familiarity with any thing breeds indifference towards it, as a probable cause for the smallness of the audience. No doubt there is much truth in the observation, at the same time our regard for the good name of our towns people, induces the hope that the stormy weather had something to do with the absence of many who ought to have been present, and who would have had no reason to regret their attendance.

The chair was occupied by Robert Dennistoun, Esq., Q. C., the President; and the Resolutions, four in number, were spoken to by Rev. J. H. Johnson, A. H. Campbell, Esq., S. B. Johnson, Esq., Agent of the Ontario Society, Rev. J. M. Roger, Rev. D. Cantlon, Rev. D. J. McDonnell, Rev. Mr. Stock, Rev. J. Gilmour, and Col. Haultain. The objects and claims of the Bible Society were ably presented in the excellent speeches of all these gentlemen. But we were particularly impressed by the addresses which introduced the first resolution. This resolution was moved in a clear, comprehensive, telling speech, and was seconded in a most admirable manner. Towards the close of the meeting some difference of opinion was good naturedly expressed upon certain passages of Scripture, generally believed to refer to the Church. This digression from the immediate subject in hand is perhaps to be regretted. The more so as it involved a question that could not possibly be discussed intelligently on an occasion of the kind, and it is scarcely prudent in the interests of truth, for any of its advocates to rush at so well a settled matter of interpretation with general and crude propositions. However, let us hope that good may come out of it, and that the "sure word of prophecy" may be more diligently studied. Rome and its errors are clearly set forth there with wonderful accuracy. The great adulteress professing to be a faithful spouse is exhibited in her true character, and if she is "the orthodox of the orthodox" in this doctrine or that, she all the more truly meets the description of her which the prophet gave. It is in her profession of fidelity, and her semblance to truth, that she answers the interpretation of the prophecy concerning her. The position of a Protestant who desires to do his duty in the spreading of Divine Truth is sometimes a difficult one. He has an open Bible, and its precious truths teach him the fatal errors of Romanism. If he possesses the spirit of Christ, he desires to have his fellow-subject of the Church of Rome instructed aright in the liberal, free and glorious gospel; but he finds it hard to induce them to believe that he is really their friend, and that they ought to separate his opposition and hatred of the church that holds them in spiritual bondage, from the love he bears to them individually. In these dark days when truth is assailed on every hand, we cannot be too guarded in our expressions, lest we lend assistance to our enemies. We need the help of all who love the truth to resist the encroachments of error. We require the faithful, plain spoken exposure of her false teachings, not the extenuation or supposed explanation of them. It is not the woman-like part of Christ's character, but the human being Mary, that Rome idolatrously worships; and when the present Pope declared it as his boast, that from his youth he had given her the most unqualified adoration, he uttered what ought to make every Protestant shrink from coquetting in the slightest degree with any of the contaminating dogmas or ritualistic ceremonies of the gross apostacy.

A READER.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—The Editor of the Review has, of late, interested himself very much in the people of the Burleigh Road Settlement, but in a manner that does him little credit and entitles him to less thanks at our hands.—His object is, first—as he has repeatedly done, to insult us; we will not permit him, a petty understrapper, to interfere in our affairs; and secondly, to assail our Reeve, Mr. Carroll. The worthy Doctor is notorious for his insincerity and love of deception, and hence occasionally becomes his own correspondent. His latest effort in this line is his pretended correspondence anent the Burleigh finances. But the style is so truly that of the Doctor that no one can mistake it. The ridiculously ungrammatical style was intended as a slur on our settlers. The trick is too transparent to take. It is well known that a communication reflecting on Mr. Carroll would be very welcome to the columns of the Review, and would, if genuine, be put in a different dress, from that in which the one in question appears, before being allowed space in that journal. In fact, this letter from end to end bears unmistakable evidence of being the production of the wonderful intellect of the worthy Doctor. It is just possible, that with the wisdom of the ostrich, he may have expected to conceal his identity, but, like that foolish bird, when trying to play the cunning there is too much of him exposed. Now, I will suggest to him a much safer disguise, and one in which it will be quite impossible to identify him during the remainder of his existance. It is simply to write his letters in correct English. Rely on it that by adopting this method he may defy detection. Persons conversant with his capabilities and style will not suspect or believe him to be the author of an article written in grammatical language. The style of his "Anstruther" letter is merely an exaggeration of his usual mode of writing and its adept on will only expose his knuckles to a repitition of the hard raps they have so frequently received of late. It is anfold saying that "a burnt child dreads the fire," and it must be very painful to him to undergo re-roasting so frequently. By all means let him use correct language and keep as near the truth as possible and he will be safe depend on it, if he adheres to this advice. The fact is, no one will ever suspect him of telling the truth or of writing correct English. The spirit pervading the bogus letter is so patent that it is hardly necessary to occupy any more space in reference to it. The falsehoods with which it abounds are so glowing as to render contradiction unnecessary. On the day of nomination, when nearly all the settlers on the road were present, Mr. Carroll gave a thorough, plain and complete statement of the financial affairs of the municipality. A statement which was satisfactory to the fullest extent to all present with the exception of the three or four malcontents who had been primed by the worthy Doctor, but who left the meeting completely discomfitted and chop-fallen.—The Doctor is a most reckless coiner of lies; he states that the taxes on each 100 acres amount to five dollars, whereas every ratepayers in the settlement knows that the county and township rates on each lot of 100 acres only amount to $2.25. All the other statements contained in this precious letter are of a piece with the above, and I will but add in conclusion, therefore, that it is possible the Doctor may be shortly taught a lesson on false pretences and perjury that may prove to him a rather serious

Government Grants to Denominational Colleges.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

SIR,—In concluding my last letter, I noticed how sedulously Veritas endeavored to show that Victoria College was not sectarian. While with one breath he denies that there is any affinity between the terms denominational and sectarian, with another he falls in with common sense people, and explains sectarian as synonymous with denominational, e. g. "One of their (the Globe and Leader I take it) favorite statements is that the Government appropriations to those Colleges are constantly being employed in the dissemination of sectarian dogmas, or more plainly in the teaching of the peculiar theological tenets of the denomination under whose supervision the college may happen to be." Now we have here a definition by Veritas himself of what the Globe and Leader mean by sectarian dogmas. But continues Veritas, "On behalf of Victoria College this assertion has been and is still denied." Now, is this last statement true or is it not? My purpose just now is to show from Methodist authority that it is not. In the Pastoral Address of the Canada Conference of 1857, shortly after the Upper Canada Academy, the germ of Victoria College, was opened, occurs this passage:—"It is perhaps hardly necessary for us to remind you of the vast importance of the Upper Canada Academy both as it re-acts the Church and the general interests of the community. The prosperity of this institution especially involves the character of our church, is closely allied with our permanent advancement, and is essential to our exerting that influence over the public mind, which interest and duty alike impel us to obtain and to cherish." About the year 1860 the Conference passed and promulgated the following resolution anent Victoria College: "That we affectionately entreat the members of our congregations to co-operate with us in this systematic and general effort to sustain with increased efficiency one of the most important institutions of our church and country." The Rev. Mr. Scott, appointed by the Conference College agent, in his letters on superior education says: "The accidental alliance of christianity with education has never been the policy of the Wesleyan Conference in Canada. They believe in christian education, and being persuaded that Wesleyan Methodism is a true and efficient exponent of Christianity, they deeply feel that upon them rests the responsibility of sustaining at least one University and College in the fullest sense christian, open to all, but with the distinct proclamation of its Wesleyan type. This course has had the high sanction of the Parent Conference. In 1837 the address of that body had this weighty paragraph, "Your anxiety to promote the religious education of your youth and the noble efforts you have made for the accomplishment of your wishes are highly honorable to you and gratifying to us. We cannot, however, too strongly express our opinion of the absolute necessity of maintaining the strictly religious and Wesleyan character of all you literary institutions." I could quote pages from the letters referred to, to show that Victoria College is sectarian as well as denominational. Says Mr. Scott, I have no sympathy with the senseless war cry of pretenders to "non-sectarian." His aim throughout is to show the denominational or sectarian character of the college as the extracts above abundantly shew, Veritas to the contrary notwithstanding. The writer in the Review pursues an honest course, admits the sectarian character of Queen's College, and argues from the task it performs, in the work of a higher education to the youth of the country, its claims to a share of government support.—Mr. Scott pursues precisely the same course in his letters, and so narrows down the subject to the point:—

Is it right for Government to aid by grants of money Denominational Colleges or not? Many able men have spoken and written upon both sides of this vexed question, and much can be said upon both sides. The recent allusion to it in the Legislature of Ontario, and the altered tone of some of the public press lead to the belief that the Government intends to discontinue the grants, and the sooner the parties concerned prepare for the announcement the better for them. At the secularization of the Clergy Reserves, the Legislature then in the preamble of the Act declared that it is "advisable to do away with all semblance of connection between Church and State," which will justify the proposed measure of governmental aid being withdrawn. While strenuously advocating this course, I do most earnestly desire to see every seat of learning in the country flourish, and would regret to see any go down by the stoppage of the grant. While some seem to anticipate this, I have no fear of any such result. Will 50,000 members of the Wesleyan Church, in Canada, for a moment allow an institution, declared to be a "connexional necessity" to go down because the paltry grant heretofore made by government is withdrawn? Cannot 50,000 members resolve to raise ten cents each annually, and save a valuable institution from the odium of being subsidized by the Government? If a superior education and the "support of Victoria College is essential to the progress and permanency of Wesleyan Methodism in Canada," surely the members of that body, so powerful, and alive to every good work connected with the body, will be equal to the emergency. Mr. Scott says of the College, "It must be upheld by voluntary effort of the body exclusively, if that be the policy of the State." No one for a moment denies the right of the Methodist body sharing in all the privileges and emoluments common to other bodies. It may be well for both Queen and Victoria Colleges to look at the stern decree that has almost gone forth, and prepare for the voluntary support of their respective institutions. If they are worth retaining they can and will be supported. It is only those long used to crutches, having sound limbs, who think they cannot go alone. It is only right and proper in inaugurating the policy of our new Dominion, to top off all the excrescence of state churchism yet remaining amongst us.—When the higher seats of learning are put right, the question of Separate Schools may probably arise for adjustment. Possibly when Government grants are withdrawn the question of the distribution of the Toronto University endowment will be discussed.

Yours, &c. E.

Fearful Picture of Disaffection in Ireland.

An Irish landlord sends to the Pall Mall Gazette the following letter, which he received on the 17th instant from his agent in Ireland. He says he knows no braver man than his correspondent, and that as an agent he was most popular until this Fenian movement commenced, having always a good word for any distressed tenant who deserved consideration. The following is the letter:—

"The new year has commenced with indications of disaffection to a very alarming extent, and, my opinion, matters will not mend until some startling events take place. A conspiracy upon such a matured plan as Fenianism must terminate without much suffering to rich and poor. From my own observation I clearly see that tenant farmers are in expectation of landlord destruction. I apprehend they adopt the belief that rent and fee long must be for them alone, and that non-residents have no right to draw rents from the country they have left. I believe every man of a certain class in the country is a sworn-in-Fenian, either in fear or affection for derivment; therefore I do not think a safe calculation can be made of getting rent in the South of Ireland next spring. I lately distrained a tenant Mr. W.'s property for a year's rent, a resident, and beat my men badly. I prosited at last Quarter Sessions.—The jurors composed of petty shop-keepers, left farmers, and a Fenian head-centre (at liberated from jail. Of course I got satisfaction, and universal delight was infested all through this neighborhood, particularly in C., where rejoicings took place for the downfall of the authority I erstof enjoyed by landlords and agents. My parity has fallen below par, and I am treated with daily insults during my perambulations throughout the country. You had better make arrangements for your payments from other sources than your property in Ireland. I fear we shall have a difficulty in collecting rents next spring; let me beg of you to observe accordingly so far as your expectations from Ireland are concerned. I never felt despondent before, but I believe my life is not safe ——. It is not a place to be dependent on, and I stand alone—all in my employment are Fenians, and I am constantly getting warning to leave the neighborhood. The conspiracy has increased tenfold since last March. We have no militia in the country parts, and the police have orders not to leave their barracks on any pretext whatever. The ridiculous law allowed to a licentious Press has ruined the country. The Irishman, Tipperary Independent, and many other papers, are preaching sedition and extermination of landlords openly. The priests acting a double part, some denouncing Fenianism, and others designating it the regeneration of Ireland's wrong. The people are taught to consider themselves as the legitimate source of power, and punishment increases instead of diminishing the spirit of disaffection. I do not believe there is a home in this country without a Fenian sympathiser in it. My son and myself have information that we are the first in the county to be attacked; and, though I would like to fight hard, what defence can I make in a half-thatched house with no one to stand by me?"

HOLLOWAY'S WORM LOZENGES

ARE A CERTAIN AND SAFE REMEDY for worms in children and adults. As it is a well-known and melancholy fact that one great cause of death among children is from Worms alone, it cannot be too deeply impressed upon the minds of parents the necessity of closely watching their children. By so doing, and understanding the symptoms and true cause of the disease, thousands of children might be saved from early graves. The following are a few of the very numerous symptoms and diseases which are caused by Worms: Deranged appetite, emaciated extremities, offensive breath, frequent picking at the nose, grinding of the teeth during sleep, hardness of the belly, with frequent slimy stools, and sometimes convulsive fits; pain in the head and stomach, unquiet sleep, faintings, trembling coughs, indigestion, low spirits, frightful dreams, and a gradual wasting away of flesh. Holloway's Worm Lozenges are palatable and self-administered to the child drive out the worms thoroughly without pain and completely cleanse the stomach—thereby doing away with the necessity of administering Castor Oil or other unpleasant cathartics.

Each box contains the fac-simile signature of Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, C.W., who are the sole proprietors.

DARLEY'S

Arabian Heave Remedy and Condition Medicine

IS positively superior to any or all other preparations for the cure of Heaves, Coughs, Thick and Broken Wind, and all diseases which affect the Wind of Horses; also, as a Condition Medicine, surpassing everything of the kind; is easy to give, sure to cure, and safe in all cases and at all times, and does not prevent the horse from being worked while using it.

It cleanses the breathing apparatus, by removing from the air-cells the coagulable lymph or that secretion which in Heaves clogs them causing a difficulty in breathing, and by its action on the diseased part, causing the mucous membrane to resume its natural dimensions, thus equalizing the circulation of the blood, and restoring the distended vessels to their natural size; by its use the horse's appetite is improved, all derangements of the digestive organs corrected, softening the skin, and giving to the coat a sleek and shining appearance.
